formed, a Fire broke out in Leith, which burnt down the greateſt part of the Town: the Engliſh playing all the while on them, diſtracted them ſo, that the Souldiers being obliged to be on the Walls, the Fire was not eaſily quenched. Hereupon the Engliſh gave the Aſſault, and were beaten off with ſome loſs: but the Duke of Norfolk ſent a ſupply of 2000 men more, with the aſſurance of a great Army, if it was neceſſary; and charged the Lord Gray, not to quit the Siege till the French were gone. Ships were alſo ſent to lye in the Frith, to block them up by Sea. The French apprehending the total loſs of Scotland, ſent over Monluc Biſhop of Valence to London, to offer to reſtore Calais to the Queen of England, if ſhe would draw her Forces out of Scotland. She gave him a quick Anſwer on the ſudden her ſelf, that ſhe did not value that Fiſh-Town, ſo much as ſhe did the quiet of Britain. But the French deſiring that ſhe would mediate a Peace between them and the Scots, ſhe undertook that, and ſent Secretary Cecil and Dr. Wotton into Scotland to conclude it. As they were on the way, the Queen Regent died in the Caſtle of Edinburgh, on the 10*th* of June. She ſent for ſome of the chief Lords before her death, and deſired to be reconciled to them; and asked them pardon for the Injuries ſhe had done them. She adviſed them to ſend both the French and Engliſh Souldiers out of Scotland; and prayed them to continue in their Obedience to their Queen. She alſo ſent for one of their Preachers, Willock, and diſcourſed with him about her Soul, and many other things, and ſaid unto him, that ſhe truſted to be ſaved only by the Death and Merits of Jeſus Chriſt; and ſo ended her Days: which if ſhe had done a year ſooner, before theſe laſt Paſſages of her Life, ſhe had been the moſt univerſally lamented Queen that had been in any time in Scotland. For ſhe had governed them with great Prudence, Juſtice, and Gentleneſs; and in her own Deportment, and in the order of her Court, ſhe was an Example to the whole Nation: but the Directions ſent to her from France, made her change her Meaſures, break her Word, and engage the Kingdom in War; which rendred her very hateful to the Nation. Yet ſhe was often heard to ſay, that if her Counſels might take place, ſhe doubted not to bring all things again to perfect Tranquillity and Peace.

The Queen Regent of Scotland dies.

The Treaty between England, France, and Scotland, was ſoon after concluded. The French were to be ſent away within Twenty days; an Act of Oblivion was to be confirmed in Parliament; the Injuries done to the Biſhops and Abbots were referred to the Parliament; Strangers and Church-men were no more to be truſted with the chief Offices; and a Parliament was to meet in Auguſt for the confirming of this. During the Queen's abſence the Nation was to be governed by a Council of Twelve: of theſe the Queen was to name ſeven, and the States five: the Queen was neither to make Peace nor War, but by the Advice of the Eſtates, according to the ancient Cuſtom of the Kingdom. The Engliſh were to return, as ſoon as the French were gone: and for the matter of Religion, that was referred to the Parliament: and ſome were to be ſent from thence to the King and Queen, to ſet forth their deſires to them: and the Queen of Scotland was no more to uſe the Arms and Title of England. All theſe Conditions were agreed to on the 8*th* of July; and ſoon after, both the French and Engliſh left the Kingdom.

A Peace is concluded.

In

1559. Reformation is ſetled in Scotland by Parliament.

In Auguſt thereafter the Parliament met, where four Acts paſſed; one for the aboliſhing of the Popes Power. A ſecond, For the repealing of all Laws made in favour of the former Superſtition. A third, For the puniſhing of thoſe that ſaid or heard Maſs. And the fourth was, A Confirmation of the Confeſſion of Faith; which was afterwards ratified and inſerted in the Acts of Parliament, held Anno 1567. It was penned by Knox, and agrees, in almoſt all things, with the Geneva Confeſſion.

Of the whole Temporalty, none but the Earl of Athol, and the Lords Somerville and Borthick diſſented to it: They ſaid, they would believe as their Fathers had done before them. The Spiritual Eſtate ſaid nothing againſt it. The Abbots ſtruck in with the Tyde, upon aſſurance, that their Abbies ſhould be converted to Temporal Lordſhips, and be given to them. Moſt of the Biſhops, ſeeing the Stream ſo ſtrong againſt them, complied likewiſe; and to ſecure themſelves, and enrich their Friends or Baſtards, did dilapidate all the Revenues of the Church, in the ſtrangeſt manner that has ever been known; and yet, for moſt of all theſe Leaſes and Alienations, they procured from Rome Bulls to confirm them; pretending at that Court, that they were neceſſary for making Friends to their Intereſt in Scotland.

Great numbers of theſe Bulls I my ſelf have ſeen and read: So that after all the noiſe that the Church of Rome had made of the Sacrilege in England, they themſelves confirmed a more entire waſte of the Churches Patrimony in Scotland; of which there was ſcarce any thing reſerved for the Clergy. But our Kings have ſince that time, uſed ſuch effectual endeavours there, for the recovery of ſo much as might give a juſt encouragement to the Labours of the Clergy; that univerſally the inferiour Clergy is better provided for in no Nation than in Scotland; for in Glebe and Tythes, every Incumbent is by the Law provided with at leaſt 50 l. Sterling a Year: which in proportion to the cheapneſs of the Country, is equal to twice ſo much in moſt parts of England. But there are not among them ſuch Proviſions for encouraging the more Learned and deſerviug Men, as were neceſſary. When theſe Acts of the Scotiſh Parliament were brought into France to be confirmed, they were rejected with much ſcorn; ſo that the Scots were in fear of a new War. But the King of France dying in the beginning of December, all that Cloud vaniſhed; their Queen being now only Dowager of France, and in very ill terms with her Mother-in-law Queen Katherine de Medici, who hated her, becauſe ſhe had endeavoured to take her Husband out of her hands, and to give him up wholly to the Counſels of her Uncles. So ſhe being ill uſed in France, was forced to return to Scotland, and govern there in ſuch manner, as the Nation was pleaſed to ſubmit to.

Francis the 2d died.

Thus had the Queen of England ſeparated Scotland entirely from the Intereſts of France, and united it to her own: And being engaged in the ſame Cauſe of Religion, ſhe ever after this, had that influence on all Affairs there, that ſhe never received any diſturbance from thence, during all the reſt of her glorious Reign. In which, other Accidents concurred to raiſe her to the greateſt Advantages in deciding Foreign Conteſts that ever this Crown had.

In July after she came to the Crown, Henry the Second of France, was unfortunately wounded in his Eye at a Tilting, the Beaver of his Helmet not being let down; so that he died of it soon after. His Son Francis the Second succeeding, was then in the 16th. Year of his Age, and assumed the Government in his own Name; but put it into the hands of his Mother, the Cardinal of Lorrain, and the Duke of Guise. The Constable was put from the Court, the Princes of the Blood were not regarded, but all things were carried by the Cardinal and his Brother; between whom, and the Queen-Mother, there arose great misunderstandings, which proved fatal to the Queen of Scotland; for she, being much engaged with her Uncles, and having an Ascendant over her Husband, did so divide him from his Mother, that before he died, she had only the shadow of the Government. This she remembred ever after against her Daughter-in-Law, and took no care of her afterwards in all her Miseries. 1559. The Civil Wars of France.

But the Prince of Conde, with the Admiral, and many others, resolving to have the Government in their Hands, engaged some Lawyers to examine the point of the King's Majority: These writ several Books on that Subject, to prove that two and twenty was the soonest that any King had been ever held to be of Age to assume the Government: and that no Strangers, nor Women, might be admitted to it by the Law of France, but that it belonged to the Princes of the Blood, during the King's Minority; who were to manage it by the Advice of the Courts of Parliament, and the three Estates. So that the Design now concerned between these great Lords, to take the King out of their hands who disposed of him, was grounded on their Laws: Yet as this Design was laying all over France, Papists and Protestants concurring in it, it was discovered by a Protestant, who thought himself bound in Conscience to reveal it. Upon this, the Prince of Conde and many others were seized on; and had not the King's Death, in the beginning of December 1560. saved him, the Prince himself, and all the Heads of that Party, had suffered for it.

But upon his Death, Charles the Ninth that succeeded him, being but eleven Years Old, the King of Navarre was declared Regent; and the Queen Mother, who then hated the Cardinal of Lorrain, united herself to him and the Constable, and drew the weak Regent into her Interests. Upon this, some Lawyers examining the Power of the Regent, found that the other Princes of the Blood were to have their share of the Government with him; and that he might be checkt by the Courts of Parliament, and was subject to an Assembly of the three Estates.

In July, the next Year, there was a severe Edict passed against the Protestants, to put down all their Meetings, and banish all their Preachers. The Execution of it was was put into the hands of the Bishops; but the greater part of the Nation would not bear it.

So in January thereafter, another Edict passed, in a great Assembly of the Princes of the Blood, the Privy Counsellors, and eight Courts of Parliament, for the free exercise of that Religion; requiring the Magistrates to punish those who should hinder or disturb their Meetings. Soon after this, the Duke of Guise and his Brother, reconciled themselves to the Queen Mother, and resolved to break that Edict. This was

1559. was begun by the Duke of Vassy, where a Meeting of the Protestants being gathered, his Servants disturbed them; they began with reproachful Words, from these it went to Blows, and throwing of Stones; and by one of them the Duke was wounded: for which his Men took a severe Revenge, for they killed sixty of them, and wounded two hundred, sparing neither Age nor Sex. After this, the Edict was every where broken. Many Lawyers were of Opinion, that the Regent could not do it, and that the People might lawfully follow the next Prince of the Blood in defence of the Edict.

Upon this, his Brother, the Prince of Conde gathered an Army. In the beginning of the War, the King of Navarre was killed at the Siege of Roan; so that, by the Law, the Prince of Conde ought to have succeeded him in the Regency; and thus the Wars that followed after this, could not be called Rebellion; since the Protestants had the Law and the first Prince of the Blood of their side, to whom the Government did of right belong.

Thus began the Civil Wars of France, which lasted above thirty Years; in all which time, the Queen of England, by the Assistance she sent them, sometimes of Men, but for the most part, of Money and Ammunition, did support the Protestant Interest with no great Charge to her self. And by that, she was not only secured from all the Mischief which so powerful a Neighbour could do her, but had almost the half of that Kingdom depending on her.

The Wars of the Netherlands.

The State of the Netherlands afforded the like Advantages in those Provinces; where the King of Spain, finding the Proceedings of the Bishops were not effectual for the Extirpation of Heresie, their Sees being so large, intended to have founded more Bishopricks, and to have set up the Courts of Inquisition in those Parts; and apprehending some opposition from the Natives, he kept Garrisons of Spaniards among them, with many other things, contrary to the Lætus Introitus, that had been agreed to, when he was received to be their Prince.

The People finding all Terms broken with them, and that by this Agreement they were disengaged from their Obedience, if he broke those Conditions, did shake off his Yoke. Upon which followed the Civil Wars of the Netherlands, that lasted likewise above thirty Years. To them the Queen gave assistance; at first more secretly, but afterwards wore openly: and as both they and the French Protestants were assisted with men out of Germany, which were generally led by the brave, but seldom fortunate, Casimir, Brother to the Elector Palatine, so the money that payed them, was for most part furnished from England.

And thus was Queen Elizabeth the Arbiter of all the Neighbouring parts of Christendom. She at home brought the Coin to a true Standard: Navigation prospered; Trade spread, both in the Northern Seas to Arch-Angel, and to the East and West Indies; and in her long Wars with Spain, she was always Victorious. That great Armada, set out with such assurance of Conquest, was, what by the Hand of Heaven in a Storm, what by the unweildiness of their Ships, and the nimbleness of Ours, so shattered and sunk, that the few remainders of it returned with irrecoverable shame and loss to Spain again. She reigned in the Affections of her People, and was admired for her Knowledge

Verus

Vertues, and Wiſdom, by all the World. She always ordered her Councils ſo, that all her Parliaments were ever ready to comply with them; for in every thing ſhe followed the true Intereſt of the Nation. She never asked Subſidies, but when the neceſſity was viſible; and when the Occaſions that made her demand any, vaniſhed, ſhe diſcharged them. 1559.

She was admired even in Rome it ſelf, where Sixtus the fifth uſed to ſpeak of her, and the King of Navarre, as the only Princeſs that underſtood what it was to Govern; and prophanely wiſhed, he might enjoy her but one night, hoping they would beget a New Alexander the Great between them. But if that had been, and the Child had taken after the Father, it would have been more like Alexander the Sixth. Vita de Sixto 5.

Notwithſtanding all the Attempts of Rome againſt her Perſon and Government, ſhe ſtill lived and triumphed. In the firſt ten Years of her Reign, all things were carried with ſuch moderation, that there was no ſtir about Religion. Pope Pius the Fourth, reflecting on the capricious and high Anſwer his mad Predeceſſor had made to her Addreſs, ſent one Parpalia to her, in the ſecond Year of her Reign, to invite her to joyn her ſelf to that See, and he would diſannul the Sentence againſt her Mothers Marriage; confirm the Engliſh Service, and the uſe of the Sacrament in both Kinds. But ſhe ſent the Agent word to ſtay at Bruſſels, and not to come over. The ſame Treatment met Abbot Martinengo, who was ſent the Year after with the like Meſſage. From that Time, all Treaty with Rome was entirely broken off. Pius the Fourth proceeded no further; but his Succeſſor, Pius the Fifth, reſolved to contrive her Death, as he that writ his Life relates. Catena.

The unfortunate Queen of Scotland, upon the Wars in her Country, was driven to ſeek ſhelter in England, where it was at firſt reſolved to uſe her well, and to reſtore her to her Crown and Country; as will appear by two Papers, which for their Curioſity, being Originals, I have put into the Collection. The one is the Advice that Sir Henry Mildmay gave about it: the other is a long Letter written concerning it by the Earl of Leiceſter to the Earl of Suſſex. They were given me by that moſt ingenious and vertuous Gentleman, Mr. Evelyn, who is not ſatisfied to have advanced the knowledge of this Age, by his own moſt uſeful and ſucceſsful Labours, about Planting, and divers other ways, but is ready to contribute every thing in his Power to perfect other Mens Endeavours. Collection Number 12.

But while the Engliſh Council intended to have uſed the Queen of Scotland well, her own officious Friends, by the frequent Plots that were in a Succeſſion of many Years carried on, ſometimes by open Rebellion, as in the North of England, and in Ireland, but more frequently by ſecret Attempts, brought on her the Calamities of a long Imprisonment, and Death in the Concluſion.

Her Death was the greateſt blemiſh of this Reign, being generally cenſured by all the Age, except by Pope Sixtus the Fifth, who was a Man that delighted in cruel Executions, and ſo concluded her to be a happy Woman that had the pleaſure to cut off a Crowned Head. But Queen Elizabeth's own preſervation from the many Deſigns that were Vita de Sixto 5.

1559. against her Life, made it in some sort, if not necessary, yet more excusable in her: especially that unfortunate Queen having her self cherished the Plot of Babington and Ballard, and having set her Hand to the Letters that were written to them about it, though she still denied that, and cast the blame of it on her Secretaries; who (as she said) had gotten her Hand to them without her Knowledge. The Pope had deposed the Queen (as will appear by his Sentence, which I have put in the Collection; Collection Number 13.) and the Queen of Scotland being the next Heir to the Crown, and a zealous Papist, those of that Religion, hoped by destroying the Queen, to set her in her room; which put England in no small disorder, by Associations, and other means that were used for preserving the Queen, and destroying the Popish Interest. The Rebellions and Plots in England and Ireland, were not a little supported by the Assistance of King Philip of Spain, who did all he could to embroil the Queens Affairs at home, though still without Success. But the steps of the Queen's Proceedings both against Papists and Puritans, are so set out by her great and wise Secretary, Sir Francis Walsingham in so clear a manner, that I shall set it down here as a most important piece of History; being written by one of the wisest and most vertuous Ministers that these latter Ages have produced. He wrote it in French to one Monsieur Critoy a French-man, of which I have seen an English Copy, taken (as is said) from the Original.

Walsingham's Letter concerning the Queens proceedings against both Papists and Puritans.

SIR,

'WHereas you desire to be Advertized, touching the proceedings 'here in Ecclesiastical Causes, because you seem to note in them 'some Inconstancy and Variation, as if we inclined sometimes to one 'side, and sometimes to another; and as if that Clemency and Lenity 'were not used of late, that was used in the beginning: all which you 'imputed to your own superficial understanding of the Affairs of this 'State, having, notwithstanding her Majesties doings in singular Reverence, as the real Pledges which she hath given unto the World of her 'Sincerity in Religion, and of her Wisdom in Government well merriteth. I am glad of this Occasion, to impart that little I know in that 'matter unto you, both for your own satisfaction, and to the end you 'may make use thereof, towards any that shall not be so modestly and so 'reasonably minded, as you are. I find therefore her Majesties Proceedings to have been grounded upon two Principles.

'The one, that Consciences are not to be forced, but to be won and 'reduced by force of Truth, with the aid of Time, and use of all good 'means of Instruction and Perswasion.

'The other, that Causes of Consciences when they exceed their 'bounds, and grow to be matter of Faction, loose their Nature, and 'that Sovereign Princes ought distinctly to punish their Practices and 'Contempt, though coloured with the pretence of Conscience and 'Religion.

'According to these Principles, her Majesty at her coming to the 'Crown, utterly disliking the Tyranny of Rome, which had used by 'Terror and Rigour to settle Commandments of Mens Faiths and

'Co

'Conſciences. Though as a Princeſs of great Wiſdom and Magnanimity, 1559.
'ſhe ſuffered but the exerciſe of one Religion; yet her proceedings to'wards the Papiſts, was with great Lenity: expecting the good Effects
'which time might work in them; and therefore her Majeſty revived
'not the Laws made in the 28*th.* and 35*th.* of her Fathers Reign, where-
'by the Oath of Supremacy might have been offered at the King's Plea-
'ſure to any Subject, ſo he kept his Conſcience never ſo modeſtly to
'himſelf, and the refuſal to take the ſame Oath, without further Cir-
'cumſtances was made Treaſon. But contrariwiſe, her Majeſty not 'liking to make Windows into Mens Hearts and ſecret Thoughts, ex'cept the abundance of them did overflow into overt and expreſs Acts,
'or Affirmations, tempered her Law ſo, as it reſtraineth every manifeſt
'diſobedience, in impugning and impeaching, adviſedly and maliciouſly,
'her Majeſties ſupreme Power, maintaining and extolling a Foreign 'Juriſdiction: And as for the Oath, it was altered by her Majeſty into 'a more grateful Form; the hardneſs of the Name and Appellation of 'Supream Head, was removed; and the Penalty of the refuſal thereof,
'turned only to diſablement to take any Promotion, or to exerciſe any 'Charge, and yet of liberty to be reinveſted therein, if any Man ſhould
'accept thereof, during his Life. But after, when Pius Quintus ex-
'communicated her Majeſty, and the Bulls of Excommunication were
'publiſhed in London, whereby her Majeſty was in a ſort proſcribed,
'and that thereupon, as upon a principal Motive or Preparative, fol'lowed the Rebellion in the North; yet becauſe the ill Humours of
'the Realm were by that Rebellion partly purged, and that ſhe feared
'at that time no Foreign Invaſion, and much leſs the Attempt of any
'within the Realm, not back'd by ſome potent Power, and Succour from 'without, ſhe contented her ſelf to make a Law againſt that ſpecial
'caſe of bringing in and publiſhing of any Bulls, or the like Inſtruments;
'Whereunto was added a Prohibition upon pain, not of Treaſon, but
'of an inferior degree of Puniſhment, againſt the bringing of the 'Agnus Dei's, and ſuch other Merchandice of Rome, as are well known
'not to be any eſſential part of the Romiſh Religion, but only to 'be uſed in practice, as Love-Tokens, to inchant and bewitch the 'peoples Affections, from their Allegiance to their natural Soveraign.
'In all other Points, her Majeſty continued her former Lenity: but 'when about the 20*th* Year of her Reign, ſhe had diſcovered in the 'King of Spain, an intention to Invade her Dominions; and that a 'principal part of the Plot, was to prepare a Party within the Realm,
'that might adhere to the Foreigner; and that the Seminaries began
'to bloſſom, and to ſend forth daily, Prieſts, and profeſſed Men, who
'ſhould by Vow taken at Shrift, reconcile her Subjects from their Obe-
'dience; yea, and bind many of them to attempt againſt her Majeſties
'Sacred Perſon; and that, by the Poiſon which they ſpread, the Hu-
'mours of moſt Papiſts were altered, and that they were no more Pa-
'piſts in Conſcience, and of Softneſs, but Papiſts in Faction: Then
'were there new Laws made, for the puniſhment of ſuch as ſhould
'ſubmit themſelves to ſuch Reconcilements, or Renunciation of Obe'dience: And becauſe it was a Treaſon carried in the Clouds, and in 'wonderful ſecrecy, and come ſeldom to light; and that there was no

1559. ‘ preſuſpicion thereof ſo great, as the Recuſancy to come to Divine ‘ Service, becauſe it was ſet down by their Decrees, that to come to ‘ Church before Reconciliation, was to live in Schiſm; but to come to ‘ Church after Reconcilement, was abſolute heretical and damnable.
‘ Therefore there were added Laws containing Puniſhment pecuniary, ‘ videlicet, ſuch as might not enforce Conſciences, but to enfeeble and ‘ impoveriſh the means of thoſe about whom it reſteth indifferent and ‘ ambiguous, whether they were reconciled or not: and when, not-‘ withſtanding all this Proviſion, the Poiſon was diſperſed ſo ſecretly,
‘ as that there was no means to ſtay it, but by reſtraining the Mer‘ chants that brought it in. Then laſtly, There was added a Law, ‘ whereby ſuch ſeditious Prieſts, of new Erection, were exiled; and ‘ thoſe that were at that time in the Land, ſhipped over, and ſo ‘ commanded to keep hence upon pain of Treaſon. This hath been
‘ the proceeding, though intermingled, not only with ſundry Exam‘ ples of her Majeſties Grace towards ſuch as in her Wiſdom ſhe knew
‘ to be Papiſts in Conſcience, and not Faction and Singularity, but al-
‘ ſo with extraordinary mitigation towards the Offenders in the higheſt ‘ Degree, committed by Law, if they would but proteſt, that if in ‘ caſe this Realm ſhould be invaded with a Forreign Army, by the Pope's ‘ Authority, for the Catholick Cauſe, as they term it, they would take ‘ part with her Majeſty, and not adhere to her Enemies.

‘ For the other Party, which have been offenſive to the State, though
‘ in another Degree, which named themſelves Reformers, and we com‘ monly call Puritans, this hath been the proceeding towards them: A ‘ great while, when they enveighed againſt ſuch Abuſes in the Church,
‘ as Pluralities, Non-reſidence, and the like, their Zeal was not condem‘ ned, only their Violence was ſometime cenſured. When they refu‘ ſed the uſe of ſome Ceremonies and Rites, as Superſtitious, they were ‘ tolerated with much connivancy and gentleneſs; yea, when they cal‘ led in queſtion the ſuperiority of Biſhops, and pretended to a Demo‘ cracy into the Church; yet their Propoſitions were here conſidered,
‘ and by contrary Writings debated and diſcuſſed. Yet all this while, it
‘ was perceived that their Courſe was dangerous, and very popular: as ‘ becauſe Papiſtry was odious, therefore it was ever in their Mouths,
‘ that they ſought to purge the Church from the Reliques of Papiſtry;
‘ a thing acceptable to the people, who love ever to run from one ex-
‘ tream to another.

‘ Becauſe multitude of Rogues, and Poverty was an Eye-ſore, and a ‘ diſlike to every Man; therefore they put into the peoples head, that ‘ if Diſcipline were planted, there ſhould be no Vagabonds nor Beg‘ gars, a thing very plauſible: and in like manner they promiſed the ‘ people many of the impoſſible Wonders of their Diſcipline; beſides,
‘ they opened to the people a way to Government, by their Conſiſtory,
‘ and Preſbytery; a thing, though in conſequence no leſs prejudicial to
‘ the Liberties of private men, than to the Soveraignity of Princes; yet
‘ in firſt ſhew very popular. Nevertheleſs this, except it were in ſome ‘ few that entred into extream contempt, was born with, becauſe they ‘ pretended in dutiful manner to make Propoſitions, and to leave it to ‘ the Providence of God, and the Authority of the Magiſtrate.

'But now of late Years, when there iſſued from them that affirmed, the conſent of the Magiſtrate was not to be attended; when under pretence of a Confeſſion, to avoid Slander and Imputations, they combined themſelves by Claſſes and Subſcriptions, when they deſcended into that vile and baſe means of defacing the Government of the Church, by ridiculous Paſquils, when they begun to make many Subjects in doubt to take Oaths, which is one of the Fundamental parts of Juſtice in this Land, and in all Places; when they began both to vaunt of their ſtrength, and number of their Partizans and Followers, and to uſe Cominations that their Cauſe would prevaile, though Uproar and Violence, then it appeared to be no more Zeal, no more Conſcience, but meer Faction and Diviſion: And therefore though the State were compelled to hold ſomewhat a harder hand to reſtrain them than before, yet was it with as great moderation, as the Peace of the State or Church could permit. And therefore, Sir, to conclude, conſider uprightly of theſe Matters, and you ſhall ſee, her Majeſty is no more a Temporizer in Religion: It is not the Succeſs Abroad, nor the Change of Servants here at Home, can alter her; only as the things themſelves alter, ſhe applyed her Religious Wiſdom to Methods correſpondent unto them; ſtill retaining the two Rules before mentioned, in dealing tenderly with Conſciences, and yet in diſcovering Faction from Conſcience, and Softneſs from Singularity. Farewel. 1559.

Your loving Friend,

F. Walſingham.

THUS I have proſecuted what I at firſt undertook, the Progreſs of the Reformation, from its firſt and ſmall beginnings in England, till it came to a compleat ſettlement in the time of this Queen. Of whoſe Reign, if I have adventured to give any Account, it was not intended ſo much for a full Character of her and her Councils, as to ſet out the great and viſible Bleſſings of God that attended on her; the many Preſervations ſhe had, and that by ſuch ſignal Diſcoveries, as both ſav'd her Life and ſecured her Government; and the unuſual happineſs of her whole Reign, which raiſed her to the Eſteem and Envy of that Age, and the Wonder of all Poſterity. It was wonderful indeed, that a Virgin Queen could rule ſuch a Kingdom, for above 44 Years, with ſuch conſtant ſucceſs, in ſo great tranquility at Home, with a vaſt encreaſe of Wealth, and with ſuch Glory abroad. All which may juſtly be eſteemed to have been the Rewards of Heaven, crowning that Reign with ſo much Honour and Triumph, that was begun with the Reformation of Religion.

LONDON, Printed by J. D. for Richard Chiswell. 1683.

The Journal of King EDWARD'S Reign, written with his own Hand.

The Original is in the Cotton Library. Nero C. 10.

THE Year of our Lord 1537, was a Prince born to King Henry the 8*th*, by Jane Seimour then Queen; who within few days after the Birth of her Son, died, and was buried at the Caſtle of Windſor. This Child was Chriſtned by the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, and the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury. Afterwards was brought up till he came to ſix Years old among the Women. At the ſixth Year of his Age he was brought up in Learning by Maſter Doctor Cox, who was after his Almoner, and John Cheeke Maſter of Arts, two well-learned Men, who ſought to bring him up in learning of Tongues, of the Scripture, of Philoſophy, and all Liberal Sciences. Alſo John Bellmaine Frenchman, did teach him the French Language. The tenth Year not yet ended, it was appointed he ſhould be created Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwal, and Count Palatine of Cheſter: At which time, being the Year of our Lord 1547, the ſaid King died of a Dropſie as it was thought. After whoſe Death incontinent came Edward Earl of Hartford, and Sir Anthony Brown Maſter of the Horſe, to convy this Prince to Enfield, where the Earl of Hartford declared to him, and his younger Siſter Elizabeth, the Death of their Father.

Here he begins anew again.

AFter the Death of King Henry the 8*th*, his Son Edward, Prince of Wales, was come to at Hartford, by the Earl of Hartford, and Sir Anthony Brown Maſter of the Horſe; for whom before was made great preparation that he might be created Prince of Wales, and afterward was brought to Enfield, where the Death of his Father was firſt ſhewed him; and the ſame day the Death of his Father was ſhewed in London, where was great lamentation and weeping: and ſuddenly he proclaimed King. The next day, being the of . He was brought to the Tower of London, where he tarried the ſpace of three weeks; and in the mean ſeaſon the Council ſat every day for the performance of the Will, and at length thought beſt that the Earl of Hartford ſhould be made Duke of Somerſet, Sir Thomas Seimour Lord Sudley, the Earl of Eſſex Marqueſs of Northampton, and divers Knights ſhould be made Barons, as the Lord Sheffield, with divers others. Alſo they thought beſt to chuſe the Duke of Somerſet to be Protector of the Realm, and Governour of the King's Perſon during his Minority; to which all the Gentlemen and Lords did agree, becauſe he was the King's Uncle on his Mothers ſide. Alſo in this time the late King was buried at Windſor with much ſolemnity, and the Officers broke their Staves, hurling them into the Grave; but they were reſtored to them again when they came to the Tower. The Lord Liſle was made Earl of Warwick, and the Lord Great Chamberlainſhip was given to him; and the Lord Sudley made Admiral of England: all theſe things were done, the King being in the Tower. Afterwards all things being prepared for the Coronation, the King then being but nine Years old, paſſed through the City of London, as heretofore hath been uſed, and came to the Palace of Weſtminſter; and the next day came into Weſtminſter-Hall. And it was asked the People, Whether they would have him to be their King? Who anſwered; Yea, yea: Then he was crowned King of England, France, and Ireland, by the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, and all the reſt of the Clergy and Nobles; and Anointed, with all ſuch Ceremonies as were accuſtomed, and took his Oath, and gave a General Pardon, and ſo was brought to the Hall to Dinner on Shroveſunday, where he ſat with the Crown on his Head, with the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, and the Lord Protector; and all the Lords ſat at Boards in the Hall beneath, and the Lord Marſhal's Deputy, (for my Lord of Somerſet was Lord-Marſhal) rode about the Hall to make room; then came in Sir John Dimock Champion, and made his Challenge, and ſo the King drank to him, and he had the Cup. At night the King returned to his Palace at Weſtminſter, where there was Juſts and Barriers; and afterward order was taken for all his Servants being with his Father, and being with the Prince, and the Ordinary and Unordinary were appointed. In the mean ſeaſon Sir Andrew Dudley, Brother to my Lord of Warwick, being in the Paunſie, met with the Lion, a principal Ship of Scotland, which thought to take the Paunſie without reſiſtance; but the Paunſie approached her, and ſhe ſhot, but at length they came very near, and then the Paunſie ſhooting off all one ſide, burſt all the overlop of the Lion, and all her Tackling, and at length boarded her and took her; but in the return, by negligence, ſhe was loſt at Harwich-Haven, with almoſt all her Men.

* Should be March.

In the Month of * May died the French King called Francis, and his Son called Henry was proclaimed King. There came alſo out of Scotland an Ambaſſador, but brought nothing to paſs, and an Army was prepared to go into Scotland. Certain Injunctions were ſet forth, which took away divers Ceremonies, and Commiſſions ſent to take down Images, and certain Homilies were ſet forth to be read in the Church. Dr. Smith of Oxford recanted at Pauls certain Opinions of the Maſs, and that Chriſt was not according to the Order of Melchiſedeck. The Lord Seimour of Sudley married the Queen, whoſe Name was Katherine, with which Marriage the Lord Protector was much offended.

There was great preparation made to go into Scotland, and the Lord Protector, the Earl of Warwick, the Lord Dacres, the Lord Gray, and Mr. Brian, went with a great number of Nobles and Gentlemen to Barwick; where the firſt day after his coming, he muſtered all his Company, which were to the number of 13000 Footmen, and 5000 Horſemen. The next day he marched on into Scotland, and ſo paſſed the Peaſe; then he burnt two Caſtles in Scotland, and ſo paſſed a ſtreight of a Bridg, where 300 Scots Light-horſemen ſet upon him behind his, who were diſcomfited. So he paſſed to Muſſelburgh, where the firſt day after he came, he went up to the Hill, and ſaw the Scots, thinking them them, as they were indeed at leaſt 36000 Men; and my Lord of Warwick was almoſt taken, chaſing the Earl of Huntley, by an Ambuſh, but he was reſcued by one Bertivell, with twelve Hagbuttiers on Horſeback, and the Ambuſh ran away.

The 10*th* day of September, the Lord Protector thought to get the Hill, which the Scots ſeeing, paſſed the Bridg over the River of Muſſelburgh, and ſtrove for the higher Ground, and almoſt got it; but our Horſemen ſet upon them, who although they ſtayed them, yet were put to flight, and gathered together again by the Duke of Somerſet, Lord Protector, and the Earl of Warwick, and were ready to give a new Onſet. The Scots being amazed with this, fled their ways, ſome to Edinburgh, ſome to the Sea, and ſome to Dalkeith; and there were ſlain 10000 of them, but of Engliſhmen 51 Horſemen, which were almoſt all Gentlemen, and but one Footman. Priſoners were taken, the Lord Huntley Chancellor of Scotland, and divers other Gentlemen; and ſlain of Lairds 1000. And Mr. Brian, Sadler, and Vane, were made Bannerets.

After this Battel Broughtie-Crag was given to the Engliſhmen, and Hume, and Roxburgh, and Heymouth; which were fortified, and Captains were put in them, and the Lord of Somerſet rewarded with 500 l. Lands. In the mean ſeaſon, Stephen Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter, was, for not receiving the Injunctions, committed to Ward. There was alſo a Parliament called, wherein all Chaunteries were granted to the King, and an extream Law made for Vagabonds, and divers other things. Alſo the Scots beſieged Broughty-Crag, which was defended againſt them all, by Sir Andrew Dudley Knight, and oftentimes their Ordnance was taken and marred.

YEAR II.

A Triumph was, where ſix Gentlemen did challenge all Comers, at Barriers, Juſts, and Tournay; and alſo that they would keep a Fortreſs with thirty, with them againſt an hundred, or under, which was done at Greenwich.

Sir Edward Bellingam being ſent into Ireland Deputy, and Sir Anthony St. Leger revoked, he took O-Canor, and O-Mor, bringing the Lords that rebelled into ſubjection; and O-Canor and O-Mor leaving their Lordſhips, had apiece an 100 l. Penſion.

The Scots beſieged the Town of Haddington, where the Captain, Mr. Willford, every day made iſſues upon them, and ſlew divers of them. The thing was very weak, but for the Men, who did very manfully. Oftentimes Mr. Holcroft and Mr. Palmer, did victual it by force, paſſing through the Enemies; and at laſt the Rhinegrave unawares ſet upon Mr. Palmer, which was there with near a thouſand and five hundred Horſemen, and diſcomfited him, taking him, Mr. Bowes Warden of the Weſt-Marches, and divers other, to the number of 400, and ſlew a few. (Upon St. Peter's day, the Biſhop of Wincheſter was committed to the Tower.) Then they made divers Brags, and they had the like made to them. Then went the Earl of Shrewsbury General of the Army, with 22000 Men, and burnt divers Towns and Fortreſſes; which the Frenchmen and Scots hearing, levied their Siege in the the Mouth of September; in the levying of which, there came one to Tiberio, who as then was in Haddington, and setting forth the weakness of the Town, told him, That all Honour was due to the Defenders, and none to the Assailers; so the Siege being levied, the Earl of Shrewsbury entred it, and victualled, and reinforced it. After his departing by Night, there came into the Outer Court, at Haddington, 2000 Men armed, taking the Townsmen in their Shirts; who yet defended them, with the help of the Watch, and at length, with Ordnance, issued out upon them, and slew a marvellous number, bearing divers Assaults, and at length drove them home, and kept the Town safe.

A Parliament was called, where an Uniform Order of Prayer was instituted, before made by a number of Bishops and learned Men gathered together in Windsor. There was granted a Subsidy, and there was a notable Disputation of the Sacrament in the Parliament-House. Also the Lord Sudley, Admiral of England, was condemned to Death, and died in March ensuing. Sir Thomas Sharington was also condemned for making false Coin, which he himself confessed. Divers also were put in the Tower.

Year III.

Hume-Castle was taken by Night, and Treason, by the Scots. Mr. Wilford, in a Skirmish, was left of his Men, sore hurt and taken. There was a Skirmish at Broughty-Craig, wherein Mr. Lutterell, Captain there, Mr. Dudley, did burn certain Villages, and took Monsieur de Toge Prisoner. The Frenchmen by Night assaulted Boulingberg, and were manfully repulsed, after they had made Faggots with Pitch, Tar, Tallow, Rosin, Powder, and Wildfire, to burn the Ships in the Haven of Bolein, but they were driven away by the Boloners, and their Faggots taken.

In Mr. Bowes place, who was Warden of the West-Marches, was put the Lord Dacres; and in the Lord Gray's place, the Earl of Rutland; who after his coming entred Stotland, and burnt divers Villages, and took much Prey. The People began to rise in Wiltshire, where Sir William Herbert did put them down, over-run, and slew them. Then they rose in Sussex, Hampshire, Kent, Glocestershire, Suffolk, Warwickshire, Essex, Hartfordshire, a piece of Leicestershire, Worcestershire, and Rutlandshire, where by fair persuasions, partly of honest Men among themselves, partly by Gentlemen, they were often appeased; and because certain Commissions were sent down to pluck down Inclosures, they did rise again. The French King perceiving this, caused War to be proclaimed; and hearing that our Ships lay at Jersey, sent a great number of his Galleys, and certain Ships, to surprise our Ships; but they being at anchor, beat the French, that they were fain to retire with the loss of 1000 of their Men.

At the same time the French King passed by Bolein to New-Haven, with his Army, and took Blackness, by Treason, and the Almain Camp; which done, New-Haven surrendred. There were also in a Skirmish, between 300 English Footmen, and 300 French Horsemen, six Noblemen slain. Then the French King came with his Army to Bolein, Bollein, which they seeing, razed Boulingberg; but because of the Plague, he was compelled to retire, and Chastilion was left behind, as Governor of the Army. In the mean season, because there was a rumour that I was Dead, I passed though London.

After that they rose in Oxfordshire, Devonshire, Norfolk, and Yorkshire. To Oxford, the Lord Gray of Wilton was sent with 1500 Horsemen and Footmen; whose coming, with the assembling of the Gentlemen of the Country, did so abash the Rebels, that more than half of them ran their ways, and other that tarried, were some slain, some taken, and some hanged. To Devonshire, the Lord Privy-Seal was sent who with his Band, being but small, lay at Honington, whiles the Rebels besieged Exeter, who did use divers pretty Feats of War, for after divers Skirmishes, when the Gates were burnt, they in the City did continue the Fire till they had made a Rampier within; also after, when they were undermined, and Powder was laid in the Mine, they within drowned the Powder and the Mine, with Water they cast in; which the Lord Privy-Seal having thought to have gone to inforce them a by-way, of which the Rebels having spial, cut all the Trees betwixt St. Mary Outrie and Exeter; for which cause the Lord Privy-Seal burnt that Town, and thought to return home: The Rebels kept a Bridg behind his Back, and so compelled him, with his small Band, to set upon them, which he did, and overcame them, killing 600 of them, and returning home without any loss of Men. Then the Lord Gray, and Spinola, with their Bands, came to him, and afterward Gray, with 200 of Redding, with which Bands he being reinforced, came to raise the Siege at Exeter, for because they had scarcity of Victual; and as he passed from Honington, he came to a little Town of his own, whither came but only two ways, which they had reinforced with two Bullwarks made of Earth, and had put to the defence of the same about 2000 Men; and the rest they had laid, some at a Bridg called Honington-Bridg, partly at a certain Hedg in a High-Way, and the most part at the Siege of Exeter. The Rereward of the Horsemen, of which Travers was Captain, set upon the one Bullwark, the Waward and Battail on the other; Spinola's Band kept them occupied at their Wall: At length Travers drove them into the Town, which the Lord Privy-Seal burnt. Then they ran to a Bridg thereby, from whence being driven, there were in a plain about 900 of them slain.

The next day they were met about other 2000 of them, at the entry of a High-Way, who first desired to talk, and in the mean season fortified themselves; which being perceived, they ran their ways, and that same Night the City of Exeter was delivered of the Siege. After that they gathered at Launston, to whom the Lord Privy-Seal, and Sir Will. Herbert went and overthrew them, taking their chief Heads and executing them. Nevertheless some sailed to Bridgwater, and went about Sedition, but were quickly repressed. Hitherto of Devonshire. At this time the Black Gally was taken. Now to Norfolk; The People suddenly gathered together in Norfolk, and increased to a great number, against whom the Lord Marques of Northampton was sent, with the number of 1060 Horsemen, who winning the Town of Norwich, kept it one day and one night; and the next day in the morning, with the loss of 100 Men, departed out of the Town, among whom the the Lord Sheffield was ſlain. There were taken divers Gentlemen, and Servingmen, to the number of thirty; with which Victory, the Rebels were very glad; but afterward hearing that the Earl of Warwick came againſt them, they began to ſtay upon a ſtrong plot of Ground upon a Hill near to the Town of Norwich, having the Town confederate with them. The Earl of Warwick came with the number of 6000 Foot, and 1500 Horſemen, and entred into the Town of Norwich; which having won it, was ſo weak that he could ſcarcely defend it; and often-times the Rebels came into the Streets, killing divers of his Men, and were repulſed again; yea, and the Townſmen were given to Miſchief themſelves: So having endured their Aſſaults three days, and ſtopped their Victuals, the Rebels were conſtrained, for lack of Meat, to remove; whom the Earl of Warwick followed with 1000 Almains, and his Horſemen, leaving the Engliſh Footmen in the Town, and overcame them in plain Battel, killing 2000 of them, and taking Ket their Captain, who in January following was hang'd at Norwich, and his Head hanged out; Ket's Brother was taken alſo, and puniſhed alike. In the mean ſeaſon Chaſtilion beſieged the Peer of Bolloin made in the Haven, and after long Battery, 20000 ſhot or more, gave aſſault to it, and were manfully repulſed; nevertheleſs they continued the Siege ſtill, and made often Skirmiſhes, and falſe Aſſaults, in which they won not much. Therefore ſeeing they profited little that way, they planted Ordnance againſt the Mouth of the Haven, that no Victual might come to it; which our Men ſeeing, ſet upon them by Night and ſlew divers Frenchmen, and diſmounted many of their Peeces; nevertheleſs the French came another time and planted their Ordnance toward the Sand-ſide of the Sand-Hills, and beat divers Ships of Victuallers at the Entry of the Haven; but yet the Engliſhmen, at the King's adventure, came into the Haven and refreſhed divers times the Town. The Frenchmen ſeeing they could not that way prevail, continued their Battery but ſmally, on which before they had ſpent 1500 Shot in a day, but loaded a Galley with Stones and Gravel, which they let go in the Stream to ſink it; but or e're it ſunk, it came near to one Bank, where the Bulloners took it out, and brought the Stones to reinforce the Peer. Alſo at Guines was a certain Skirmiſh, in which there was about an 100 Frenchmen ſlain, of which ſome were Gentlemen and Noblemen. In the mean ſeaſon in England roſe great Stirs, like to increaſe much if it had not been well foreſeen. The Council, about nineteen of them, were gathered in London, thinking to meet with the Lord Protector, and to make him amend ſome of his Diſorder. He fearing his State, cauſed the Secretary, in my Name, to be ſent to the Lords, to know for what Cauſe they gathered their Powers together; and if they meant to talk with him, that they ſhould come in a peaceable manner. The next morning, being the 6th of October and Saturday, he commanded the Armour to be brought down out of the Armoury of Hampton-Court, about 500 Harneſſes, to Arm both his and My Men, with all the Gates of the Houſe to be Rampeir'd, People to be raiſed: People came abundantly to the Houſe. That night, with all the People, at nine or ten of the Clock of the night, I went to Windſor, and there was Watch and Word kept every night. The Lords ſat in open Places of London, calling for Gentlemen before them, and declaring declaring the Cauſes of Accuſation of the Lord Protector, and cauſed the ſame to be proclaimed. After which time few came to Windſor, but only mine own Men of the Guard, whom the Lords willed, fearing the Rage of the People ſo lately quieted. Then began the Protector to treat by Letters, ſending Sir Philip Hobbey, lately come from his Ambaſſage in Flanders, to ſee to his Family, who brought in his return a Letter to the Protector, very gentle, which he delivered to him, another to Me, another to my Houſe, to declare his Faults, Ambition, Vain-Glory, entring into raſh Wars in my Youth, negligent looking on New-Haven, enriching of himſelf of my Treaſure, following of his own Opinion, and doing all by his own Authority, &c. Which Letters were openly read, and immediately the Lords came to Windſor, took him, and brought him through Holborn to the Tower. Afterward I came to Hampton-Court, where they appointed, by My conſent, ſix Lords of the Council to be Attendant on Me, at leaſt two and four Knights; Lords, the Marqueſs of Northampton, the Earls of Warwick and Arundel, the Lords, Ruſſel, St. John, and Wentworth; Knights, Sir Andr. Dudley, Sir Edw. Rogers, Sir Tho. Darcy, and Sir Tho. Wroth. After I came through London to Weſtminſter. The Lord of Warwick made Admiral of England. Sir Thomas Cheiney ſent to the Emperor for Reſief, which he could not obtain. Maſter Wotton made Secretary. The Lord Protector by his own Agreement and Submiſſion, loſt his Protectorſhip, Treaſurerſhip, Marſhalſhip, all his Moveables, and more, 2000 l. Land, by Act of Parliament. The Earl of Arundel committed to his Houſe, for certain Crimes of ſuſpicion againſt him, as plucking down of Bolts and Locks at Weſtminſter, giving of My Stuff away, &c. and put to Fine of 12000 l. to be paid 1000 l. Yearly; of which he was after relieved.

Alſo Mr. Southwell committed to the Tower for certain Bills of Sedition, written with his Hand, and put to fine of 500 l. Likewiſe Sir Tho. Arundel, and ſix, then committed to the Tower for Conſpiracies in the Weſt Places. A Parliament, where was made a manner to Conſecrate, Prieſts, Biſhops, and Deacons. Mr. Paget ſurrendring his Comptrolerſhip, was made Lord Paget of Beaudeſert, and cited into the Higher Houſe by a Writ of Parliament. Sir Anthony Wingfield, before Vice-chamberlain, made Comptroller. Sir Thomas Darcy made Vice-chamberlain. Guidotty made divers Errands from the Conſtable of France to make Peace with us; upon which were appointed four Commiſſioners to Treat; and they, after long Debatement, made a Treaty as followeth.

18. The Lady Mary, my Sister, came to me at Westminster, where after Salutations, she was called, with my Council, into a Chamber; where was declared how long I had suffered her Mass, in hope of her reconciliation, and how now being no hope, which I perceived by her Letters, except I saw some short amendment I could not bear it. She answered, That her Soul was God's, and her Faith she would not change, nor dissemble her Opinion with contrary doings. It was said, I constrained not her Faith, but willed her not as a King to Rule, but as a Subject to obey; and that her Example might breed too much inconvenience.

19. The Emperor's Ambassador came with a short Message from his Master of War, if I would not suffer his Cousin, the Princess, to use her Mass. To this was no answer given at this time.

20. The Bishops of Canterbury, London, Rochester, did consider, to give license to sin, was Sin; to suffer and wink at it for a time might be born, so all haste possible might be used.

23. The

23. The Council having the Biſhop's Anſwers, ſeeing my Subjects taking their vent in Flanders, might put the whole Realm in danger. The Flemings had Cloth enough for a Year in their hand, and were kept far under the danger of the Papiſts; the 1500 Cinquetales of Powder I had in Flanders, the Harneſs they had for preparation of the Gendarmory, the Goods my Merchants had there at the Woolfleet, decreed to ſend an Ambaſſador to the Emperor, Mr. Wotton, to deny the matter wholly, and perwade the Emperor in it, thinking, by his going, to win ſome time for a preparation of a Mart, convenience of Powder, Harneſs, &c. and for the Surety of the Realm. In the mean ſeaſon to puniſh the Offenders, firſt of my Servants that heard Maſs, next of hers.

24. Sir Anthony Brown ſent to the Fleet for hearing Maſs, with Serjeant Morgan, Sir Clement Smith, which a Year before heard Maſs, chidden.

25. The Ambaſſador of the Emperor came to have his Anſwer, but had none, ſaving that one ſhould go to the Emperor within a month or two to declare the Matter.

First, To have the Dote 12000 Marks a Year, and the Dowry at least 800000 Crowns. The Forfeiture 100000 Crowns at the most if I performed not, and paying that to be delivered; and that this should not impeach the former Covenants with Scotland, with many other Branches.

22. He departed himself in Post.

24. An Earthquake was at Croidon and Blechinglee, and in the most part of Surrey, but no harm was done.

30. Whereas before Commandment was given that 160000 l. should be Coined of three ounces in the Pound fine, for discharge of Debts, and to get some Treasure, to be able to alter all, now was it stopped, saving only 80000 l. to discharge my Debts, and 10000 Mark weight that the Foulcare delivered in the last Exchange, at four ounces in the pound.

31. The Musters deferred till after Midsummer.

June.

2. It was appointed that I should receive the Frenchmen that came hither at Westminster, where was made preparation for the purpose, and four garnish of new Vessels taken out of Church-Stuff, as Miters, and Golden-Missals, and Primers, and Crosses, and Reliques of Plessay.

4. Provision made in Flanders for Silver and Gold Plate, and Chains to be given to these Strangers.

7. A Proclamation set forth, that Exchange, or Re-exchange, should be made under the Punishment set forth in King Henry the Seventh's Time, duly to be executed.

10. Monsieur Mareschal departed from the Court to Bulloigne in Post, and so hither by Water in his Galleys and Foists.

In this Month, and the Month before, was great Business for the City of Parma, which Duke* Horatio had delivered to the French King, for the Pope ascited him, as holding it in capite of him, whereby he could not alienate it without the Pope's Will; but he came not at his Day, for which cause the Pope and Imperialists raised 8000 Men, and took a Castle on the same River side. Also the French King sent Monsieur de Thermes, who had been his General in Scotland, with a great piece of his Gendarmory into Italy, to help Duke Horatio. Furthermore the Turks made great preparation for War, which some feared would at length burst out.

* It should be Octavio.

21. I was elected of the Company of St. Michael in France by the French King and his Order.

23. Agreement made with the Scots for the Borders, between the Commissioners aforesaid, for both the Parties.

In this Month Dragute, a Pirat, escaped (Andrea Doria, who had closed him in a Creek) by force of his Galley-Slaves, that digged another way into the Sea, and took two of Andrea's Galleys that lay far into the Sea.

14. Pardon given to those Irish Lords that would come in before a certain day limited by the Deputy; with Advertiſement to the Deputy to make ſharp War with thoſe that would reſiſt; and alſo ſhould adminiſter my Laws every-where.

18. Becauſe of my Charges in Fortifications at Calais and Berwick ſhould be payed, it was agreed, that beſide the Debt of the Realm 80000 l. there ſhould be 40000 l. coined, three ounces Fine, nine of Allay; and 5000 pound weight ſhould be coined in a Standard of ſeven ounces Fine at the leaſt.

16. I accepted the Order of Monſegnieur Michael by promiſe to the French Ambaſſador.

17. My Lord Marqueſs of Northampton came to Nants with the Commiſſioners, and all thoſe Noblemen and Gentlemen that came over-Sea with him.

20. Upon advertiſement of Scipperus coming, and rigging of certain Ships in Holland; alſo for to ſhew the Frenchmen pleaſure at their coming, all the Navy that lay in Gillingham-water was appointed to be rigged, and furniſhed with Ordnance, and lay in the River of Thames, to the intent, that if Scipperus came afterward, he might be met with, and at leaſt the Frenchmen ſhould ſee the force of my Navy.

22. The Lady Mary ſent Letters to the Council, marvelling at the Impriſonment of Dr. Mallet, her Chaplain, for ſaying of Maſs before her Houſhold, ſeeing it was promiſed the Emperor's Ambaſſador ſhe ſhould not be moleſted in Religion, but that ſhe and her Houſhold ſhould have the Maſs ſaid before them continually.

24. They anſwered, That becauſe of their Duties to King, Country, and Friends, they were compelled to give her anſwer, That they would ſee, not only him, but alſo all other Maſs-Sayers, and breakers of Order, ſtraitly puniſhed. And that as for promiſe they had, they would give none to make her free from the puniſhment of the Law in that behalf.

18. Chaſtilion came to my Lord Marqueſs, and there banqueted him by the way at two times between Nantes and Chaſteau Brian, where the King lay.

15. Mendoza, a Gentleman of the King's Chamber, was ſent to him to conduct him to the Court.

19. My Lord Marqueſs came to Chaſteau Brian, where half a mile from the Caſtle there met him——with an hundred Gentlemen, and brought him to the Court, booted and ſpur'd, to the French King.

20. The French King was inveſted with the Order of the Garter in his Bed-Chamber, where he gave a Chain to the Garter worth 200 l. and his Gown dreſſed with Auglets worth 25 l. The Biſhop of Ely making an Oration, and the Cardinal of Lorrain making him Anſwer. At Afternoon the Lord Marqueſs moved the French King to the Marriage of the Scots Queen to be conſummate, for whoſe hearing he appointed two Commiſſioners.

21. The Cardinal of Lorrain, and of Chaſtilion, the Conſtable, the Duke of Guiſe, &c. were appointed Commiſſioners on the part of France, who abſolutely denied the firſt Motion for the Scotch Queen, ſaying, Both they had taken too much Pains, and ſpent too many Lives in for her. Alſo a concluſion was made for her Marriage to the Dolphin. Then was proponed the Marriage of the Lady Elizabeth, the French King's eldeſt Daughter; to which they did moſt chearfully aſſent. So after they agreed neither Party to be bound in Conſcience nor Honour, till ſhe were twelve Years of Age and upwards. Then they came to the Dote, which was firſt asked 1500000 Scutes of France, at which they made a mock; after for donatio propter nuptias, they agreed that it ſhould be as great as hath been given by the King my Father to any Wife he had.

22. Our Commiſſioners came to 1400000 of Crowns, which they refuſed, then to a Million, which they denied; then to 800000 Crowns, which they ſaid they would not agree to.

23. Then our Commiſſioners asked what they would offer? Firſt they offered 100000 Crowns, then 200000, which they ſaid was the moſt, and more than ever was given. Then followed great Reaſonings, and ſhowing of Precedents, but no nearer they would come.

24. They went forward unto the Penalties of the Parties miſliked, after that the King's Daughter were twelve and upwards, which the French offered 100000, 50000 Crowns; or promiſe, that ſhe ſhould be brought, at her Father's Charge, three months before ſhe were twelve, ſufficiently Jewelled and Stuffed. Then Bonds to be delivered alternatively at London, and at Paris, and ſo forth.

26. The Frenchmen delivered the foreſaid Anſwers written to my Commiſſioners.

July.

1. Whereas certain Flemiſh Ships, twelve Sail in all, ſix tall Men of War, looking for eighteen more Men of War, went to Diep, as it was thought, to take Monſieur le Mareſchal by the way; order was given, that ſix Ships being before prepared, with four Pinnaces and a Brigandine, ſhould go both to conduct him, and alſo to defend, if any thing ſhould be attempted againſt England, by carrying over the Lady Mary.

2. A Brigandine ſent to Diep, to give knowledg to Monſieur le Mareſchal of the Flemings coming; to whom all the Flemings vailed their Bonnet. Alſo the French Ambaſſador was advertiſed; who anſwered, That he thought him ſure enough when he came into our Streams, terming it ſo.

2. There was a Proclamation ſigned for ſhortning of the fall of the Money to that day; in which it ſhould be proclaimed, and deviſed, that it ſhould be in all places of the Realm within one day proclaimed.

3. The Lord Clinton and Cobham was appointed to meet the French at Graveſend, and ſo to convey him to Dureſme-place, where he ſhould lie.

4. I was banqueted by the Lord Clinton at Debtford, where I ſaw the Primroſe and the Mary Willoughby launched.

The Frenchmen landed at Rie, as ſome thought, for fear of the Flemings lying at the Lands-end, chiefly becauſe they ſaw our Ships were let by the Wind that they could not come out.

6. Sir Peter Meutas, at Dover, was commanded to come to Rie to meet Monſieur le Mareſchal, who ſo did; and after he had delivered his Letters, written with Mine own Hand, and made my Recommendations, he took order for Horſes and Carts for Monſieur le Mareſchal, in which he made ſuch Proviſion as was poſſible to be for the ſuddain.

he

7. Monſieur le Mareſchal ſet forth from Rie, and in his Journey Mr. Culpepper, and divers other Gentlemen, and their Men, to the number of 1000 Horſe, well furniſhed, met him, and ſo brought him to Maidſton that Night.

Removing to Weſtminſter.

8. Monſieur le Mareſchal came to Mr. Bakers, where he was very well feaſted and banqueted.

9. The ſame came to my Lord Cobhams to Dinner, and at Night to Graveſend.

Proclamation made that a Teſtourn ſhould go at 9 d. and a Groat at 3 d. in all places of the Realm at once.

At this time came the Sweat into London, which was more vehement than the Old Sweat; for if one took cold, he died within three hours; and if he eſcaped, it held him but nine hours or ten at the moſt: alſo if he ſlept the firſt ſix hours, as he ſhould be very deſirous to do, then he roved, and ſhould die roving.

11. It grew ſo much, for in London the 10*th* day there died 100 in the Liberties, and this day 120; and alſo one of my Gentlemen, another of my Grooms fell ſick and died, that I removed to Hampton-Court with very few with Me.

The ſame night came the Mareſchal, who was ſaluted with all my Ships being in the Thames, fifty and odd, all with ſhot well furniſhed, and ſo with the Ordnance of the Tower. He was met by the Lord Clinton Lord Admiral, with forty Gentlemen, at Graveſend, and ſo brought to Dureſme-place.

13. Becauſe of the Infection at London, he came this day to Richmond, where he lay with a great Band of Gentlemen, at leaſt 400, as it was by divers eſteemed, where that Night he hunted.

14. He came to Me at Hampton-Court at nine of the Clock, being met by the Duke of Somerſet at the Wall-end, and ſo conveyed into Me; where after his Maſters Recommendations and Letters, he went to his Chamber on the Queens-ſide, all hanged with Cloth of Arras, and ſo was the Hall, and all my Lodging. He dined with Me that After Dinner, being brought into an Inner-Chamber, he told Me, he was come, not only for delivery of the Order, but alſo for to declare the great Friendſhip the King his Maſter bore Me; which he deſired I would think to be ſuch to Me as a Father beareth to a Son, or Brother to Brother. And altho' there were divers Perſuaſions, as he thought to diſſuade Me from the King his Maſter's Friendſhip; and witleſs men made divers Rumours, yet he truſted I would not believe them. Furthermore, that as good Miniſters on the Frontiers do great good, ſo ill much harm. For which cauſe he deſired no Innovation ſhould be made on things had been ſo long in controverſy by Hand-ſtrokes, but rather by Commiſſioners talk. I anſwered him, That I thanked him for his Order, and alſo his Love, &c. and I would ſhew like Love in all Points. For Rumors, they were not always to be believed, and that I did ſometime provide for the worſt, but never did any harm upon the hearing. For Miniſters, I ſaid, I would rather appeaſe theſe Controverſies with Words, than do any thing by Force. So after, he was conveyed to Richmond a an. 16.

17. He came to present the Order of Monsieur Michael; whereafter with Ceremonies accustomed, he had put on the Garments, he, and Monsieur Gye likewise of the Order, came one at my right Hand, the other at my left to the Chappel, where, after the Communion celebrated, each of them kissed my Cheek. After that they dined with Me, and talked after Dinner, and saw some Pastime, and so went home again.

18. A Proclamation made against Regratters, and Forestallers, and the words of the Statute recited, with the Punishment of the Offenders. Also Letters were sent to all Officers and Sheriffs for the executing thereof.

19. Another Proclamation made for punishment of them that would blow Rumours of abasing and enhaunsing of the Coin to make things dear withal.

The same night Monsieur le Mareschal St. Andre supped with Me; after Supper saw a dozen Courses, and after I came and made Me ready.

20. The next Morning he came to Me to mine Arraying, and saw my Bed-chamber, and went a hunting with Hounds; and saw me shoot, and saw all my Guards shoot together. He dined with Me, heard Me play on the Lute, Ride; came to Me to my Study; supped with Me, and so departed to Richmond.

19. The Scots sent an Ambassador hither for receiving the Treaty, sealed with the Great Seal of England, which was delivered him. Also I sent for Thomas Chaloner, Clerk of my Council, to have the Seal of them, for Confirmation of the last Treaty at Northampton.

17. This day my Lord Marques and the Commissioners coming to treat of the Marriage, offered by later Instructions 600000 Crowns, after 400000 l. and so departed for an hour. Then seeing they could get no better, came to the French offer of 200000 Crowns, half to be paid at the Marriage, half six months after that.

Then the French agreed that her Dote should be but 10000 Marks of lawful Mony of England.

Thirdly, It was agreed, that if I died, she should not have the Dote, saying, They did that for Friendships-sake without precedent.

19. The Lord Marques having received and delivered again the Treaty sealed, took his leave, and so did all the rest.

At this time was there a bickering at Parma between the French and the Papists, for Monsieur de Thermes, Petro Strozi, and Fontivello, with divers other Gentlemen, to the number of thirty, with 1500 Soldiers, entred Parma; Gonzaga with the Emperor's and Pope's Band, lay near the Town. The French made Sallies, and overcame, slaying the Prince of Macedonia, and the Seignior Baptista the Pope's Nephew.

22. Mr. Sidney made one of the four chief Gentlemen.

23. Monsieur de Mareschal came to Me, declaring the King his Master's well-taking my readiness to this Treaty; and also how much his Master was bent that way. He presented Monsieur Bois Dolphine to be Ambassador here, as my Lord Marques the 19*th* day did present Mr. Pickering.

26. Monsieur le Mareschal dined with Me. After Dinner saw the strength of the English Archers. After he had so done, at his departure

I gave him a Diamond from my Finger, worth, by eſtimation, 150*l.* both for Pains, and alſo for my Memory. Then he took his leave.

27. He came to a Hunting to tell Me the News, and ſhew the Letter his Maſter had ſent him, and doubtleſs of Monſieur Termes and Marignan's Letters, being Ambaſſador with the Emperor.

28. Monſieur le Mareſchal came to Dinner to Hide-Park, where there was a fair Houſe made for him, and he ſaw the Courſing there.

30. He came to the Earl of Warwick's, lay there one Night, and was well received.

Auguſt.

3. Monſieur le Mareſchal departed to Boleign, and had certain of my Ships to conduct him thither.

9. Four and twenty Lords of the Council met at Richmond, to commune of my Siſter Mary's Matter; who at length agreed, That it was not meet to be ſuffered any longer, making thereof an Inſtrument ſigned with their Hands, and ſealed, to be on Record.

11. The Lord Marqueſs, with the moſt part of his Band, came home, and delivered the Treaty Sealed.

12. Letters ſent for Rocheſter, Inglefield, and Walgrave, to come the 13*th* day, but they came not till another Letter was ſent to them the 13*th* day.

14. My Lord Marqueſs's Reward was delivered at Paris, worth 500 l. my Lord of Ely's 200. Mr. Hobbey's 150; the reſt all about one ſcantling.

14. Rocheſter, &c. had commandment neither to hear nor to ſuffer any kind of Service, but the Common and Orders ſet forth at large by Parliament, and had a Letter to my Lady's Houſe from my Council for their Credit, another to her ſelf from Me. Alſo appointed that I ſhould come and ſit at Council when great Matters were debating, or when I would.

This laſt month Monſieur de Termes, with 500 Frenchmen, came to Parma, and entred ſafely; afterward certain iſſued out of the Town, and were overthrown, as Scipiaro, Dandelot, Petro, and others, were taken, and ſome ſlain; after they gave a Skirmiſh, entred the Camp of Gonzaga, and ſpoiled a few Tents, and returned.

15. Sir Robert Dudley and Barnabe ſworn two of the ſix ordinary Gentlemen. The laſt month the Turks Navy won a little Caſtle in Sicily.

17. Inſtructions ſent to Sir James Croſtes for divers purpoſes, whoſe Copy is in the Secretary's Hands. The Teſtourn cried down from 9 d. to 6 d. the Groat from 3 d. to 2 d. the 2 d. to 1 d. the Penny to an Half-penny, the Half-penny to a Farthing, &c.

1. Monſieur Termes and Scipiero overthrew three Enſigns of Horſemen at three times; took one Diſpatch ſent from Don Fernando to the Pope concerning this War; and another from the Pope to Don Fernando; Diſcomfited four Enſigns of Footmen; took the Coun-

Count Camillo of Caſtilion, and ſlew a Captain of the Spaniards.

22. Removing to Windſor.

23. Rocheſter, &c. returned, denying to do openly the Charge of the Lady Mary's Houſe for diſpleaſing her.

26. The Lord Chancellor, Mr. Comptroller, the Secretary Petre, ſent to do the ſame Commiſſion.

27. Mr. Coverdale made Biſhop of Exeter.

28. Rocheſter, &c. ſent to the Fleet.

The Lord Chancellor, &c. did that they were commanded to do to my Siſter and her Houſe.

31. Rocheſter, &c. committed to the Tower.

The Duke of Somerſet taking certain that began a new Conſpiracy for the deſtruction of the Gentlemen at Okingam two days paſt, executed them with Death for their Offence.

29. Certain Pinaces were prepared to ſee that there ſhould be no conveyance over-Sea of the Lady Mary ſecretly done. Alſo appointed that the Lord Chancellor, Lord Chamberlain, the Vice-Chamberlain, and the Secretary Petre ſhould ſee, by all means they could, whether ſhe uſed the Maſs; and if ſhe did that, the Laws ſhould be executed on her Chaplains. Alſo that when I came from this Progreſs to Hampton-Court, or Weſtminſter, both my Siſters ſhould be with Me, till further Order were taken for this purpoſe.

September.

3. The French Ambaſſador came to declare, firſt how the Emperor wronged divers of his Maſter's Subjects and Vaſſals; arreſted alſo his Merchants, and did cloakedly begin War, for he beſieged Mirandula round about with Forces he had made in the French King's Country. Alſo he ſlayed certain French Ships going a fiſhing to the New-found-land. Furthermore he ſet out a dozen of Ships, which bragged they would take the Dowager of Scotland, which thing ſtaied her ſo long at Diep. Whereupon his Maſter had taken the whole Fleet of Antwerp, conveying it to his Country into his Ports, by 20 Ships he had ſet forth under Baron de la Garde. Alſo minded to ſend more help to Piedmont and Mirandula. For this cauſe he deſired that on my Coaſts the Dowager might have ſafe paſſage, and might be ſecured by my Servants at the Sea-Coaſt if any chance ſhould happen.

He was willed to put it in writing; he ſhewed how the Turks Navy, having ſpoiled a piece of Sicily, went to Malta, and there took an Iſle adjacent called Gozo; from thence they went to Tripoly. In Tranſilvania Aſy-Baſſa was Leader of the Army, and had ſpoiled it wholly.

In Hungary the Turks had made a Fort by the Mines to get them. Magdeburg was freſhly victualled, and Duke Maurice came his way, being ſuſpected that he had conſpired with them there.

4. It was anſwered, to the French Ambaſſador, That the Dowager ſhould in all my Ports be defended from Enemies, Tempeſt, and likewiſe alſo Thanks were given for the News.

5. The Emperor's Ambaſſador came to require, That my Siſter Mary's Officers ſhould be reſtored to their Liberty, and ſhe ſhould have her Maſs till the Emperor was certified thereof.

It was anſwered, That I need not to anſwer except I liſt, becauſe he came without Commiſſion, which was ſeen by the ſhortneſs of the time since the committing of her Officers, of which the Emperor could not be advertised. He was willed no more to move these Piques, in which he had been often answered, without Commission. He was answered, That the Emperor was by this time advertised, although the Matter pertained not to him. Also that I had done nothing but according to a King's Office herein, in observing the Laws that were so Godly, and in punishing the Offenders. The Promise to the Emperor was not so made as he pretended, affirmed by Sir Philip Hobbey being at that time their Ambassador.

6. Deliberation touching the Coin. Memorandum, That there were divers Standards nine ounces fine, a few eight ounces fine, as ill as four, because although that was fine, yet a Shilling was reckoned for two Shillings, six ounces, very many four ounces, many also three ounces, 130000 l. now of late. Whereupon agreed that the Testourn being called to six Pence, four with help of six should make ten fine, eight fine with help of nine, being fewer than those of eight, should make ten ounces fine, the two ounces of Allay should quit the Charges of Minting; and those of three-pence, being but few, should be turned to a Standard of four of Farthings, and Half-pence, and Pence, for to serve for the poor People, because the Merchants made no Exchange of it, and the Sum was not great. Also to bear the Charges, for because it was thought that few or none were left of nine ounces fine, eight ounces were naught, and six ounces were two ways devised, one without any craft, the other was not fully six, of which kind was not a few.

9. A Proclamation set forth touchiug the Prices of Cattel, of Hogs, Pigs, Beeves, Oxen, Muttons, Butter, aud Cheese, after a reasonable price, not fully so good cheap as it was when the Coin was at the perfectest, but within a fifth part of it, or thereabouts.

10. I removed to Farnham.

12. A Proclamatiou set forth touching the Coin, That whereas it was so that Men for Gain melted down the Nine-pence Testourn continually, and the Six-pence; also there should no Person in any wise melt it down, upon pain to incur the Penalty of the Laws.

13. A Letter directed to the Lord Treasurer, the Lord Great Master, and the Master of the Horse, to meet at London, for the ordering of my Coin, and the paiment of my Debts; which done, to return, and make report of their Proceedings.

11. War proclaimed in Britain between the Emperor and the French, by these Terms, Charles Roy d' Espaigne, et Duc de Milan, leaving out Emperor.

10. Four Towns taken by the French Souldiers that were the Emperor's in Piedmont Guerra: from Amiens also the Emperor's Country there was spoiled, and 120 Castles or Fortresses taken.

Proclamation made in Paris touching the Bulls, that no Man should go for them to Rome.

Other Ships also taken by Prior de Capua Merchants, to the number of a dozen; Prior de Capua had 32 Gallies.

19. The French Ambassador sent this News also, That the Turk had taken Tripoly.

20. T

20. The Secretary Cecil, and Sir Philip Hobbey, ſent to London to help the Lord Treaſurer, &c. in the Matters of the Biſhops of Chicheſter, Worceſter, and Dureſme, and examination of my Siſters Men.

18. Removing to Windſor.

20. The Lords at London having tried all kinds of Stamping, both of the fineneſs of 9, 8, 6, 4, and 3, proved that without any loſs, but ſufferable, the Coin might be brought to eleven ounces fine: For whereas it was thought before, that the Teſtourn was, through ill Officers and Miniſters, corrupted, it was tried, that it had the valuation juſt by eight ſundry kinds of melting, and 400 l. of Sterling Mony, a Teſtourn being but Six-pence, made 400 l. 11 ounces fine of Mony Sterling.

22. Whereupon they reported the ſame, and then it was concluded that the Teſtourn ſhould be eleven ounces fine, the proportion of the Pences according to the Gold; ſo that five Shillings of Silver ſhould be worth five of Gold.

23. Removing to Oatlands.

24. Agreed that the Stamp of the Shilling and Six-pence ſhould be on one ſide, a King painted to the Shoulders in Parliament-Robes, with a Chain of the Order. Five Shillings of Silver, and half five Shillings, ſhould be a King on Horſe-back, armed with a naked Sword hard to his Breaſt. Alſo that York's Mint, and Throgmorton's in the Tower, ſhould go and work the fine Standard. In the City of York and Canterbury ſhould the ſmall Mony be wrought of a baſer State. Officers for the ſame were appointed.

A piece of Barwick Wall fell, becauſe the Foundation was ſhaken by working of a Bulwark.

28. The Lord Marqueſs of Dorſet grieved much with the diſorder of the Marches toward Scotland, ſurrendered the Wardenſhip thereof to beſtow where I would.

27. The Wardenſhip of the North given to the Earl of Warwick. Removing to Hampton-Court.

28. Commiſſioners appointed for ſitting on the Biſhop of Chicheſter and Worceſter; three Lawyers, and three Civilians.

10. The Imperialiſts took the Suburbs of Heading, and burnt them.

26. The Paſſport of the Dowager of Scotland was made for a longer time, till Chriſtmaſs; and alſo if ſhe were driven, to paſs quietly by Land into Scotland.

20. Monſieur d' Angouleſme was born; and the Duke of Vendoſme had a Son by the Princeſs of Navarr his Wife.

30. The Feaſt of Michaelmaſs was kept by Me in the Robes of the Order.

October.

1. The Commiſſion for the making of five-Shillings, half-five-Shillings, Groats, and Six-pences, eleven ounces fine, and Pence, with Half-pence, and Farthings, four ounces fine, was followed and ſigned.

5. Jarnac came in Poſt for declaration of two things; the one, that the Queen had a third Son of which ſhe was delivered, called Le Duc d' Angouleſme, of which the King prayed Me to be God-father. I anſwered, I was glad of the News, and that I thanked him for that I ſhould be God-father, which was a token of good Will he bare me. Alſo that I would diſpatch for the accompliſhment thereof, the Lord Clinton, the Lord Admiral of England. He ſaid, he came alſo to tell a ſecond Point of the good Succeſs of his Maſters Wars; He told how the laſt month in Shampaign, beſide Sedan, 1000 Horſe Imperialiſts, with divers Hungarians, Martin Vanroſſy being their Captain and Leader, entred the Country; and the Alarm came, the Skirmiſh began ſo hot, that the French Horſe, about two or three hundred Men of Arms, came out and took Vanroſſy's Brother, and ſlew divers. Alſo how in Piedmont, ſince the taking of the laſt four Towns, three other were taken, Monrechia, Saluges, and the Town of Burges. The Turks had come to Naples, and ſpoiled the Country, and taken Oſtium in the Mouth of Tyberis. Alſo in Sicily he had taken a good Haven and a Town.

6. Jarnac departed, having lyen in the Court under my Lodging. The Night before the Biſhops of Worceſter and Chicheſter were depoſed for Contempts.

7. There were appointed to go with the Lord Admiral, Mr. Nevil, Mr. Barnabie, Gentlemen of the Chamber; Sir William Stafford, Sir Adrian Poinings, Sir John Norton, Sir John Teri, Knights; and Mr. Brook.

8. Letters directed to the Captains of Gandarms, that they ſhould muſter the 8*th* of November, being the Sunday after Hallow-Eve day.

11. Henry Marqueſs of Dorſet, created Duke of Suffolk; John Earl of Warwick, created Duke of Northumberland; William Earl of Wiltſhire, created Marqueſs of Wincheſter; Sir William Herbert, created Earl of Pembrook, and Lord of Cardiff; Mr. Sidney, Mr. Neal, Mr. Cheek, all three of the Privy-Chamber, made Knights; alſo Mr. Cecil one of the two Secretaries.

13. Proclamation ſigned touching the calling in of Teſtourns and Groats, that they that liſt might come to the Mint and have fine Silver of Twelve-pence for two Teſtourns.

3. Prior de Capua departed the French King's Service, and went to his Order of Knights in Malta, partly for diſpleaſure to the Count Villars the Conſtable's Brother-in-Law, partly for that Malta was aſſailed often by the Turks.

7. Sir Thomas Palmer came to the Earl of Warwick, ſince that time Duke of Northumberland, to deliver him his Chain, being a very fair one (for every Link weighed an ounce) to be delivered to Jarnac, and ſo to receive as much; whereupon in my Lords Garden he declared a Conſpiracy, How at St. George's day laſt, my Lord of Somerſet, who then was going to the North, if the Maſter of the Horſe, Sir William Herbert, had not aſſured him on his Honour that he ſhould have no hurt, went to raiſe the People, and the Lord Gray went before to know who were his Friends. Afterward a Device was made to call the Earl of Warwick to a Banquet, with the Marqueſs of Northampton, and divers others, and to cut off their Heads. Alſo he found a bare Company about them by the way to ſet upon them.

11. He declared alſo, that Mr. Vane had 2000 Men in readineſs; Sir Thomas Arundel had aſſured my Lord, that the Tower was ſafe; Mr. Partridge ſhould raiſe London, and take the Great Seal with the Apprentices of London; Seymour and Hammond ſhould watch upon upon him, and all the Horſe of the Gandarms ſhould be ſlain.

13. Removing to Weſtminſter, becauſe it was thought this Matter might eaſilier and ſurelier be diſpatched there, and likewiſe all other.

14. The Duke ſent for the Secretary Cecil to tell him he ſuſpected ſome ill. Mr. Cecil anſwered, That if he were not Guilty, he might be of good courage; if he were, he had nothing to ſay, but to lament him. Whereupon the Duke ſent him a Letter of Defiance, and called Palmer, who after denial made of his Declaration, was let go.

16. This morning none was at Weſtminſter of the Conſpirators. The firſt was the Duke, who came later than he was wont of himſelf. After Dinner he was apprehended. Sir Thomas Palmer on the Tarras walking there, Hammond paſſing by Mr. Vice-chamberlain's Door, was called in by John Piers to make a Match at Shooting, and ſo taken. Nudegates was called for as from my Lord his Maſter, and taken; likewiſe were John Seimour and David Seimour. Arundel alſo was taken, and the Lord Gray coming out of the Country. Vane upon two ſendings of my Lord in the Morning, fled at the firſt ſending; he ſaid, My Lord was not ſtout, and if he could get home, he cared for none of them all he was ſo ſtrong. But after he was found by John Piers in a Stable of his Mans at Lambeth under the Straw. Theſe went with the Duke to the Tower this Night, ſaving Palmer, Arundel, and Vane, who were kept in Chambers here apart.

17. The Dutches, Crane and his Wife, with the Chamber-keeper, were ſent to the Tower for deviſing theſe Treaſons. James Wingfield alſo for caſting of Bills ſeditiouſly; alſo Mr. Partridge was attaqued, and Sir James Holcroſt.

18. Mr. Baniſter and Mr. Vaughan were attaqued and ſent to the Tower, and ſo was Mr. Stanhope.

19. Sir Thomas Palmer confeſſed that the Gandarms, on the Muſter-day, ſhould be aſſaulted by 2000 Footmen of Mr. Vane's, and my Lord's hundred Horſe; beſides his Friends which ſtood by, and the idle People which took his Part. If he were overthrown, he would run through London, and cry, Liberty, Liberty, to raiſe the Apprentices, and R; if he could, he would go the Iſle of Wight, or to Pool.

22. The Dowager of Scotland was by Tempeſt driven to Land at Portſmouth, and ſo ſhe ſent word ſhe would take the benefit of the ſafe Conduct to go by Land, and to ſee Me.

23. She came from Portſmouth to Mr. Whites Houſe.

24. The Lords ſat in the Star-Chamber, and there declared the Matters and Accuſations laid againſt the Duke, meaning to ſtay the minds of the People.

25. Certain German Princes, in the beginning of this Month, deſired Aid in Cauſe of Religion 400000 Dollars, if they ſhould be driven to make ſhift by Neceſſity; and offered the like alſo, if I entred into any War for them; whereupon I called the Lords, and conſidered, as appeareth by a Scroll in the Board at Weſtminſter, and thereupon appointed that the Secretary Petre, and Sir William Cecil another Secretary, ſhould talk with the Meſſenger to know the Matter preciſely, and the Names of thoſe would enter the Confederacy.

28. The Dowager came to Sir Richard Cotton's Houſe.

29. She came from Sir Richard Cotton's to the Earl of Arundel to Dinner, and brought to Mr. Brown's Houſe, where met her the Gentlemen of Suſſex.

30. She came and was conveied by the ſame Gentlemen to Guilford, where the Lord William Howard, and the Gentlemen of Surrey met her.

All this month the Frenchmen continued ſpoiling of the Emperor's Frontiers, and in a Skirmiſh at Aſt they ſlew 100 Spaniards.

31. A Letter directed to Sir Arthur Darcy to take the Charge of the Tower, and to diſcharge Sir John Markham upon this, that without making any of the Council privy, he ſuffered the Duke to walk abroad, and certain Letters to be ſent and anſwered between David Seimor and Mrs. Poinings, with other divers Suſpicions.

17. There were Letters ſent to all Emperors, Kings, Ambaſſadors, Noblemen, Men, and Chief Men, into Countries, of the late Conſpiracy.

31. She came to Hampton-Court, conveyed by the ſame Lords and Gentlemen aforeſaid; and two miles and an half from thence, in a Valley, there met her the Lord Marqueſs of Northampton, accompanied with the Earl of Wiltſhire, Son and Heir to the Lord High Treſurer, Marqueſs of Wincheſter; the Lord Fitzwater, Son to the Earl of Suſſex; The Lord Evers, the Lord Bray, the Lord Robert Dudley, the Lord Garet, Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, Sir Edward Rogers, and divers other Gentlemen, beſides all the Gentlemen Penſioners, Men of Arms and Uſhers, Sewers and Carvers, to the number of 120 Gentlemen, and ſo ſhe was brought to Hampton-Court. At the Gate thereof met her the Lady Marqueſs of Northampton, the Counteſs of Pembroke, and divers other Ladies and Gentlewomen, to the number of forty; and ſo ſhe was brought to her Lodging on the Queens-ſide, which was all hanged with Arras, and ſo was the Hall, and all the other Lodgings of Mine in the Houſe very finely dreſſed; and for this Night and the next Day, all was ſpent in Dancing and Paſtime, as though it were a Court, and great preſence of Gentlemen reſorted thither.

26. Letters were written, for becauſe of this Buſineſs, to defer the Muſters of Gendarmory till the——day of December.

November.

1. The Dowager peruſed the Houſe of Hampton-Court, and ſaw ſome courſing of Deer.

2. She came to the Biſhop's Palace at London, and there ſhe lay, and all her Train lodged about her.

3. The Duke of Suffolk, the Earl of Warwick, Wiltſhire, and many other Lords and Gentlemen were ſent to her to welcome her, and to ſay, on My behalf, That if ſhe lacked any thing ſhe ſhould have it for her better Furniture; and alſo I would willingly ſee her the day following.

The

The 26th of October.

Crane confessed the most part, even as Palmer did before, and more also, how that the place where the Nobles should have been banqueted, and their Heads striken off, was the Lord Paget's House, and how the Earl of Arundel knew of the Matter as well as he, by Stanhop who was a Messenger between them; also some part, how he went to London to get Friends, once in August last, feigning himself sick. Hammond also confessed the Watch he kept in his Chamber at Night. Bren also confessed much of this Matter. The Lord Strange confessed how the Duke willed him to stir me to marry his third Daughter, the Lady Jane, and willed him to be his Spie in all Matters of my Doings and Sayings, and to know when some of my Council spoke secretly with Me; this he confessed of himself.

November.

4. The Duke of Suffolk, the Lord Fitzwater, the Lord Bray, and divers other Lords and Gentlemen, accompanied with his Wife the Lady Francis, the Lady Margaret, the Dutchesses of Richmond and of Northumberland, the Lady Jane Daughter to the Duke of Suffolk; the Marquess of Northampton and Winchester; the Countesses of Arundel, Bedford, Huntington, and Rutland; with 100 other Ladies and Gentlewomen went to her, and brought her through London to Westminster. At the Gate there received her the Duke of Northumberland, Great Master, and the Treasurer, and Comptroller, and the Earl of Pembroke, with all the Sewers, and Carvers, and Cup-bearers, to the number of thirty. In the Hall I met her, with all the rest of the Lords of my Council, as the Lord Treasurer, the Marquess of Northampton, &c. and from the outer-Gate up to the Presence-Chamber, on both sides, stood the Guard. The Court, the Hall, and the Stairs, were full of Servingmen; the Presence-Chamber, Great-Chamber, and her Presence-Chamber, of Gentlemen. And so having brought her to her Chamber, I retired to Mine. I went to her to Dinner; she dined under the same Cloth of State, at my left Hand; at her rereward dined my Cousin Francis, and my Cousin Margaret; at Mine sat the French Ambassador. We were served by two Services, two Sewers, Cup-bearers, Carvers, and Gentlemen. Her Master Hostell came before her Service, and my Officers before Mine. There were two Cup-boards, one of Gold four Stages high, another of massy Silver six Stages: In her great Chamber dined, at three Boards, the Ladies only. After Dinner, when she had heard some Musick, I brought her to the Hall, and so she went away.

5. The Duke of Northumberland, the Lord Treasurer, the Lord Marquess of Northampton, the Lord Privy-Seal, and divers others, went to see her, and to deliver a Ring with a Diamond, and two Nags, for a Token from Me.

6. The Duke of Northumberland, with his Band of an hundred, of which forty were in Black-Velvet, white and black Sleeves, sixty in Cloth. The Earl of Pembrook with his Band, and fifty more. The Earl of Wiltshire, with 58 of his Father's Band, all the Pensioners, Men of Arms, and the Country, with divers Ladies, as my Cousin Margaret, the Dutchesses of Richmond and Northumberland, brought the Queen to Shoreditch, through Cheap-side and Cornhill; and there met her her Gentlemen of Middlesex an 100 Horse, and so she was conveyed out of the Realm, met in every Shire with Gentlemen.

8. The Earl of Arundel committed to the Tower, with Mr. Stroud and St. Alban his Men, because Crane did more and more confess of him.

7. A Frenchman was sent again into France, to be delivered again to the eight Frenchmen at the Borders, because of a Murder he did at Diep, and thereupon he fled hither.

14. Answer was given to the Germans, which did require 400000 Dollars, if need so required, for maintenance of Religion.

First, That I was very well inclined to make Peace, Amity, or League with them I knew to be of mine Religion; for because this Messenger was sent only to know my Inclination and Will to enter, and not with full Resolution of any Matters.

Secondly, I would know whether they could get unto them any such strength of other Princes as were able to maintain the War, and to do the Reciprogue to Me if need should require; and therefore willed those three Princes, Duke Maurice of Saxon, the Duke of Mecklenburgh, and the Marquess John of Brandenburgh, from which he was sent, to open the Matter to the Duke of Prussia, and to all Princes about them, and somewhat to get the good-will of Hamburgh, Lubeck, Bremen, &c. shewing them an inkling of the Matter.

Thirdly, I would have the Matter of Religion made more plain, lest when War should be made for other Quarrels, they should say it were Religion.

Fourthly, He should come with more ample Commission from the same States to talk of the sum of Mony, and other Appurtenances. The Answer was given, lest if I assented wholly at the first, they would declare mine Intent to the Stadts and whole Senates, and so to come abroad, whereby I should run into danger of breaking the League with the Emperor.

16. The Lord Admiral took his leave to go into France for Christening of the French King's Son.

18. Fossey, Secretary to the Duke Maurice, who was here for matter above-specified.

20. A Proclamation appointed to go forth, for that there were ord before this time, that set prices of Beef, Oxen, and Mutton, which was meant to continue but to November; whenas the Parliament should have been to abbrogate that, and to appoint certain Commissioners to cause the Graziers to bring to the Market, and to sell at prices reasonable. And that certain Overseers should be besides to certify the Justices doings.

23. The Lord Treasurer appointed High-Steward for the Arraignment of the Duke of Somerset.

At this time Duke Maurice began to show himself a Friend to the Protestants, who before that time had appeared their Enemy.

21. The foresaid Proclamation proclaimed.

17. The Earl of Warwick, Sir Henry Sidney, Sir Henry Neal, and Sir Henry Yates, did challenge all Commers at Tilt the 3*d* of January, and at Tournay the 6*th* of January; and this Challenge was proclaimed

28. No

28. News came that Maximilian was coming out of Spain, nine of his Galleys with his Stuff, and 120 Gennets, and his Treasure, was taken by the French.

24. The Lord Admiral entred France, and came to Buloign.

26. The Captain of Portsmouth had word and commandment to bring the Model of the Castle and Place, to the intent it might be fortified, because Baron de la Gard had seen it, having an Engineer with him, and as it was thought had the Plot of it.

30. 22 Peers and Nobles, besides the Council, heard Sir Thomas Palmer, Mr. Hammond, Mr. Crane, and Nudigate, swear that their Confessions were true; and they did say, that that was said without any kind of Compulsion, Force, Envy, or Displeasure, but as favourably to the Duke as they could swear to with safe Consciences.

24. The Lord Admiral came to Paris.

December.

1. The Duke of Somerset came to his Trial at Westminster-Hall; The Lord-Treasurer sat as High-Steward of England, under the Cloth of State, on a Bench between two Posts, three degrees high. All the Lords to the number of 26, viz.

Dukes.	Huntingdon.	Evers.
	Rutland.	Latimer.
Marquess.	Pembrook.	Wentworth.
	Vis. Hereford.	Darcy.
	Barons.	Windsor.
Bedford.	Wharton.

These sat a degree under, and heard the Matter debated.

First, After the Indictments were read, five in number, the Learned Counsel laid to my Lord of Somerset, Palmer's Confession. To which he answered, That he never minded to raise the North, and declared all the ill he could devise of Palmer, but he was afraid for Bruits, and that moved him to send to Sir William Herbert. Replied it was again, that the worse Palmer was, the more he served his purpose. For the Banquet, he swore it was untrue, and required more Witnesses. Whence Crane's Confession was read, He would have had him come Face to Face. For London, he meant nothing for hurt of any Lord but for his own Defence. For the Gendarmoury, it were but a mad matter for him to enterprise with his 100 against 900. For having Men in his Chamber at Greenwich, confessed by Partridg, it seemed he meant no harm, because when he could have done harm he did it not. My Lord Strange's Confession, he swore it was untrue, and the Lord Strange took his Oath it was true. Nudigate's, Hammond's, and Alexander Seimour's Confeſſions he denied, becauſe they were his Men.

The Lawyers rehearſed, how to raiſe Men at his Houſe for an ill Intent, as to kill the Duke of Northumberland, was Treaſon, by an Act, Anno tertio of my Reign, againſt Unlawful Aſſemblies, for to deviſe the Death of the Lords was Felony. To mind reſiſting his Attachment was Felony; To Raiſe London was Treaſon, and to Aſſault the Lords was Felony. He anſwered, He did not intend to raiſe London, and ſwore, that the Witneſſes were not there. His aſſembling of Men was but for his own defence. He did not determine to kill the Duke of Northumberland, the Marqueſs, &c. but ſpoke of it, and determined after the contrary, and yet ſeemed to confeſs he went about their Death.

The Lords went together. The Duke of Northumberland would not agree that any ſearching of his Death ſhould be Treaſon. So the Lords acquitted him of High-Treaſon, and condemned him of Treaſon Felonious, and ſo he was adjudged to be hang'd.

He gave thanks to the Lords for their open Trial, and cried Mercy of the Duke of Northumberland, the Marqueſs of Northampton, and the Earl of Pembrook, for his ill-meaning againſt them, and made ſuit for his Life, Wife, Children, Servants, and Debts, and ſo departed without the Ax of the Tower. The People not knowing the Matter ſhouted half a dozen of times ſo loud, that from the Hall-Door it was heard at Charing-Croſs plainly, and rumors went that he was quit of all.

2. The Peace concluded by the Lord Marqueſs, was ratified by me before the Ambaſſador, and delivered to him Signed and Sealed.

3. The Duke told certain Lords that were in the Tower, that he had hired Bertivill to kill them; which thing Bertivill examined on, confeſſed, and ſo did Hammond that he knew of it.

4. I ſaw the Muſters of the new Band-men of Arms; 100 of my Lord Treaſurers; 100 of Northumberland, 100 Northampton, 50 Huntingtoun, 50 Rutland, 120 of Pembrook, 50 Darcy, 50 Cobham, 100 Sir Thomas Cheyney, and 180 of the Penſioners and their Bands, with the old Men of Arms, all well-armed Men; ſome with Feathers, Staves, and Penſils of their Colours; ſome with Sleeves and half-Coats; ſome with Bards and Staves, &c. The Horſes all fair and great, the worſt would not have been given for leſs than 20 l. there was none under fourteen handful and an half the moſt part, and almoſt all Horſes with their Guider going before them. They paſſed twice about St. James's Field, and compaſſed it round, and ſo departed.

15. Then were certain Devices for Laws delivered to my Learned Council to Pen, as by a Schedule appeareth.

18. It was appointed I ſhould have ſix Chaplains ordinary, of which two ever to be preſent, and four always abſent in preaching: one Year two in Wales, two in Lancaſhire and Darby; next Year two in the Marches of Scotland, two in York-ſhire; the third Year, two in Derby-ſhire, two in Hampſhire; fourth Year, two in Norfolk and Eſſex, and two in Kent and Suſſex, &c. Theſe ſix to be Bill, Harle, Perne, Grindall, Bradford *.

*The other name daſht.

10. Sir Philip Hobbey departed with ſomewhat more Crowns than came to 53500 and odd Livers, and had authority to borrow, in my Name, of Lazarus Tuker 10000 l. Flemiſh, at 7 per Cent. for ſix months, to make up the Pay, and to employ that that was in Bullion, to bring over with him; alſo to carry 3000 Merks weight upon a Licence the Emperor granted the Scheitz which they did give me. After that to depart to Bruges, where the Regent lay, and there to declare to her the Griefs of my Subjects.

11. There was delivered of Armour, by John Greſham Merchant, 1100 pair of Corſlets and Horſemen-harneſſes, very fair.

14. It was appointed that the Jeſus of Lubeck, a Ship of 800 Tun, and the Mary Gouſton of 600 Tun, ſhould be let out for a Voyage to Merchantmen for a 1000 l. they at the Voyage to Levant-end to anſwer the Tackling, the Ship, the Ordnance, Munition, and to leave it in that caſe they took it. Certain others of the worſt of my Ships were appointed to be ſold.

9. Proclamation was made at Paris, that the Bands of the Dolphine, the Duke of Vendoſme, the Count d' Anguien, the Conſtable of France, the Duke d' Guiſe, and d' Aumale, the Count de Sancerres, the Mareſchal St. Andrew, Monſieur de Jarnac and Tavennes, ſhould, the 15*th* day of March, aſſemble at Troyes in Champaign to reſiſt the Emperor. Alſo that the French King would go thither in Perſon, with 200 Gentlemen of his Houſhold, and 400 Archers of his Guard.

16. The French King ſent his Secretary de Lausbeſpine to declare this Voyage to him, * and to deſire him to take pains to have Mr. Pickering with him, and to be a Witneſs of his Doings. * This is imperfect.

19. Whereupon it was appointed, that he ſhould have 2000 Crowns for his Furniſhment, beſides his Diet, and Barnabe 800.

20. The Counteſs of Pembrook died.

18. The Merchant-Adventurers put in their Replication to the Stilliards Anſwer.

23. A Decree was made by the Board, that upon knowledg and information of their Charters, they had found: Firſt, That they were no ſufficient Corporation. 2. That their Number, Names, and Nation, was unknown. 3. That when they had forfeited their Liberties, King Edward the 4*th* did reſtore them on this condition, That they ſhould colour no Strangers Goods, which they had done. Alſo that whereas in the beginning they ſhipped not paſt 8 Clothes, after 100, after 1000, after that 6000; now in their Name was ſhipped 44000 Clothes in one Year, and but 1100 of all other Strangers. For theſe Conſiderations ſentence was given, That they had forfeited their Liberties, and were in like caſe with other Strangers.

28. There came Ambaſſadors from Hamburg, and Lubeck, to ſpeak in the behalf of the Stiliard Merchants.

29. A Fleming would have ſearched the Falcon for Frenchmen, the Falcon turned, ſhot off, boarded the Fleming, and took him.

Paiment was made of 63500 l. Flemiſh to the Foulcare, all ſaving 6000 l. which he borrowed in French Crowns by Sir Philip Hobbey.

March.

2. The Lord of Burgaveny was committed to Ward for ſtriking the Earl of Oxford in the Chamber of preſence.

The Anſwer for the Ambaſſadors of the Stiliard was committed to the Lord Chancellor, the two Secretaries, Sir Robert Bowes, Sir John Baker, Judg Montague, Griffith Sollicitor, Goſnald, Goodrick, and Brooks.

3. It was agreed, for better diſpatch of things, certain of the Council, with others joined with them, ſhould over-look the Penal Laws, and put certain of them in execution. Others ſhould anſwer Suitors: Others ſhould overſee my Revenues, and the Order of them; alſo the ſuperfluous Paiments heretofore made. Others ſhould have Commiſſion for taking away ſuperfluous Bulwarks.

Firſt, Order was given for defence of the Merchants, to ſend four Barques and two Pinaces to the Sea.

4. The Earl of Weſtmoreland, the Lord Wharton, the Lord Convers, Sir Tho. Palmer, and Sir Tho. Chaloner, were appointed in Commiſſion to meet with the Scotch Ambaſſadors, for equal diviſion of the Ground that was called the Debatable.

6. The French Ambaſſador declared to the Duke of Northumberland, how the French King had ſent him a Letter of Credit for his Ambaſſadry. After delivery made of the Letter, he declared how Duke Maurice of Saxony, the Duke of Mecklenburgh, the Marquis of Brandenburgh, the Count of Mansfield, and divers other Princes of Germany, made a League with his Maſter Offenſive and Defenſive; the French to go to Strasburg, with 30000 Footmen, and 8000 Horſemen; the Almains to meet with them there the 25*th* of this month, with 15000 Footmen, and 5000 Horſemen. Alſo the City of Strasburg had promiſed them Victual, and declared how the French would ſend me Ambaſſadors to have Me into the ſame League. Alſo that the Marqueſs of Brandenburg, and Count of Mansfield, had been privately conveied to the French King's Preſence, and were again departed to leavy Men; and he thought by this time they were in the Field.

10. He declared the ſame thing to Me in the ſame manner.

9. It was conſulted touching the Marts, and it was agreed that it was moſt neceſſary to have a Mart in England for the enriching of the ſame to make it the more famous, and to be leſs in other Mens danger, and to make all things better cheap, and more plentiful. The time was thought good to have it now, becauſe of the Wars between the French King and the Emperor. The Places were the meeteſt; Hull for the Eaſt parts. Southampton for the South Parts of England, as appeareth by two Bills in my Study. London alſo was thought no ill place, but it was appointed to begin with the other two.

11. The Bills put up to the Parliament were over-ſeen, and certain of them were for this time thought meet to paſs and to be read, other of them for avoiding tediouſneſs to be omitted, and no more Bills to be taken.

15. Thoſe

15. Thoſe that were appointed Commiſſioners for the Requeſts, or for the execution of Penal Laws, or for overſeeing of the Courts, received their Commiſſions at my Hand.

18. It was appointed, that for the paiment of 14000 l. in the end of April, there ſhould be made an Anticipation of the Subſidy of London, and of the Lords of my Council, which ſhould go near to pay the ſame with good Proviſion.

20. The French Ambaſſador brought me a Letter of Credit from his Maſter, and thereupon delivered me the Articles of the League betwixt the Germans and him, deſiring Me to take part of the ſame League; which Articles I have alſo in my Study.

23. The Merchants of England having been long ſtaied, departed, in all about 60 Sail, the Woolfleet, and all to Antwerp. They were countermanded becauſe of the Mart, but it was too late.

24. Forſomuch as the Exchange was ſtaied by the Emperor to Lions, the Merchants of Antwerp were ſore afraid; and that the Mart could not be without Exchange, liberty was given to the Merchants to exchange and rechange Mony for Mony.

26. Henry Dudley was ſent to the Sea with four Ships, and two Barks, for defence of the Merchants, which were daily before robbed; who, as ſoon as he came to the Sea, took two Pirats Ships and brought them to Dover.

28. I did deny, after a ſort, the Requeſt to enter into War, as appeareth by the Copy of my Anſwer in the Study.

29. To the intent the Ambaſſador might more plainly underſtand My meaning, I ſent Mr. Hobbey and Mr. Maſon to him, to declare him mine intent more amply.

31. The Commiſſioners for the Debatable of the Scotch ſide, did deny to meet, except a certain Caſtle, or Pile, might be firſt razed; whereupon Letters were ſent to ſtay our Commiſſioners from the Meeting till they had further word.

10. Duke Maurice muſtered at Artnſtat in Saxony all his own Men, and left Duke Auguſt, the Duke of Anhault, and the Count of Mansfeld, for defence of his Country, chiefly for fear of the Bohemians. The Young Lantſgrave, Reiffenberg, and others, muſtered in Heſſen.

14. The Marqueſs Albert of Brandenburg muſtered his Men two Leagues from Erdfort, and after entred the ſame, receiving of the Citizens, a Gift of 20000 Florins; and he borrowed of them 60000 Florins, and ſo came to Steinfurt, where Duke Maurice and all the German Princes were aſſembled.

April.

2. I fell ſick of the Meaſels and Small Pox.

4. Duke Maurice, with his Army, came to Auguſta; which Town was at the firſt yielded to him, and delivered into his Hands, where he did change certain Officers, reſtored their Preachers, and made the Town more free.

5. The Conſtable, with the French Army, came to Metz, which was within two days yielded to him, where he found great proviſion of Victuals, and that he determined to make the Staple of Victual for his Journey.

8. He came to a Fort wherein was an Abbey called Gocoza, and that Fort abide 80 Cannon-ſhot; at length came to a Parley, where the Frenchmen got in and won it by Aſſault, ſlew all, ſaving 115, with the Captain, whom he hanged.

9. He took a Fort called Maranges, and razed it.

12. The French King came to Nancy to go to the Army, and there found the Dutcheſs and the young Duke of Lorrain.

13. The Mareſchal St. Andrew, with 200 Men of Arms, and 2000 Foot-men, carried away the young Duke, accompanied with few of his old Men, toward France, to the Dolphin, which lay at Rhemes, to the no little diſcontentation of his Mother the Dutcheſs. He fortified alſo divers Towns in Lorrain, and put in French Gariſons.

14. He departed from Nancy to the Army, which lay at Metz.

7. Monſieur Senarpon gave an overthrow to the Captain of St. Omer, having with him 600 Foot-men, and 200 Horſe-men.

15. The Parliament broke up, and becauſe I was ſick, and not able to go well abroad as then, I ſigned a Bill containing the Names of the Acts which I would have paſs; which Bill was read in the Houſe. Alſo I gave Commiſſion to the Lord Chancellor, two Arch-biſhops, two Biſhops, two Dukes, two Marqueſſes, two Earls, and two Barons, to diſſolve wholly this Parliament.

18. The Earl of Pembrook ſurrendred his Maſterſhip of the Horſe, which I beſtowed on the Earl of Warwick.

19. Alſo he left 50 of his Men of Arms, of which 25 were given to Sir Philip Hobbey, and 25 to Sir John Gates.

21. It was agreed that Commiſſions ſhould go out for to take certificate of the ſuperfluous Church Plate to Mine uſe, and to ſee how it hath been embezeled.

The French Ambaſſador deſired, That foraſmuch as it was dangerous carrying of Victual from Boleign to Ard by Land, that I would give licenſe to carry by Sea to Calais, and from Calais to Ard, in my Ground.

22. The Lord Paget was degraded from the Order of the Garter for divers his Offences, and chiefly becauſe he was no Gentleman of Blood, neither of Father-ſide nor Mother-ſide.

Sir Anthony St. Leiger, which was accuſed by the Biſhop of Dublin for divers brawling Matters, was taken again into the Privy-Chamber, and ſat among the Knights of the Order.

23. Anſwer was given to the French Ambaſſador, that I could not accompliſh his Deſire, becauſe it was againſt my League with the Emperor.

24. The Order of the Garter was wholly altered, as appeareth by the new Statutes. The were elected Sir Andrew Dudley, and the Earl of Weſtmoreland.

26. Monſieur de Couriers came from the Regent, to deſire that her Fleet might ſafely, upon occaſion, take harbour in my Havens. Alſo he ſaid, he was come to give order for redreſſing all Complaints of our Merchants.

25. Whereas it was appointed that the 14000 l. that I owed in the laſt of April, ſhould be paid by the anticipation of the Subſidy of London, and of the Lords, becauſe to change the ſame over-Sea, was loſs loſs of the ſixth part of the Mony I did ſo ſend over. Stay was made thereof, and the paiment appointed to be made over of 20000 l. Flemiſh, which I took up there 14 per Cent. and ſo remained 6000 l. to be paid there the laſt of May.

30. Removing to Greenwich.

28. The Charges of the Mints were diminiſhed 1400 l. and there was left 600 l.

18. King Ferdinando, Maximilian his Son, and the Duke of Bavaria, came to Linx, to treat with Duke Maurice for a Peace; where Maurice declared his Griefs.

16. Duke Maurice's Men received an overthrow at Ulms; Marqueſs Albert ſpoiled the Country, and gave them a day to anſwer.

31. A Debt of 14000 l. was paid to the Foulcare.

May.

2. The Stiliard-men received their Anſwer; which was, to confirm the former Judgment of my Council.

3. A Letter was ſent to the Foulcare from my Council to this effect; That I have paid 63000 l. Flemiſh in February, and 14000 in April, which came to 77000 l. Flemiſh, which was a fair Sum of Mony to be paid in one Year, chiefly in this buſy World, whereas it is moſt neceſſary to be had for Princes. Beſides this, That it was thought Mony ſhould not now do him ſo much pleaſure as at another time peradventure. Upon theſe Conſiderations they had adviſed Me to pay but 5000 l. of the 45000 I now owe, and ſo put over the reſt according to the old Intereſt, 14 per Cent. with which they deſired him to take patience.

4. Monſieur de Couriers received his Anſwer, which was, That I had long ago given order that the Flemiſh Ships ſhould not be moleſted in my Havens, as it appeareth, becauſe Frenchmen chaſing Flemings into my Havens, could not get them becauſe of the reſcue they had, but that I thought it not convenient to have more Ships to come into my Havens than I could well rule and govern. Alſo a note of divers Complaints of my Subjects was delivered to him.

10. Letters were ſent to my Ambaſſadors, That they ſhould move to the Princes of Germany, to the Emperor, and to the French King, That if this Treaty came to any effect or end, I might be comprehended in the ſame.

Commiſſion was given to Sir John Gates, Sir Robert Bowes, the Chancellor of the Augmentation, Sir Walter Mildmay, Sir Richard Cotton, to ſell ſome part of the Chauntry Lands, and of the Houſes, for the paiment of my Debts, which was 251000 l. Sterling at the leaſt.

Taylor, Dean of Lincoln, was made Biſhop of Lincoln.

Hooper, Biſhop of Gloceſter, was made Biſhop of Worceſter and Gloceſter.

Story, Biſhop of Rocheſter, was made Biſhop of Chicheſter.

Sir Robert Bowes was appointed to be made Maſter of the Rolls.

Commandment was given to the Treaſurer, that nothing of the Subſidy ſhould be diſburſed but by Warrant from the Board; and likewiſe for our Lady-day Revenues.

14. The Baron of the Exchequer, upon the Surrender made by Juſtice Leiceſter, was made Chief-Juſtice, the Attorney Chief-Baron, the Sollicitor-General Attorney, and the Sollicitor of the Augmentation, Gosnold, General-Sollicitor, and no more Sollicitor to be in the Augmentation-Court. Also there were appointed eight Serjeants of the Law against Michaelmas next coming.

Gaudy.
Stamford.
Carell, &c.

16. The Muster was made of all the Men at Arms saving 50 of Mr. Sadler's, 25 of Mr. Vicechamberlains, and 25 of Sir Philip Hobby's, and also of all the Pensioners.

17. The Progress was appointed to be by Dorchester to Pool in Dorsetshire, and so through Salisbury homeward to Windsor.

18. It was appointed Mony should be cried down in Ireland after a Pay, which was of Mony at Midsummer next; in the mean season the thing to be kept secret and close. Also the Pirry, the Mint-master, taking with him Mr. Brabamon, chief Treasurer of the Realm, should go to the Mines and see what profit may be taken of the Oar the Almains had digged in a Mine of Silver; and if it would quit cost, or more, to go forward withal, if not, to leave off and discharge all the Almains.

Also that of 500 of the 2000 Souldiers there being, should be cut off, and as many more as would go and serve the French King, or the Emperor, leaving sufficient at Home; no Fortifications to be made also yet for a time, in no place unfortified; and many other Articles were concluded for Ireland.

20. Sir Richard Wingfield, Rogers, and——were appointed to view the State of Portsmouth, and to bring again their Opinions concerning the fortifying thereof.

4. The French King having passed the Straits of Lorrain, came to Savern, four miles from Strasburg, and was victualled by the Country, but denied passage through their Town.

21. Answer came from the Foulcare, That for the deferring of 30000 l. parcel of 45 Troas, he was content; and likewise Angell Pysso, he might have paid him 20000 l. as soon as might be.

22. It was appointed, that forasmuch as there was much disorder on the Marches on Scotland-side, both in my Fortifications of some Places, and negligent looking to other Forts, the Duke of Northumberland, general Warden thereof, should go down and view it, and take order for it, and return home with speed. Also a pay of 10000 l. to go before him.

23. It was appointed that these Bands of Men of Arms should go with me this Progress.

29. It was appointed that Thomas Greſham ſhould have paied him, out of the Mony that came of my Debts, 7000 l. for to pay 6800 l. the laſt of the month, which he received the ſame night.

28. The ſame Thomas Greſham had 9000 l. paid him toward the paiment of 20000 l. which the Foulcare required to be paid at the Paſſmart, for he had taken by Exchange from hence 5000 l. and odds, and 10000 l. he borrowed of the Scheits, and ten of Lazarus Tukkar. So there was in the whole 25, of which was paid the laſt of April 14, ſo there remained 11000, and 9000 l. which I now made over by Exchange, which made 20000 l. to pay the Foulcare with.

30. I received Advertiſement from Mr. Pickering, that the French King went from Savern to Aroumaſſhes, which was yielded to him; from this to Leimsberg, and ſo towards Spires, his Army to be about 20000 Footmen, and 8000 Horſemen, well appointed, beſides Raſcals. He had with him 50 pieces of Artillery, of which were 26 Cannons, and ſix Organs, and great number of Boots. From Leimſberg, partly doubting Duke Maurice's meaning, partly for lack of Victual; and alſo becauſe he had word that the Regent's Army, of which were Guides the Count de Egmont, Monſieur de Rie, Martin Varnuſe, and the Duke of Holeſt, to the number of 16000 Footmen, and 6000 Horſemen, had invaded Champaign, and fortified Aſchenay; he retired homeward till he came to Striolph, and there commanded all unprofitable Carriage and Men ſhould depart to Chalons, and ſent to the Admiral to come to him with 6000 Swiſſers, 4000 Frenchmen, 1500 Horſemen, and 30 pieces of Ordnance, meaning, as it was thought, to do ſome Enterpriſe about Luxemburg, or to recover Aſchenay which the Regent had fortified. There died in this Journey 2000 Men for lack of good Victual; for eight days they had but Bread and Water, and they had marched 60 Dutch miles at the leaſt, and paſt many a Streight, very painfully and labourſomly.

19. Duke Maurice coming from Auſpurg in great haſt, came this day to the firſt Paſſage called the Clowſe, which the Emperor had cauſed to be ſtrongly fortified and victualled, a paſſage through an Hill, cut out artificially in the way to Inſpurg, and there was a ſtrong Bulwark made hard by it, which he wan, after a long Fight within an hour and an half by Aſſault, and took and ſlew all that were within. And that Night he marched through that Hill into a Plain, where he looked for to ſee twelve Enſigns of Lanſknights of his Enemies, but they retired to to ſecond Streight, and yet divers of them were both ſlain and taken; and ſo that Night he lodged in the Plain, at the entry of the ſecond Paſſage, where there were five Forts and one Caſtle, Caſtle, which with Ordnance ſlew ſome of Duke Maurice's Men.

20. This morning the Duke of Mecklenburg, with 3060 Footmen, caſt a Bridg over a River five miles beneath the Sluce, and came and gave aſſault behind the Sluce, and Duke Maurice gave aſſault in the Face, and the Country-men of Tirol, for hate of the Spaniards, helped Duke Maurice, ſo that five Forts were won by Aſſault, and the Caſtle yielded upon condition to depart, not to ſerve in three months after the Emperor. In this Enterpriſe he ſlew and took 3000 and 500 Perſons, and 23 pieces of Artillery, and 240000 S.

The Emperor hearing of this, departed by Night from Inſpruck, forty miles that Night in Poſt; he killed two of his Gennets, and rode continually every Night, firſt to Brixinium; and after for doubt of the Cardinal of Ferrara's Army, turned to Villucho in Carinthia. The 30*th* of May, tarrying for the Duke d' Alva, who ſhould come to him with 2000 Spaniards, and 3000 Italians that came from Parma. Alſo the Emperor delivered Duke Frederic from Captivity, and ſent him through Bohemia into Saxony, to raiſe a Power againſt Duke Maurice's Nephew.

22. Duke Maurice, after that Hala and divers other Towns about Inſhpruck in Tirol had yielded, came to Inſhpruck, and there cauſed all the Stuff to be brought to the Market-place, and took all that pertained to Imperialiſts as confiſcate, the reſt he ſuffered the Townſmen to enjoy. He took there fifty pieces of Ordnance, which he conveied to Ausburg, for that Town he fortified, and made it his Staple of Proviſion.

2. Sir John Williams, who was committed to the Fleet for disobeying a Commandment given to him for not paying any Pensions, without not making my Council privy, upon his submission was delivered out of Prison.

4. Beamont Master of the Rolls, did confess his Offences, who in the Office of Wards had bought Land with my Mony, had lent it, and kept it from Me, to the value of 9000 l. and above, more than this twelve month, and 11000 in Obligations; how he being Judg in the Chancery between the Duke of Suffolk and the Lady Powis, took her Title, and went about to get it into his Hands, paying a Sum of Mony, and letting her have a Farm of a Manour of his, and caused an Indenture to be made falsly, with the old Duke's counterfeit Hand to it; by which he gave these Lands to the Lady Powis, and went about to make twelve Men perjured. Also how he had concealed the Felony of his Man to the Sum of 200 l. which he stole from him, taking the Mony out of his own hand again. For these Considerations he surrendered into my hands all his Offices, Lands, and Goods, moveable and unmoveable, toward the paiment of this Debt, and of the Fines due to these particular Faults by him done.

6. The Lord Paget, Chancellor of the Dutchy, confessed how he, without Commission, did sell away my Lands and great Timber-Woods; how he had taken great Fines of my Lands, to his said particular Profit and Advantage, never turning any to my Use or Commodity; how he made Leases in Reversion for more than 21 Years. For these Crimes, and other-like recited before, he surrendred his Office, and submitted himself to those Fines that I or my Council would appoint to be levied of his Goods and Lands.

7. Whaley, Receiver of York-shire, confessed how he lent my Mony upon Gain and Lucre; how he paied one Years Revenue over, with the Arrearages of the last; how he bought mine own Land with my own Mony; how in his Accompts he had made many false Suggestions; how at the time of the fall of Mony, he borrowed divers Sums of Money, and had allowance for it, after by which he gained 500 l. at one paying down, the whole Sum being 2000 l. and above. For these and such-like Considerations he surrendred his Office, and submitted to Fines which I or my Council should assign him, to be levied of his Goods and Lands.

8. The Lord of the Council sat at Guild-hall in London, where in the presence of a thousand People, they declared to the Mayor and Brethren their loathfulness in suffering unreasonable prices of Things, and to Craftsmen their willfulness, &c. telling them, That if upon this Admonition they did not amend, I was wholly determined to call in their their Liberties as confiſcate, and to appoint Officers that ſhould look to them.

10. It was appointed that the Lord Gray of Wilton ſhould be pardoned of his Offences, and delivered out of the Tower.

Whereas Sir Philip Hobbey ſhould have gone to Calais with Sir Richard Cotton and William Barnes Auditor, it was appointed Sir Anthony St. Legier, Sir Richard Cotton, and Sir Thomas Mildmay, ſhould go thither, carrying with them 10000 l. to be received out of the Exchequer.

Whereas it was agreed that there ſhould be a Pay now made to Ireland of 5000 l. and then the Mony to be cried down, it was appointed that 3000 weight which I had in the Tower, ſhould be carried thither, and coined at 3 Denar. fine; and that incontinent the Coin ſhould be cried down.

12. Becauſe Pirry tarried here for the Bullion, William Williams Eſſay-Maſter was put in his place, to view the Mines with Mr. Bradizon, or him whom the Deputy ſhould appoint.

13 Baneſter and Crane, the one for his large Confeſſion, the other becauſe little Matter appeared againſt him, were delivered out of the Tower.

16. The Lord Paget was brought into Star-Chamber, and there declared effectuouſly his ſubmiſſion by word of Mouth, and delivered it in writing.

Beaumont who had before made his Confeſſion in writing, began to deny it again; but after being called before my Council, he did confeſs it again, and there acknowledged a Fine of his Land, and ſigned an Obligation in ſurrender of all his Goods.

17. Monſieur de Couriers took his leave.

2. The French King won the Caſtle of Robdemac. Certain Horſemen of the Regents came and ſet upon the French King's Baggage, and ſlew divers of the Carriers; but at length, with ſome loſs of the Frenchmen, they were compelled to retire. The French King won Mount St. Ann.

4. The French King came to Dewvillars, which was a ſtrong Town, and beſieged it, making three Breaches.

12. The Town was yielded to him, with the Captain. He found in it 2500 Footmen, 200 Horſemen, 63 great Braſs-pieces, 300 Hagbuts of Croke, much Victual, and much Ammunition, as he did write to his Ambaſſador.

19. It was appointed that the Biſhop of Durham's Matter ſhould ſtay till the end of the Progreſs.

20. Beaumont in the Star-Chamber confeſſed, after a little ſticking upon the Matter, his Faults, to which he had put to his hand.

22. It was agreed that the Bands of Men of Arms, appointed to Mr. Sidney, Mr. Vicechamberlain, Mr. Hobbey, and Mr. Sadler, ſhould not be furniſhed, but left off.

25. It was agreed that none of my Council ſhould move Me in any Suit of Land for Forfeits above 20 l. for Reverſion of Leaſes, or other extraordinary Suits, till the State of my Revenues were further known.

15. The

15. The French King came to a Tovvn ſtanding upon the River of Moſa, called Tvoire, which gave him many hot Skirmiſhes.

18. The French King began his Battery to the Walls.

14. The Tovvnſmen of Mountmedy gave a hot Skirmiſh to the French, and ſlew Monſieur de Toge's Brother, and many other Gentlemen of the Camp.

12. The Prince of Salerno, vvho had been vvith the French King to treat vvith him touching the Matter of Naples, vvas diſpatched in Poſt vvith this Anſwer, That the French King vvould aid him vvith 13000 Footmen, and 1500 Horſemen in the French Wages, to recover and conquer the Kingdom of Naples; and he ſhould marry, as ſome ſaid, the French King's Siſter, Madam Margaret. The Cauſe why this Prince rebelled againſt the Emperor, vvas, partly the uncourteous handling of the Viceroy of Naples, partly Ambition.

The Flemings made an Invaſion into Champaign, in ſo much that the Dolphin had almoſt been taken; and the Queen lying at Chalons, ſent ſome of her Stuff towards Paris.

Alſo another Company took the Town of Guiſe, and ſpoiled the Country.

22. Monſieur de Tallie vvas ſent to raiſe the Arrierbands and Legions of Picardy and Champaign, to recover Guiſe, and invade Flanders.

27. Removing to Hampton-Court.

30. It vvas appointed that the Statds ſhould have this Anſwer, That their Clothes vvhich they had bought to carry over to the Sum of 2000 Clothes and odd, ſhould be carried at their old Cuſtom, ſo they vvere carried vvithin ſix vveeks; and likevviſe all Commodities they brought in till our Lady-day in Term next, in all other Points, the old Decree to ſtand, till by a further communication the Matter ſhould be ended and concluded.

The Lord Paget vvas licenſed to tarry at London, and there-abouts, till Michaelmaſs, becauſe he had no Proviſion in his Country.

26. Certain of the Heraulds, Lancaſter and Portcullis, vvere committed to Ward, for counterfeiting Clarencieux Seal, to get Mony by giving of Arms.

23. The French King having received divers Skirmiſhes of the Townſmen, and chiefly two; in the one, they ſlevv the French Light-horſe, lying in a Village by the Town; in the other, they entred into the Camp, and pulled down Tents; vvhich two Skirmiſhes vvere given by the Count of Mansfield Governor of the Town. And the Duke of Luxemburg and his 300 Light-horſe, underſtanding by the Treaſon of four Prieſts, the weakeſt part of the Town, ſo affrighted the Townſmen and the Flemiſh Souldiers, that they by Threatnings, compelled the Captain the Count, that he yielded himſelf and the Gentlemen Priſoners, the Common-Souldiers to depart with White Wands in their Hands. The Town was well Fortified, Victualled, and Furniſhed.

24. The Town of Mountmedy yielded to the French King, which before had given a hot Skirmiſh.

July.

4. Sir John Gates Vicechamberlain, was made Chancellor of the Dutchy.

7. Removing to Oatlands.

5. The Emperor's Ambaſſador delivered the Regent's Letter, being of this effect; That whereas I was bound by a Treaty with the Emperor, made Anno Dom. 1542, at Dotrecht, That if any Man did Invade the two Counties, I ſhould help him with 5000 Footmen, or 700 Crowns a day during four months, and make War with him within a month after the Requeſt made; and now the French King had invaded Luxemburg, deſiring my Men to follow the Effect of the Treaty.

7. The Names of the Commiſſioners was added, and made more, both in the Debts, the ſurveying of the Courts, the Penal Laws, &c. and becauſe my Lord Chamberlain, my Lord Privy-Seal, Mr. Vicechamberlain, and Mr. Secretary Petre, went with me this Progreſs.

8. It was appointed that 50 pound weight of Gold ſhould be coined after the new Standard, to carry about this Progreſs, which maketh 150 l. Sterling.

9. The Chancellor of the Augmentation was willed to ſurceaſe his Commiſſion, given him the third Year of our Reign.

3. Monſieur de Boſſy, Grand Eſcuer to the Emperor, was made General of the Army in the Low-Countries, and Monſieur de Prat over the Horſemen.

10. It was appointed here, that if the Emperor's Ambaſſador did move any more for Help or Aid, this Anſwer ſhould be ſent him by two of my Council, That this Progreſs-time my Council was diſperſed, I would move by their Advice, and he muſt tarry till the Matter were concluded, and their Opinions heard. Alſo I had committed the Treaty to be conſidered by divers learned Men, &c. And if another time he would preſs Me, then anſwer to be made, That I truſted the Emperor would not wiſh Me, in theſe young Years, having felt them ſo long, to enter into them. How I had Amity ſworn with the French King, which I could not well break; and therefore if the Emperor thought it ſo meet, I would be a Mean for a Peace between them, but not otherwiſe. And if he did preſs the Treaty, laſtly to conclude, That the Treaty did not bind Me which my Father had made, being againſt the profit of my Realm and Country; and to deſire a new Treaty to be made between Me and the Emperor in the laſt Wars. He anſwered, That he marvelled what We meant, for we are bound, quoth the Emperor, and not You. Alſo the Emperor had refuſed to fulfil it divers times, both in not letting paſs Horſes, Armour, Ammunition, &c. which were provided by Me for the Wars. As alſo in not ſending Aid upon the Forraging of the Low-Country of Calais.

12. A Letter was written to Sir Peter Meutas, Captain of the Iſle of Jerſey, both to command him that Divine Service may there be uſed as in England; and alſo that he take heed to the Church-Plate that it be not ſtollen away, but kept ſafe till further Order be taken.

9. The French King came to the Town Aveins in Hainault, where after he had viewed the Town, he left it, and beſieged a Pile called Tirlokint; the Bailiff of the Town perceiving his departure, gave the Onset on his Rereward with 2000 Footmen, and 500 Horsemen, and slew 500 Ferchmen. After this, and the winning of certain Holds of little force, the French King returned into France, and divided his Army into divers good Towns to rest them, because divers were sick of the Flux, and such other Diseases, meaning shortly to increase his Power, and so to go forward with his Enterprise.

Onſet

12. Frederick Duke of Saxony was released from his Imprisonment, and sent by the Emperor into his own Country, to the great rejoicing of all the Protestants.

5. The Emperor declared, That he would none of these Articles to which Duke Maurice agreed, and the King of the Romans also. The Copy of them remaineth with the Secretary Cecil.

Marques Albert of Brandenburg did great harm in the Country of Francania, burnt all Towns and Villages about Norimberg, and compelled them to pay to the Princes of his League 200000 Dollars, ten of the faireſt pieces of Ordnance, and 150 Kintals of Powder. After that he went to Frankfort, to distress certain Souldiers gathered there for the Emperor.

15. Removing to Guilford.

20. Removing to Petworth.

23. The Answer was made to the Emperor's Ambassador, touching the Aid he required, by Mr. Wotton and Mr. Hobbey, according to the first Article supra.

24. Because the number of Bands that went with Me this Progress, made the Train great, it was thought good they should be sent home, five only 150 which were pickt out of all the Bands. This was, because the Train was thought to be near 4000 Horse, which were enough to eat up the Country, for there was little Meadow nor Hay all the way as I went.

25. Removing to Londre, Sir Anthony Brown's House.

27. Removing to Halvenaker.

30. Whereas it had been before devised, that the New Fort of Barwick should be made with four Bulwarks; and for making of two of them, the Wall of the Town should be left open on the Enemies side a great way together, (which thing had been both dangerous and chargeable) it was agreed the Wall should stand, and two Slaughter-houses to be made upon it, to scour the outer Courtains; a great Rampier to be made within the Wall, a great Ditch within that, another Wall within that, with two other Slaughter-Houses, and a Rampier within that again.

26. The Flemings entred in great numbers into the Country of Tournay; whereupon 500 Men of Arms arose of Frenchmen, and gave the Onset on the Flemings, overthrew them, and slew of them 1435, whereof were 150 Horsemen.

31. It was appointed, on my Lord of Northumberland's Request, that he should give half his Fee to the Lord Wharton, and make him his Deputy-Warden there.

August.

2. Removing to Warblington.

3. The Duke of Guise was sent into Lorrain, to be the French King's Lieutenant there.

4. Removing to Waltham.

8. Removing to Portſmouth.

9. In the morning I went to Chaterton's Bulwark, and viewed alſo the Town; at afternoon went to ſee the Store-houſe, and there took a Boat and went to the wooden Tower, and ſo to Haſelford. Upon viewing of which things, it there was deviſed two Forts to be made upon the entry of the Haven; one where Ridley's Tower ſtandeth, upon the Neck that maketh the Chamber; the other upon a like Neck ſtanding on the other ſide the Haven, where ſtood an old Bulwark of Wood. This was deviſed for the ſtrength of the Haven. It was meant, that that to the Town-ſide ſhould be both ſtronger and larger.

10. Henry Dudley who lay at Portſmouth, with a Warlike Company of 140 good Souldiers, was ſent to Guiſnes with his Men, becauſe the Frenchmen aſſembled in theſe Frontiers in great Numbers.

Removing to Tichfield, the Earl of Southampton's Houſe.

14. Removing to Southampton.

16. The French Ambaſſador came to declare how the French King meant to ſend one that was his Lieutenant in the Civil Law, to declare which of our Merchants Matters have been adjudged on their ſide, and which againſt them, and for what Conſideration.

16. Removing to Beulen.

The French Ambaſſador brought news how the City of Sienna had been taken by the French-ſide on St. James's day, by one that was called the Count Perigliano, and other Italian Souldiers, by Treaſon of ſome within the Town; and all the Gariſon of the Town, being Spaniards, were either taken or ſlain. Alſo how the Mareſchal Briſac had recovered Saluzzo, and taken Verucca. Alſo how Villebone had taken Turnhout and Mountreville in the Low-Country.

18. Removing to Chriſt-Church.

21. Removing to Woodlands.

In this month, after long Buſineſs, Duke Maurice and the Emperor agreed on a Peace, but Marqueſs Albert of Brandenburg would not conſent thereto, but went away with his Army to Spires and Worms, Colen and Treves, taking large ſums of Mony of all Cities which he paſſed, but chiefly of the Clergy. Duke Maurice's Souldiers perceiving Marqueſs Albert would enter into no Peace, went almoſt all to the Marqueſs's Service; among which were Principal the Count of Mansfelt, Baron Haydeke, and a Colonel of 3000 Footmen, and 1000 Horſemen, called Reiffenberg; So that of 7000 which ſhould been ſent into Hungary againſt the Turks, there remained not 3000. Alſo the Duke of Wittenberg did ſecretly let go 2800 of the beſt Souldiers in Germany, to the Service of Marqueſs Albert, ſo that his Power was now very great.

Alſo in this month the Emperor departing from Villachia, came to Insbruck, and ſo to Monaco, and to Auguſta, accompanied with 8000 Spaniards and Italians, and a little Band of a few ragged Almains. Alſo in this month did the Turks win the City of Tameſino in Tranſylvania, and gave a Battel to the Chriſtians, in which was ſlain Count Pallavicino, and 7000 Italians and Spaniards. Alſo in this month did the Turks Navy take the Cardinal of Trent's to Brethren, and ſeven Gallies, and had in chaſe 39 other. Alſo in this month did the Turks

Navy

Navy Land at Terracina in the Kingdom of Naples; and the Prince of Salerno ſet forward with 4000 Gaſcoins, and 6000 Italians; and the Count Perigliano brought to his Aid 5000 Men of thoſe that were at the Enterpriſe of Siena. Alſo the Mareſchal Briſac won a Town in Piedmont called Buſſac.

24. Removing to Salisbury.

26. Upon my Lord of Northumberland's return out of the North, it was appointed, for the better ſtrengthning of the Marches, that no one Man ſhould have two Offices; and that Mr. Sturley, Captain of Berwick, ſhould leave the Wardenſhip of the Eaſt-Marches to the Lord Evers; and upon the Lord Coniers reſignation, the Captainſhip of the Caſtle of Carliſle was appointed to Sir—Gray, and the Wardenſhip of the Weſt-Marches to Sir Richard Muſgrave.

27. Sir Richard Cotton made Comptroller of the Houſhold.

28. Removing to Wilton.

30. Sir Anthony Archer was appointed to be Marſhal of Calais, and Sir Edward Grimſton Comptroller of Calais.

22. The Emperor being at Auguſt, did baniſh two Preachers Proteſtants out of Auguſta, under pretence that they preached ſeditiouſly, and left Mecardus the chief Preacher, and ſix other Proteſtant Preachers in the Town, giving the Magiſtrates leave to chuſe others in their place that were baniſhed.

29. The Emperor cauſed eight Proteſtant Citizens of the Town to be baniſhed, of them that went to the Fair at Lintz, under pretence, that they taking Marqueſs Albert's part, would not abide his Preſence.

September.

2. Removing to Wotisfunt, my Lord Sandes Houſe.

5. Removing to Wincheſter.

7. From thence to Baſing, my Lord Treaſurer's Houſe.

10. And ſo to Dennington-Caſtle beſides the Town of Newbery.

12. And ſo to Reading.

15. To Windſor.

16. Stuckley being lately arrived out of France, declared, how that the French King being wholly perſuaded that he would never return again into England, becauſe he came away without leave, upon the apprehenſion of the Duke of Somerſet his old Maſter, declared to him his intent, That upon a Peace made with the Emperor, he meant to beſiege Calais, and thought ſurely to win it by the way of Sandhills; for having Ricebank both to famiſh the Town, and alſo to beat the Market-place; and asked Stuckley's Opinion: When Stuckley had anſwered, he thought it impoſſible. Then he told him that he meant to land in England, in an Angle thereof about Falmouth, and ſaid, the Bulwarks might eaſily be won, and the People were papiſtical; alſo that Monſieur de Guiſe at the ſame time ſhould enter into England by Scotland-ſide, with the Aid of the Scots.

19. After long reaſoning it was determined, and a Letter was ſent in all haſte to Mr. Moriſon, willing him to declare to the Emperor, That having pity, as all other Chriſtian Princes ſhould have, on the Invaſion of Chriſtendom by the Turk, would willingly join with the Emperor, and other States of the Empire, if the Emperor could bring it to to pass in some League against the Turk and his Confederates, but not to be aknown of the French King, only to say, That he hath no more Commission; but if the Emperor would send a Man into England, he should know more. This was done on intent to get some Friends. The Reasonings be in my Desk.

21. A Letter was sent only to try Stuckley's Truth to Mr. Pickering, to know whether Stuckley did declare any piece of this Matter to him.

Barnabe was sent for home.

23. The Lord Gray was chosen Deputy of Calais in the Lord Willowby's place, who was thought unmeet for it.

24. Sir Nicholas Wentworth was discharged of the Portership of Calais, and one—Cotton was put into it. In consideration of his Age, the said Sir Nicholas Wentworth had 100 l. Pension.

26. Letters were sent for the discharge of the Men of Arms at Michaelmas next following.

27. The young Lord's Table was taken away, and the Masters of Requests, and the Serjeants of Arms, and divers other extraordinary Allowances.

26. The Duke of Northumberland, the Marques of Northampton, the Lord Chancellor, Mr. Secretary Petre, and Mr. Secretary Cecil, ended a Matter at Eaton-College, between the Master and the Fellows; and also took order for the amendment of certain superfluous Statutes.

28. Removing to Hampton-Court.

29. Two Lawyers came from the French King to declare what things had passed with the Englishmen in the King's Privy-Council; what and why against them, and what was now in doing, and with what diligence. Which when they had eloquently declared, they were referred to London, where there should speak with them Mr. Secretary Petre, Mr. Wotton, and Sir Thomas Smith; whereby then was declared the Griefs of our Merchants, which came to the Sum of 50000 l. and upwards; to which they gave little answer, but that they would make Report when they came home, because they had yet no Commission, but only to declare us the Causes of things done.

The first day of this month the Emperor departed from Augsburg towards Ulmes; and thanking the Citizens for their stedfast sticking to him in these perilous Times, he passed by them to Strasburgh, accompanied only with 4000 Spaniards, 5000 Italians, 12000 Almains, and 2000 Horsemen, and thanking also them of Strasburg for their good-will they bore him, that they would not let the French King come into their Town; he went to Weyssenberg, and so to Spires, and came thither the 23*d* of this month. Of which the French King being advertised, summoned an Army at Metz, and went thitherward himself; sent a Pay of three months to Marques Albert, and the Rhinegrave and his Band; also willing him to stop the Emperor's Passage into these Low-Countries, and to fight with him.

27. The Matter of the Debatable was agreed upon, according to the last Instructions.

26. Duke Maurice, with 4000 Footmen, and 1000 Horsemen, arrived at Vienna against the Turks.

21. Marques

21. Marqueſs Hans of Brandenburg, came with an Army of 13000 Footmen, and 1500 Horſemen, to the Emperor's Army; and many Almain Soulders encreaſed his Army wonderfully, for he refuſed none.

October.

3. Becauſe I had a pay of 48000 l. to be paid in December, and had as yet but 14000 beyond Seas to pay it withal, the Merchants did give me a Loan of 40000 l. to be paid by them the laſt of December, and to be repaied again by Me the laſt of March. The manner of levying this Loan was of the Clothes, after the rate of 20 s. a Cloth, for they carried out at this Shipping 40000 Broad-Clothes. This Grant was confirmed the 4*th* day of this month, by a company aſſembled of 300 Merchant-Adventurers.

2. The Bulwarks of Earth and Boards in Eſſex, which had a continual allowance of Souldiers in them, were diſcharged, by which was ſaved preſently 500 l. and hereafter 700 or more.

4. The Duke d' Alva, and the Marqueſs of Marigna, ſet forth with a great part of the Emperor's Army, having all the Italians and Spaniards with them, towards Treves, where the Marqueſs Albert had ſet ten Enſigns of Launce-Knights to defend it, and tarried himſelf with the reſt of his Army at Landaw beſides Spires.

6. Becauſe Sir Andrew Dudley, Captain of Guiſnes, had indebted himſelf very much by his Service at Guiſnes; alſo becauſe it ſhould ſeem injurious to the Lord Willowby, that for the Contention between him and Sir Andrew Dudley, he ſhould be put out of his Office, therefore it was agreed, That the Lord William Howard ſhould be Deputy of Calis, and the Lord Gray Captain of Guiſnes.

Alſo it was determined that Sir Nicholas Sturley ſhould be Captain of the new Fort at Barwick, and that Alex. Brett ſhould be Porter, and one Rokeby ſhould be Marſhal.

7. Upon report of Letters written by Mr. Pickering, how that Stuckley had not declared to him, all the while of his being in France, no one word touching the Communication afore-ſpecified; and declared alſo how Mr. Pickering thought, and certainly advertiſed, that Stuckley never heard the French King ſpeak no ſuch word, nor never was in credit with him, or the Conſtable, ſave once, when he became an interpreter between the Conſtable and certain Engliſh Pioneers, He was committed to the Tower of London.

Alſo the French Ambaſſador was advertiſed how he had committed him to Priſon, for that he untruly ſlandered the King our good Brother, as other ſuch Runnagates do daily the ſame. This was told him, to make him ſuſpect the Engliſh Runnagates that be there. A like Letter was ſent again to Mr. Pickering.

8. Le Seigneur de Villandry came in poſt from the French King with this Meſſage. Firſt, That although Mr. Sidney's and Mr. Winter's Matters were juſtly condemned; yet the French King, becauſe they both were my Servants, and one of them about me, was content gratuito to give Mr. Sidney his Ship, and all the Goods in her; and Mr. Winter his Ship, and all his own Goods. Which Offer was refuſed, ſaying, We required nothing gratuito, but only Juſtice and Expedition. Alſo Villandry declared, That the King his Maſter, wiſhed that an Agreement were were made between the Ordinances and Cuſtoms of England and France in Marine Affairs. To which was anſwered, that our Ordinances were nothing but the Civil Law, and certain very old Additions of the Realm; That we thought it reaſon not to be bound to any other Law than their old Laws, which had been of long time continued, and no fault found with them. Alſo Villandry brought forth two new Proclamations, which for things to come vvere very profitable for England, for which he had a Letter of Thanks to the King his Maſter. He required alſo Pardon and Releaſement of Impriſonment for certain Frenchmen taken on the Sea-Coaſt. It was ſhewed him they were Pirats: Now ſome of them ſhould by Juſtice be puniſhed, ſome by Clemency pardoned; and with this Diſpatch he departed.

11. Horne Dean of Durham, declared a ſecret Conſpiracy of the Earl of Weſtmoreland, the Year of the apprehenſion of the Duke of Somerſet, how he would have taken out Treaſure at Midleham, and would have robbed his Mother, and ſold 200 l. Land; and to pleaſe the People, would have made a Proclamation for the bringing up of the Coin, becauſe he ſaw them grudg at the fall. He was commanded to keep this Matter cloſe.

6. Mr. Moriſon, Ambaſſador with the Emperor, declared to the Emperor the Matter of the Turks before ſpecified: Whoſe Anſwer was, He thanked us for our gentle Offer, and vvould cauſe the Regent to ſend a Man for the ſame purpoſe, to know Our further meaning in that behalf.

11. Mr. Pickering declared to the French King, being then at Rhemes, Stuckley's Matter of Confeſſion, and the Cauſe of his Impriſonment: Who after proteſtation made of his own good meaning in the Amity, and of Stuckley's Ingratitude toward him, his lewdneſs and ill-demeanour, thanked Us much for this ſo gentile an uttering of the Matter, that We vvould not be led vvith falſe Bruits and Tales.

The Biſhop Tonſtal of Durham vvas deprived of his Biſhoprick.

In this month Monſieur de Rue, Martin Roſſen, and an Army of Flemings, vvhile the French had aſſembled his Men of War in Lorrain, had ſent the Conſtable to the Army, vvhich lay four leagues from Verdun, the Duke de Guiſe with 7000 Men to Metz, and the Mareſchal St. Andrew at Verdeun, razed and ſpoiled, betvveen the River of Some and Oſſe, many Tovvns, as Noyon, Roy, Chamy; and Villages, Nelle, Folambray, a new built Houſe of the King's, &c. inſomuch that the French King ſent the Admiral of France to help the Duke of Vendoſme againſt that Army.

There vvas at this time a great Plague that reigned in ſundry parts of France, of which many Men died.

20. A Man of the Earl of Tyrones was committed to the Tower, becauſe he had made an untrue Suggeſtion and Complaint againſt the Deputy and the vvhole Council of Ierland. Alſo he had bruited certain ill Bruits in Ireland, how the Duke of Northumberland, and the Earl of Pembrook vvere fallen out, and one againſt another in the Field.

17. The Flemings, and the Engliſhmen that took their parts, aſſaulted by Night Hamletue; the Engliſhmen vvere on the Walls, and ſome of the Flemings alſo; but by the cowardiſe of a great part of the Flemings, the Enterprize was loſt, and many Men ſlain. The number of the Flemings were 4000, the number of the Men within Hamletue 400. The Captain of this Enterpriſe was Monſieur de Vandeville Captain of Grevelin.

6. Monſieur de Boiſſey entred Treves with a Flemiſh Army, to the number of 12000 Footmen, and 2500 Horſemen, Burgunions, without any reſiſtance, becauſe the Enſigns there left by Marqueſs Albert were departed; and thereupon the Duke d' Alva, and the Marqueſs of Marion, marched toward Metz; the Emperor himſelf, and the Marqueſs Hans of Brandenburg, having with him the reſt of his Army, the ninth day of this month departed from Landaw towards Metz. Monſieur de Boiſſey's Army alſo joined with him at a place called Swayburg, or Deuxpont.

23. It was agreed, that becauſe the State of Ireland could not be known without the Deputy's preſence, that he ſhould, in this dead time of the Year, leave the Governance of the Realm to the Council there for the time, and bring with him the whole State of the Realm, whereby ſuch Order might be taken, as the ſuperfluous Charge might be avoided, and alſo the Realm kept in quietneſs, and the Revenue of the Realm better and more profitably gathered.

25. Whereas one George Paris an Iriſhman, who had bin a practiſer between the Earl of Deſmond and other Iriſh Lords, and the French King, did now, being weary of that Matter, practiſe means to come home, and to have his old Lands in Ireland again. His Pardon was granted him, and a Letter written to him from my Council, in which he was promiſed to be conſidered and holpen.

There fell in this month a great Contention among the Scots, for the Kers ſlew the Lord of Balcleugh, in a Fray in Edinburgh; and as ſoon as they had done, they aſſociated to them the Lord Home and all his Kin: But the Governour thereupon ſummoned an Army to go againſt them; but at length, becauſe the Dowager of Scotland favoured the Kers and Homes, and ſo did all the French Faction, the French King having alſo ſent for 5000 Scotch Footmen, and 500 Horſemen, for his Aid in theſe Wars, the Governour agreed the 5000 Footmen under the leading of the Earl of Caſſils; and 500 Light-Horſemen, of which the Kers and the Homes ſhould be Captains, and go with ſuch Power into France, that they might be in ſuch place as the French King would appoint them to ſerve in, by Chriſtmaſs, or Candlemaſs at the furtheſt. And thus he truſted to be well rid of his moſt mortal Enemies.

27. The Scots hearing that George Paris practiſed for Pardon, committed him to Ward in Striveling-Caſtle.

25. Monſieur de Rue having burnt in France eighteen leagues in length, and three leagues in breadth; having pillaged, and ſacked, and razed the fair Towns of Noyon, Roy, Nelle, and Chamy, the King's new Houſe of Follambray, and infinite other Villages, Bulwarks, and Gentlemens Houſes in Champaign and Picardy, returned into Flanders.

23. The Emperor in his Perſon came to the Town of Metz with his Army, which was reckoned 45000 Footmen, as the Bruit went, and 7000 Horſemen. The Duke d' Alva with a good Band went to view the Town; upon whom iſſued out the Souldiers of the Town, and ſlew of his Men about 2000, and kept him play till the main force of the Camp came down, which cauſed them to retire with loſs. On the French Party was the Duke of Nemours hurt on the Thigh. There was in the Town as Captain, the Duke of Guiſe; and there were many other great Lords with him, as the Prince of Rochſurion, the Duke de Nemours, the Vicedam of Chartres, Pierro Stozzy, Monſieur Chaſtillion, and many other Gentlemen.

November.

5. Monſieur de Villandry returned to declare, how the King his Maſter did again offer to deliver four Ships againſt which Judgment had paſſed. He ſaid, The King would appoint Men to hear our Merchants at Paris, which ſhould be Men of the beſt ſort. He ſaid likewiſe, how the King his Maſter meant to mend the Ordinance, of which Amendment he brought Articles.

7. Theſe Articles were delivered to be conſidered by the Secretaries.

9. Certain were thought to be ſought out by ſeveral Commiſſions; viz. Whether I were juſtly anſwered of the Plate, Lead, Iron, &c. that belonged to Abbeys? Whether I were juſtly anſwered the Profit of Alome, Copper, Fuſtians, &c. which were appointed to be ſold? and of ſuch Land as the King my Father ſold, and ſuch-like Articles.

12. Monſieur Villandry received anſwer for the firſt Article, as he did before, How I meant not by taking freely ſo few, to prejudice the reſt. For hearing of our Merchants Matters at Paris, by an inferior Council, We thought both too dilatory after theſe long Suits, and alſo unreaſonable, becauſe the inferior Council would undoe nothing (though cauſe appeared) which had been before judged by the higher Council. And as for the New Ordinances, we liked them in effect as ill as their Old, and deſired none other but the Old accuſtomed ones which have been uſed in France of late Time, and to be yet continued between England and the Low-Country. Finally, We deſire no more Words, but Deeds.

4. The Duke d' Aumale being left in Lorrain, both to ſtop the Emperor's Proviſion, to annoy his Camp, and to take up the Straglers of the Army, with a Band of 400 Men of Arms, which is 1200 Horſe, and 800 Light-horſe, hearing how Marqueſs Albert began to take the Emperor's part, ſent firſt certain Light-horſe to view what they intended. Thoſe Avan-Couriers lighted on a Troop of 500 Horſemen, who drove them back till they came to the Duke's Perſon; whereupon the Skirmiſh grew ſo great, that the Marqueſs with 12000 Footmen, and 1000 Horſemen, came to his Mens ſuccours, ſo the Duke's Party was diſcomfited, the Duke himſelf taken and hurt in many places; Monſieur de Roan was alſo ſlain, and many other Gentlemen ſlain and taken. This Fight was before Toul, into which Fort eſcaped a great part of the Light-Horſe.

6. Heading Town and Caſtle was taken by the Monſieur de Rux. The Caſtle was reckoned too well ſtored of all things, and rendred either by Cowardice or Treaſon. The Battery was very ſmall, and not ſuitable. The moſt was, that the Captain, Monſieur Jo-was, with one of the first shots of the Cannon, slain, and his Lieutenant with him.

In this month Ferdinando Gonzaga besieged St. Martins in Piedmont.

18. There was a Commission granted out to Sir Richard Cotton, Sir John Gates, Sir Robert Bowes, and Sir Walter Mildmay, to examine the account of the fall of Mony, by the two Proclamations.

20. The Lord Ogle leaving the Wardenship of the Middle Marches, because my Lord Evers Land lay there, he was made Deputy-Warden there, with the Fee of 600 Merks; and Sir Thomas Dacres of the East Marches, with the Fee of 500 Merks.

24. Thomas Gresham came from Antwerp hither, to declare how Monsieur de Langie, Treasurer to the Emperor, of Flanders, was sent to him from the Regent with a certain Pacquet of Letters which the Burgonions had taken in Bullonois, coming from the Dowager of Scotland: The Effect whereof was, How she had committed George Peris the Irish man to Prison, because she had heard of his meaning to return into England; how she had found the Pardon he had, and divers other Writings; and how she had sent O-Coniers's Son into Ireland, to comfort the Lords of Ireland. Also he shewed certain Instructions, Anno 1548, upon the Admiral's fall, given to a Gentleman that came hither, That if there were any here of the Admiral's Faction, he should do his uttermost to raise an Uproar.

29. Henry Knowls was sent in Post into Ireland with a Letter, to lay the Deputy, if he met him, in Ireland, because of the Business; and that he should seem to stay for his own Affairs, and prolong his going from week to week, lest it be perceived. Also he had with him certain Articles concerning the whole State of the Realm, which the Deputy was willed to Answer.

30. There was a Letter of Thanks written to the Regent, and sent to Mr. Chamberlain, to deliver her for the gentle Overture made to Thomas Gresham by the Treasurer Langie. He was also willed to use gentle words in the delivery of the Letters, wishing a further Amity: And for recompence of her Overture, to tell her of the French King's practice, for 5000 Scotch Footmen, and 500 Horsemen. And also how he taketh up by Exchange at Lubeck 100000 l. whereby appeareth some meaning that way the next Spring.

28. The Lord Paget was put to his Fine of 6000 l. and 2000 l. diminished, to pay it within the space of—Years, at days limited.

Here the Journal ends, or if more was written by the King, it is lost.

Number 1.

A Collection of Paſſages of Scripture againſt Idolatry, in French, dedicated to the Protector.

In Trinity Coll. Libr. Cambridg.

LE fervent zele que Je vous apercoy avoir en la Reformation de Idolatrie, Tres-cher et bien aimè Oncle, ma incitè comme par maniere de paſſe temps, en liſant la ſainct Eſcriture, de nôter pluſieurs lieux en icelle qui defendent de n'adorer ny faire aucuns Images. Non ſeulement de Dieux Eſtranges, mais auſi de ne former choſe penſant la faire ſemblable à la Majeſtè de Dieu le Creature ſi tres bahy. Veu qui lui meſme & ſon St. Eſprit, par la bouche de ſes Prophets, L'a ſi ſouvent defendu, que tant de gens ont osè et oſent commetre Idolatrie en faiſant et adorant les Images. Mais Je croy que ceſtoit pourtant qu'ils n'avoient ou n'entendoit pas ſes paroles. Car comme il dit il ne peut eſtre veu en choſes qui ſoient materielles. Mais veut eſtre veu par ſes ouvres, ni plus ne moins que quand on voit quelque excellente piece d'ouvrage ſans voir ouvrier qui L'a fait, on peut Imaginer ſon excellence : Ainſi regardant et conſiderant l' excellence du Firmament et les choſes tant parfaites et merveilleuſes, que y ſont compriſes, nom pouvons Imaginer quelle è le Createur qui les a formées ſeulement par ſa parole, et en telle maniere noſtre Oeil Spirituel pouroit beaucoup mieux voir quelle choſe c'eſt que de Dieu, que noſtre Oeil corporell ne le pourroit voir en choſe que Creature humane ait fait et formée. Pourtant, cher Oncle, apres avoir noté en ma Bible en Anglois pluſieurs ſentences qui contradiſent à tout Idolatrie à celle fin de m'apprendre et exercer en l' Eſcriture Francoiſe, je me ſuis amuſè à le Tranſlater en la dite Langue Francoiſe : Puis les ay fait reſcrire en ſe petit livret, lequell de tresbon cueur Je vous offre : Priant Dieu le Createur de vous donner grace de continuer en voſtre labeur ſpirituel au ſalut de voſtre ame et à l'honneur et gloire d' iceluy.

Then follow 72 Paſſages out of the Old Teſtament, againſt worſhipping ſtrange Gods or Images, with little Paraphraſes of his own, he concludes.

Il y a autres places en la ſainte Eſcriture, tant Apocryphes que autres, deſquelles je ne fais nulle mention pour le preſent, qui toutesfois ſont correſpondentes à celles dont eſt fait mention par cy devant. Mais pour tant que quaſi tous les Prophetes et autres Saints, deſquels la Sainte Eſcriture parle deffendent de ne commetre Idolatrie Je deſire et exhorte toute la Congregation des Chreſtiens qu'un chaſcun d'eux vueille delaiſſer c'eſt abominable vice.

A Dif-

A Discourse about the Reformation of my Abuses.

Number 2.

The Government of this Realm is divided into two parts, one Ecclesiastical, and the other Temporal.

THe Ecclesiastical consisteth in setting forth the Word of God, continuing the People in Prayer, and the Discipline. The setting forth of the Word of God, consisteth in the good discreet Doctrine and Example of the Teachers, and Spiritual Officers; for as the good husbandman maketh his Ground good and plentiful, so doth the true preacher with Doctrine and Example, print and graft in the Peoples mind the Word of God, that they at length become plentiful. Prayers also to God must be made continually, of the People, and Officers of the Church, to assist them with his Grace. And those Prayers must first, with good consideration, be set forth, and Faults therein be amended. Next, being set forth, the People must continually be allured to hear them. For Discipline, it were very good that it went forth, and that those that did notably offend in Swearing, Rioting, neglecting of God's Word, or such the like Vices, were duly punished, and that those that should be the Executors of this Discipline, were Men endued Honesty, Wisdom, and Judgment. But because those Bishops that should execute it, some for Papistry, some for Ignorance, some for Age, some for their ill Name, some for all these, are Men unable to execute Discipline; it is therefore a thing unmeet for these Men: Therefore it were necessary, that those that were appointed to be Bishops, or Preachers, were honest in Life, and learned in their Doctrine; and by rewarding of such Men, others might be allured to follow their good Life. Cotton Libr. Nero C. 10.

As for the Prayers, and Divine Service, it were meet the Faults were drawn out (as it was appointed) by Learned Men, and so the book to be established, and all Men willed to come thereunto to hear the Service, as I have put in Remembrances in Articles touching the causes of this Parliament. But as for Discipline, I would with no authority given generally to all Bishops, but that Commission be given to those that be of the best sort of them to exercise it in their Dioceses.

Thus much generally for Religion.

Temporal Regiment.

The Temporal Regiment consisteth, in well-ordering, enriching, and defending the whole Body Politick of the Common-Wealth, and every part of the whole, to one Part, not the other. The Example thereof may be best taken of a Man's Body; for even as the Arm defendeth, helpeth, and aideth the whole Body, chiefly the Head, so ought Servingmen, and Gentlemen chiefly, and such-like kind of People, be always ready to the defence of their Country, and chiefly of their their Superior and Governor; and ought in all things to be vigilant and painful for the encreasing and aiding of their Country. And forasmuch as they, in serving their King and Country, have divers great and manifold Charges, even as the Arm doth many times bear great stresses for defence of the Head and Body, having no kind of way to enrich themselves, neither by Merchandize, neither by Handicraft, neither by Husbandry; as the Arm doth decoct no Meat it self, nor engendereth no Blood; therefore even as the Stomach, Liver, and Lights, which parts engender the Blood, doth send Nourishment to the Arms and Legs sufficient to strengthen the Part, even so must the Artificers so use their Gain in Working, and so truly and justly make that they work: The Merchants must so sell their Ware, and so labour to bring in strange Commodities: The Husbandmen must pay such Rents, and so sell Things that come of the increase of the Ground, that the Hands, and the Legs, that is to say, the States of Gentlemen and of Servingmen, may well do the Common-Wealth that Service they ought to do. And as the Gentlemen and Servingmen ought to be provided for, so ought not they neither to have so much as they have in France, where the Peasantry is of no value, neither yet meddle in other Occupations, for the Arms and Legs doth never draw the whole Blood from the Liver, but leaveth it sufficient to work on, neither doth meddle in any kind of engendring of Blood. No more no one part of the Body doth serve for two Occupations; even so neither the Gentleman ought to be a Farmer, nor the Merchant an Artificer, but to have his Art particularly. Furthermore, no Member in a well-fashioned and whole Body, is too big for the proportion of the Body: So must there be in a well-ordered Common-Wealth, no Person that shall have more than the proportion of the Country will bear; so it is hurtful immoderately to enrich any one Part. I think the Country can bear no Merchant to have more Land than 100 l. no Husbandman nor Farmer worth above 100 or 200 l. no Artifice above 100 Merks; no Labourer much more than he spendeth. I speak now generally, and in such Cases may fail in one Particular; but this is true. This Common-Wealth may not bear one Man to have more than two Farms, than one Benefice, than 2000 Sheep, and one kind of Art to live by. Wherefore as in the Body no part hath too much, nor too little; so in a Common-Wealth ought every part to have ad victum non ad saturitatem. And there is no Part admitted in the Body that doth not work and take pains, so ought there no part of the Common-Wealth to be but labourſome in his Vocation. The Gentleman ought to labour in Service in his Country; the Servingman ought to wait diligently on his Master; the Artificer ought to labour in his Work; the Husbandman in Tilling the Ground; the Merchant in passing the Tempests; but the Vagabonds ought clearly to be banished, as is the superfluous Humour of the Body, that is to say, the Spittle and Filth which because it is for no use, it is put out by the strength of Nature. This is the true ordering of the state of a well-fashioned Common-Wealth. That every Part do obey one Head, one Governor, one Law, as all Parts of the Body obey the Head, agree among themselves, and one not to eat another up through greediness, but that we see that Order, Moderation, and Reason, bridle the Affections. But this is most of all to be had in a Common-Wealth well-ordered, That the Laws and Ordinances be well executed, duly obeyed, and miniſtred without corruption: Now having ſeen how things ought to be, let us firſt ſee how now they be ordered, and in what ſtate they ſtand now, and then go forward to ſeek a Remedy.

The firſt Point in ordering the Common-Wealth we touched, was, That the Gentlemen, Noblemen, and Servingmen, ſhould ſtand ſtoutly to the defence of their Superior and Governor, and ſhould be painful in ordering their Country; which thing, although in ſome part, and the moſt part, be well (thanks be to God) yet in ſome parts is not abſolutely, which I ſhall ſhew hereafter particularly.

But the ſecond Point, for maintenance of the State of Landed-Men, is ill looked to; for that State of Gentlemen and Noblemen, which is truly to termed the State of Nobles, hath alonely not exerciſed the Gain of living: for Merchants, have enhaunced their Ware; Farmers have enhaunced their Corn and Cattel; Labourers their Wages; Artificers the price of their Workmanſhip; and Mariners and Boatſmen their Hire for Service, whereby they recompenſe the loſs of things they buy; but the moſt part of true Gentlemen (I mean not theſe Farming Gentlemen, nor Clarking Knights) have little or nothing increaſed their Rents; yet their Houſe-keeping is dearer, their Meat is dearer, their Liveries dearer, their Wages greater; which thing at length, if ſpeedy Remedy be not had, will bring that State into utter Ruin, Quod Deus.

The Artificers work falſly; the Clothiers uſe deceit in Cloth; the Maſons in Building; the Clockmakers in their Clocks; the Joiner in his working of Timber, and ſo forth all other almoſt, to the intent they would have Men oftner come to them for amending their Things, and ſo have more Gain, although at the beginning they take out of meaſure. The Merchants adventure not to bring in ſtrange Commodities, but loiter at home, ſend forth ſmall Hoys with two or three Mariners, occupy exchange of Mony, buy and ſell Victual, ſteal out Bullion, Corn, Victual, Wood, and ſuch-like things, out of the Realm, and ſell their Ware unreaſonably. The Huſbandmen and Farmers take their Ground at a ſmall Rent, and dwell not on it, but let it to poor Men for triple the Rent they take it for, and ſell their Fleſh, Corn, Milk, Butter, &c. at unreaſonable prices. The Gentleman conſtrained by Neceſſity and Poverty, becometh a Farmer, a Graſier, or a Sheep-maſter. The Graſier, the Farmer, the Merchants become Landed-men, and call themſelves Gentlemen, though they be Churls; yea, the Farmer will have ten Farms, ſome twenty, and will be a Pedlar-Merchant. The Artificer will leave the Town, and for his more Paſtimes, will live in the Country; yea, and more than that, will be a Juſtice of Peace, and will think ſcorn to have it denied him; ſo Lordly they be now-a-days: for now they are not content with 2000 Sheep, but they muſt have 20000, or elſe they think themſelves not well; they muſt have twenty mile ſquare their own Land, or full of their Farms, and four or five Crafts to live by is too little, ſuch Hell-hounds be they. For Idle Perſons, there were never I think more than be now; the Wars, Men think, is the cauſe thereof, ſuch Perſons can do nothing but Rob and Steal; but ſlack execution of the Laws hath hath been the chiefeſt ſore of all; the Laws have been manifeſtly broken, the Offenders baniſhed, and either by Bribery, or fooliſh Pity, eſcaped puniſhment. The Diſſention, and Diſagreement, both for private Matters, and alſo in Matters of Religion, hath been no little cauſe, but the Principal hath been the diſobedient and contentious talking and doing of the fooliſh and fond People, which for lack of teaching, have wandered, and broken wilfully and diſobediently the Laws of this Realm. The Lawyers alſo, and Judges, have much offended in Corruption and Bribery.

Furthermore, they do now-a-days much uſe to foreſtall, not only private Markets of Corn and Victual, whereby they enhaunce the price thereof, but alſo ſend to the Sea too, aboard Ships, and take the Wine, Sugar, Dates, or any other Ware, and bring it to London, where they ſell at double the price. What ſhall I ſay of thoſe that buy and ſell Offices of Truſt, that impropriate Benefices, that deſtroy Timber; that not conſidering the ſuſtaining of Men of their Corn, turn Till Ground to Paſture; that uſe exceſs in Apparel, in Diet, and in building of Incloſures of Waſtes and Commons, of thoſe that caſt falſe and ſeditious Bills; but that the thing is ſo tedious, long, and lamentable to entreat of the Particulars, that I am weary to go any further in the Particulars; wherefore I will ceaſe, having told the worſt, becauſe the beſt will ſave it ſelf.

Now I will begin to entreat of a Remedy. The Ill in this Common-Wealth, as I have before ſaid, ſtandeth in deceitful working of Artificers, uſing of Exchange and Uſury, making vent with Hoys only into Flanders; conveying of Bullion, Lead, Bell-mettle, Cooper, Wood, Iron, Fiſh, Corn, and Cattel, beyond Sea; inhauncing of Rents; uſing no Arts to live by; keeping of many Sheep, and many Farms; Idleneſs of People; diſobedience of the lower ſort; buying and ſelling of Offices, Impropriations, Benefices; turning Till Ground to Paſture; exceeding in Apparel, Diet, and Building; enclofing of Commons; caſting of ill and ſeditious Bills.

Theſe Sores muſt be cured with theſe Medicines or Plaiſters. 1. Good Education. 2. Deviſing of good Laws. 3. Executing the Laws juſtly, without reſpect of Perſons. 4. Example of Rulers. 5. Puniſhing of Vagabonds and idle Perſons. 6. Encouraging the Good. 7. Ordering well the Cuſtomers. 8. Engendring Friendſhip in all parts of the Common-Wealth. Theſe be the chief Points that tend to order well the whole Common-Wealth.

And for the firſt, as it is in order firſt, ſo it ſeemeth to be in dignity and degree; for Horace ſaith very wiſely,

Quo eſt imbuta recens ſervabit odorem
Teſta diu——

With whatſoever thing the New Veſſel is imbued, it will long keep the ſavour, ſaith Horace; meaning, That for the moſt part Men be as they be brought up, and Men keep longeſt the ſavour of their firſt bringing up. Wherefore ſeeing that it ſeemeth ſo neceſſary a thing, We will ſhew our device herein. Youth muſt be brought up, ſome in Husbandry, ſome in Working, Graving, Gilding, Joining, Printing, making making of Clothes, even from their tendereſt Age, to the intent they may not, when they come to Man's Eſtate, loiter as they do now adays, and neglect, but think their Travail ſweet and honeſt. And for this purpoſe would I wiſh that Artificers and others were either commanded to bring up their Sons in like Trade, or elſe had ſome Places appointed them in every good Town, where they ſhould be Apprentices, and bound to certain kind of Conditions. Alſo that thoſe Vagabonds that take Children and teach them to beg, ſhould, according to their demerits, be worthily puniſhed. This ſhall well eaſe and remedy the deceitful working of Things, diſobedience of the lower Sort, writing of Seditious Bills, and will clearly take away the Idleneſs of People.

2. Deviſing of good Laws, I have ſhewed my Opinion heretofore, what Statutes I think moſt neceſſary to be enacted this Seſſions; nevertheleſs I would wiſh, that beſide them hereafter, when time ſhall ſerve, the ſuperfluous and tedious Statutes were brought into one Sum together, and made more plain and ſhort, to the intent that Men might the better underſtand them; which thing ſhall much help to advance the profit of the Common-wealth.

3. Nevertheleſs when all theſe Laws be made, eſtabliſhed, and enacted, they ſerve to no purpoſe, except they be fully and duly executed. By whom? By thoſe that have Authority to execute; that is to ſay, the Noblemen, and the Juſtices of Peace. Wherefore I would wiſh, that after this Parliament were ended, thoſe Noblemen, except a few that ſhould be with Me, went to their Countries, and there ſhould ſee the Statutes fully and duly executed; and that thoſe Men ſhould be put from being Juſtices of Peace, that be touched or blotted with thoſe Vices that be againſt theſe new Laws to be eſtabliſhed; for no Man that is in fault himſelf, can puniſh another for the ſame Offence.

Turpe eſt Doctori cum culpa redarguit ipſum.

And theſe Juſtices being put out, there is no doubt for execution of the Laws.

Cotton Libr. Nero C. 10.

EDwardus ſextus Dei Gratia Angliæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ, Rex, &c. Omnibus qui præſentes videbunt Literas Salutem. Sereniſſimi patres noſtri Reges Angliæ deliberantes & ſecumipſis cogitantes, de eo genere quo uti debeant erga Deum, Patriam, & eos qui ſuæ ditioni erant ſubjecti, ſatis facile invenerunt nihil tam ad ſuum officium pertinere quam ut bonos, fortes, magnanimos, prudentes & claros viros (pro ſingulorum eorum meritis) honore gloriaq; afficerent, & amicitiam, ſocietatem, conſenſionem quandam in bonis rebus inter omnes, præcipue vero inter pares foverent. Honorem enim (ut certe est) præmium virtutis judicabant; concordiam vero fundamentum & auctricem rerumpublicarum existimabant. Hæc igitur illis perpendentibus, optimum visum est constituere societatem, cœtum aut conventum aliquem eorum, qui in domesticis pacis negotiis optime se gesserant, & in militaribus pugnis fortiter & prudenter se exercuerant. Hosq; voluerunt in signum concordiæ & unitatis Tibias fascia quadam circumligare, quasi eo facto divulgantes sese non dubitare Patriæ, Religionis & Domini causa vitam & bona profundere, eamq; ob causam Ordinem Garterii nominaverunt. Quem quidem Ordinem omnium voce celebratum, serpens ille humano generi infestus Satanas conspiciens, tantopere ad virtutem homines incitare, conatus est pœnitus delere. In quo tantum elaboravit, tam diligenter prædam quæsivit, tam ingeniose & callide homines decepit, ut tandem repleverit decreta hujus Societatis multis ambiguis, superstitiosis, Papisticis & inter se contrariis sententiis. Putandum enim erit, quod si Evangelii lux non apparuisset, de isto Ordine penitus actum fuisset, saltem de his rebus in Ordine in quo bonorum nomen meruissent. Indies enim crevit malum; Nos autem summopere commoti, antiquitate, magnificentia & pulchritudine hujus Ordinis, omnibus viribus elaboravimus ad eum reducendum ad statum pristinum. Quapropter in cœtu quodam celebrato die Anno Dom. 1551 Regni vero nostri

1. Primum Concluſum Statutumq; existit, quod hic ordo posthac appellabitur Ordo Garterii; non Ordo Sancti Georgii: nec idem Georgius amplius posthac appellabitur; nec nominabitur Patronus Ordinis, ne ille honor qui soli Deo debeatur, cuidam creaturæ attribuatur.

2. Item Milites circumligabunt Tibias Garteriis (ut vulgo dicunt) quibus inscribunt hæc verba. Honi soit qui mal y pense; in collis autem cathenarum more gerent equitem sculptum, altera manu tenentem gladium penetrantem librum, in quem gladium scribetur Protectio, in Librum vero Verbum Dei, altera autem Clipeum, in quem inscribetur Fides, hac re significantes se concordes protectores Verbi Divini & Fidei esse existere. Cum enim ab Georgio eodem auferetur honor ille quod Patronus amplius Ordinis non erit, Milites non amplius gestabunt eundem divum, post Festum Michaelis proxime sequentis.

3. Arma tamen Ordinis maneant in eodem Statu quo antea manserunt sunt solita, viz. Crux rubea in Campo Argenteo.

4. Numerus militum erunt 24 præter præfectum, si enim plures existant tum minori in honore habebitur Collegam esse Ordinis, hi autem Milites jam existunt.

5. Quod Rex Angliæ, Hæredes & Successores ejus, erunt hujus Ordinis Præfecti quemadmodum & solitum est antehac. Et quia sæpe oriuntur ambiguitates, contentiones & mutationes temporum; propter quas aut tolli, aut definiri, aut adjungi debent aliqua decreta hujus Ordinis sæpe etiam in mortuorum Militum locum alii substituantur necesse est. Idcirco concluſum est, quod licet eidem Regi Angliæ, aliqua tali re mota Advocatis sex ex Sociis Ordinis, cum eorum consensu, celebrato in loco aliquo, mutare, definire, addere, aut detrahere ab hoc Ordine; ut in bono bonum videbitur, & etiam eligere, in numerum Militum, alios omnes, qui ſunt generoſi, inſignia geſtantes, a parte Patrum & Matrum per tres progenies ſive generationes quoſcunque arbitrabuntur maxime idoneos.

6. Omnes hi qui rei ſunt inventi Capitalium Criminum, aut ignave a prælio aufugerunt, aut Notabili Crimine ſunt contaminati, quanquam mors illis non infligatur, tamen Milites Ordines eſſe deſinent. Æquum enim qui eſſe poteſt, eum qui inſigni & fœdo aliquo vitio ſit contaminatus, in bonorum Societate aut cœtu manere. Capitalia vero ſint Crimina, pro quibus leges judicant debere mortis pœnam ſubire.

7. Si autem idem Ordinis præfectus intelligat locum aliquem vacuum eſſe, tum mittet ad Milites vicinos & propinquos ut certo quodam die adſint, haſq; literas mittet triduum ante diem celebrandi cœtus; niſi forte adſint plus quam ſex Milites.

8. Qui Milites Congregati in cœtu quodam veſtibus Ordinis induti, ſi locus aliquis ſit vacuus, ſcribent unuſquiſq; nomina trium Principum: viz. Imperatorum, Regum, Archiducum, Ducum, Marchionum, Comitum, aut Vicecomitum, nomina tria Baronum, ſive Dominorum, & nomina trium Militum Aureatorum quos Baccalaureos Milites vulgo dicunt.

9. Cum nomina ſunt ſcripta, tum Rex Angliæ Ordinis præfectus ex eorum numero eliget quem maxime idoneum arbitrabitur ex antiqua illuſtriq; familia natum, aut qui ſuis geſtis præclaris nomen, famam & honorem ſummum acquiſiverit, nam in electione Militum divitias reſpicere nullo modo oportet, ſed virtutem & generis Nobilitatem, primo autem in loco virtutem.

10. Miles electus, cum proxime adſit, adducetur in Domum ubi cœtus celebratur per duos Collegas Ordinis, Præfectus induet eum cathena ſive Collario Roſarum circumligatarum faſciis cum ſculpta equitis imagine, ut prædixi, appendente; duo vero Collegæ faſcia, ſive ut vulgo dicunt, Garterio tibiam circumligabunt: * Tradetur etiam electo Militi liber horum decretorum.

11. Miles vero electus ibit Windeſoram, & Præfectus Ordinis mittet ad illum ſubſtitutum ſuum & duos coadjutores, qui collocabunt eum, ſi fieri poſſit, ſine aliorum Militum detrimento in ſede, ejus gradui Nobilitatis apta & accomoda, & ſecundum veterem modum veſtes recipiet (quas vulgo dicunt Anglice, The Mantel, the Cirtel, and the Hood) & his veſtibus indutus audiet preces divinas in ſede illi conſtituta, ſimul cum ſubſtituto & coadjutoribus Communionem recipiens.

12. Poſt preces abſolutas recipiet hoc jusjurandum; ſe pro viribus velle ſuſtinere & defendere omnes honores, titulos, querelas & Dominia Regis Angliæ Ordinis Præfecti; velle etiam (quantum in ſe eſt) protegere, amare & colere Divini Verbi ſtudioſos; velle deponere humanas Traditiones & augere Gloriam & Honorem Dei.

13. Ille ordo qui inſtitutus fuit olim de inſignibus, gladiis, galæis & armis reponendis in cellis aut ſedibus, maneat in priori forma.

14. Adhæc cum Dedicatio Ordinis auferatur a divo Georgio, & ſi tempus anni non ſit idoneum ad multos homines cogendos, & ex patria accerſendos, præſertim vero ne ipſam dedicationem Verbis auferentes ſe videremur retinere, idcirco ſtatutum eſt cœtum cælebratum fore, ut olim in Anglia die Divi Georgii; ſic nunc primo Die Sabbati, & primo Die Dominico in menſe Decembris, niſi forte primus dies menſis Decembris ſit dies Dominicus; tunc autem celebrabitur primo Die Sabbati, & ſecundo die Dominico.

15. Primo vero Die Sabbati Milites qui adſunt (omnes autem adeſſe debent niſi forte habeant licitam excuſationem) audient preces Veſpertinas inſtitutas Autoritate Parliamenti veſtibus Ordinis induti, ſedentes quiſque in ſede conſtituta. Miles autem electus non collocatus in ſede ſtabit directe verſus eum locum ubi collocabitur.

16. Die Dominico ſequenti in aurora audient ſupradicti Milites preces, & qui ſe paratos facere poſſint, Communionem recipient, veſperi etiam audient preces veſpertinas.

17. Milites autem abſentes tenebuntur eadem facere in ſuis ædibus toto hoc tempore veſtibus Ordinis induti.

18. Præterea Milites qui adſunt veſtibus Ordinis induti prandebunt omnes, ab uno latere ſedentes in eodem gradu quo collocantur Windeſoræ, in cellis in cœtum etiam intrabunt hoc die, ut ſi, quid faciendum ſit, perficiant.

19. Cantatores & Præbendarii fruentur ſuis poſſeſſionibus durante Vita, poſt mortem autem eorum conferentur in Concionatores in caſtro Windeſoræ.

20. Pauperes autem qui in eodem Collegio manent, habebunt omnia ſua priſtino more, loci autem conferentur in Milites vulneratos aut admodum ſenes viros, ſolum privabuntur ſuperſtitioſis & vanis Cæremoniis quibus uti ſunt ſoliti, ut Oratione pro defunctis, &c. Quemadmodum vero ſoliti ſunt miſſæ adeſſe ſic jam adſint in precibus conſtitutis.

21. Sunt autem certæ ſummæ Argenti quæ ſolent impendi cum moriantur Milites Ordinis.

24. Sigillum Ordinis habebit ex uno latere Arma Angliæ & Franciæ ſimul cum Armis Ordinis circumligata hac circumſcriptione, Verbum Domini manet in æternum, ex altera parte equitem ſculptum, ut Milites geſtabunt circumligatum faſcia ſive Garterio.

25. Hoc ſigillo Cancellarius ſigillabit, omnia decreta, licentias, conſtitutiones, literas & reliqua omnia quæ ad ordinem prædictum pertinent aut ullo modo debent pertinere.

26. Annotator in magno Libro Annotabit Latine quibus temporibus quiſque miles fuerit electus, quibus mortuus, quænam ſancita erant decreta, quænam diſſoluta, & ſi quæ erunt alia pertinentia ad Ordinem ſupradictum, hunc autem librum relinquet in Caſtro Windeſoræ ſuo ſucceſſori in eodem officio.

27. Rex Heroaldorum & inſignium Garter ſervabit nomina & cognomina, arma & inſignia cujuſq; Militis electi, eundem librum relinquens ſuo ſucceſſori, & ſi quæ ſit ambiguitas de armis, ipſe dijudicabit.

28. Præceſſor Ordinis geſtans virgam nigram præibit ordinem & ſolium cuſtodiet, & eandem autoritatem habebit, qua antehac uſus eſt. Quod ſiquis Militum contumelioſe & graviter offenderit, & ejus criminis in cœtu fuerit convictus, Præceſſor Ordinis cum Rege Heroaldorum eum exuent catena & Garterio.

29. Adhæc cum aliquis peregrinus Rex in Militum numerum ſubſtituatur & eligatur, Cæremoniis hujus Ordinis non detinebitur, ſed prout placuerit.

30. Poſt electionem vero præfectus Ordinis mittet duos Milites ejuſdem Ordinis, qui poſt preces in ejus patria vulgares induent eum veſtibus illis quæ ſolent geſtari, viz. Anglice, The Mantel, the Cirtel, and the Hood. In collum etiam imponent catenam roſarium cum equite ſculpto appendente & faſcia vulgo dicto Garterio.

31. Poſtea per procuratorem in ſede collocabitur, nullum omnino ſacramentum recipiens, nec preces unquam alias quam ſolitas audiens.

32. Quod Rex Angliæ poſſit diſpenſare & veniam dare omittendi illas Cæremonias, ſi cauſa poſtulet.

33. Quod hi articuli ut monumenta, decreta & Leges Ordinis reponentur in Collegio Windeſoræ, omnes autem his contrariæ penitus abrogabuntur.

FINIS.

A Paper concerning a Free Mart in England.

Number 4.

The Reaſons and Cauſes why it is now moſt neceſſary to have a Mart in England.

1. BEcauſe our vent of Clothes might be open in all Wars.

2. Becauſe our Merchants Goods might be out of danger of Strangers, without fear of arreſting for every light Cauſe.

3. Becauſe it would much enrich the Realm; for as a Market enricheth a Town, ſo doth a Mart enrich a Realm.

4. Becauſe for at a need, round Sums of Mony might be of them borrowed that haunt the Mart.

5. Becauſe we ſhould have a great multitude of Ships ſtrangers to ſerve in the Wars.

6. Becauſe all ſtrangers Goods, when War is made, ſhould be in our danger.

7. Becauſe we ſhould buy all things at the firſt hand of Strangers, whereas now the Spaniards ſell to the Flemings their Wares, and the Flemings to us.

8. Becauſe the Towns toward the Sea-ſide ſhould be much more populous.

9. Becauſe whereas now they bring Tapeſtry, Points, Glaſſes, and Laces, they would then bring in Bullion, and other ſubſtantial Merchandice, to the intent to have our Cloth and our Tin.

10. Becauſe we ſhould take from our Enemies their Power, and make that they ſhould borrow no Mony of Merchants but when we liſt, at leaſt no great Sum of Mony.

The Cauſes why this Time is moſt Commodious to erect a Mart in.

1. The Wars between the French King and the Emperor, and the Ships of either ſide, maketh the Italians, Genoa's, Portugals, and Spaniards, to forbear their Trade to Antwerp. 2. The Frenchmen, the Stadts, the Spruſſes, and Ships of Eaſtland, being againſt the Emperor, will not come neither. 3. The French King invading Lorain, and fearing Flanders. 4. And the Almains lying on the River of Rhene, ſtoppeth the Courſe of Merchants out of Italy to Antwerp, and alſo Frankfort. 5. The putting of Men of War in the Town, maketh the Merchants to forbear their Traffique, and to look to their Lives. 6. The Breach of the laſt Tempeſt is like, they ſay, to make the Channel uncertain, and the Haven naught. 7. The ſtop of the Exchange to Lions, will make many Flemings Bankrupts. Theſe things will decay the Marts of Antwerp and Frankfort. But theſe Nations cannot live without a Vent, therefore they will now moſt willingly come hither if they had a Free Mart.

2. It

2. It were an easier matter to come to Southampton for the Spaniards, Britanes, Vascoins, Lombards, Geneoese, Normands, and Italians, than to go to Antwerp.

3. It were easier for the Merchants of the Eastland, the Sprusses, the Danes, Swedens, and Norvegians, to come to Hull than to Antwerp.

4. Southampton is a better Port than Antwerp.

5. The Flemings have allured Men to make a Mart there with their Privileges, having but very little Commodities; much easier shall we do it, having Cloth, Tin, Seacoal, Lead, Bellmettal, and such other Commodities, as few Realms Christian have the like; nor they when they began had no such opportunity.

How the Mart will be brought to pass.

1. Our Merchants are to be staid from a Mart or two, under pretence that they abstain because of the Imposition.

2. Then Proclamation must be made in divers places of the Realm where Merchants resort, That there shall be a free Mart kept at Southampton, with these Liberties and Customs.

1. The time of the Mart to begin after Whitsontide, and to hold on five weeks; by which means it shall not let St. James's Fair at Bristol, nor Bartholomew Fair at London.

2. All Men coming to the Mart, shall have free going and free coming, without Arresting, except in Cases of Treason, Murder, or Felony.

3. For the time of the Mart, all sorts of Men shall pay but half the Custom they do in other places of the Realm.

4. No Shipping shall be from any other place from South-Wales to Eser during that time.

5. In the Shires of Hampshire, Wiltshire, Sussex, Surrey, Kent, Dorsetshire, That no Bargain shall be made of Wares during that time but in the Mart Town.

6. A Court to correct Offenders, with Liberties thereto.

7. Some one Commodity must be assigned to the Mart, or some one kind of Cloth.

8. The Merchants of the Staple must be bargained withal, and contented with some honest Offer, to the intent by their Liberties they may not let the Mart.

9. Some more Liberties must be given to the Inhabitants of Southampton; and if Mony may be spared, some must be lent them to begin their Trade withal.

10. Our Ships on the Sea must look as well as they may, observing the Treaties, to the safeguard of the Merchants when they come.

11. If this prove well, then may another be made at Hull, to begin after Stowrbridg Fair, to the intent they may return before the great Ices come to their Seas.

The

The Diſcommodities and Letts to the Mart to be kept in England.

1. BEcauſe Strangers lack acceſs hither by Land, which they have at Antwerp.
2. The ill-working of our Clothes, which maketh them leſs eſteemed.
3. The abundance of our Clothes in Flanders will make them leſs ſought for here.
4. The Merchants have eſtabliſhed their dwelling-places at Antwerp.
5. That other Nations will ſtay their coming hither for a while by the Emperor's Commandment.
6. The denial of the Requeſt of the Merchants of the Stiliard, will ſomewhat let the Mart, if it be not looked to.
7. The poverty and littleneſs of the Town of Southampton.
8. The goodlineſs of the Rhine.

The Remedies and Anſwers thereunto.

To the firſt Point.

1. At this time when the Mart ſhould begin at Southampton, the French King and the Almains ſhall ſtop the entercourſe by Land, ſo that nothing ſhall come that way but in great danger.
2. When War ſhall be made againſt us, then our Navy may defend them.
3. As the Town of Southampton lacketh the Commodity of the Acceſs of Merchandiſe by Land, ſo it hath this Commodity, that there can be no acceſs of Enemies by Land, which may be at Antwerp, and Men think will be this Year, which is a great ſafety to the Merchants.
4. The Traffique that cometh by Land will not much diminiſh the Mart, for it is only almoſt the Venetians Traffique, who ſhall much eaſilier come hither by Sea, than to Antwerp, and with leſs danger of the Seas.

To the ſecond Point.

1. The ill-making of our Clothes will be meet to be looked on this Parliament, and order thereupon to be given. The Matter is come to ſome ripeneſs already, the Upper Houſe hath one Bill, and the Nether Houſe hath another in good forwardneſs.
2. As ill as they be made, the Flemings do at this time deſire them wonderfully, offering rather to pay the Impoſition of the Emperor than to lack them.

To the third Point.

1. It were very neceſſary that the Ships that ſhall be hereafter going, were ſtaied till the Mart were come to ſome ripeneſs.
2. The Clothes hereafter might be bought up with our Mony here, and and conveied to Southampton, to be there uttered at the Mart time, and so it should help the Mart very well.

To the fourth Point.

1. The danger of their Lives, which they now fear very much, will make them seek another Harbor to rest in more safely.
2. They came from Bruges to Antwerp only for the English Commodities, although they were setled at Bruges.
3. They have a great Commodity to come to Southampton, and a great fear of spoiling to drive them from Antwerp.
4. The Merchants never assign to themselves such a Mansion, but for more gain they will leave that, and take another.

To the fifth Point.

1. The Emperor is at this time so driven to his Shifts, that neither he shall be able to attend the stay of Mony from coming to the Mart, neither if he were able to attend, could, I think, do it, now the Flemings being put in such fear as they be of the loss of all they have.
2. The Flemings and the Spaniards which be under him, can hardlier be without us than we without them, and therefore they would hardly be brought to forbear our Traffique.

To the sixth Point.

1. It were good the Stiliard-men were for this time gently answered, and that it were seen, whether by any gentle offer of some part of their Liberties, again they might be brought to ship their Wares to the Mart. The Frenchmen also I think would easily be brought to come hither, having now none other Traffique but hither, these two Nations would suffice to begin a Mart for the first part.

To the seventh Point.

1. It is not the ability of the English Merchants only that maketh the Mart, but it is the resort of other Nations to some one place when they do exchange their Commodities one with another, for the bargaining will be as well amongst the Strangers themselves; the Spaniards with the Almains, the Italians with Flemings, the Venetians with the Danes, &c. as other Nations will bargain with Us.
2. The Merchants of London, of Bristol, and other places, will come hither for the Mart time, and traffique.
3. The Merchants will make shift enough for their Lodging.
4. There may be some of these Clothes that shall go hereafter, be bought with my Mony, and so carried to Southampton to be there uttered.

To the eighth Point.

1. Bruges, where the Mart was before, stood not on the River of Rhine, nor Antwerp doth not neither stand on that River.

2. Frankfort Mart may well ſtand for a Fair in Almain, although Southampton ſerve for all Nations that lie on the Sea-ſide; for few of thoſe come to Frankfort Mart.

The Method in which the Council repreſented Matters of State to the King. An Original. Written by Sir William Cecil, Secretary of State.

Queſtions.

1. Whether the King's Majeſty ſhall enter into the Aid of the Emperor?

Anſw. He ſhall.

A Pacto.

1. THe King is bound by the Treaty; and if he will be helped by that Treaty, he muſt do the Reciproque.

A periculo vitando.

2. If he do not Aid, the Emperor is like to Ruin, and conſequently the Houſe of Burgundy come to the French Poſſeſſion, which is perilous to England; and herein the greatneſs of the French King is dreadful.

Religio Chriſtiana.

3. The French King bringeth the Turk into Chriſtendom, and therefore that exploit to be ſtaied.

Periculum violati pacti.

4. If the Emperor, for Extremity, ſhould agree now with the French, then our Peril were double greater. 1. The Emperor's Offence for lack of Aid. 2. The French King's Enterpriſes towards us; and in this Peace, the Biſhop of Rome's devotion towards us.

Pro Repub. & Patria.

5. Merchants be ſo evil uſed, that both for the loſs of Goods and Honour, ſome Remedy muſt be ſought.

Pericula conſequentia.

6. The French King's Proceedings be ſuſpicious to the Realm, by breaking and burning of our Ships, which be the old ſtrength of this Iſle.

Declaration of Stuckley's Tale.

Anſwer, He ſhall not.

Difficile quaſi impoſſibile.

1. The Aid is to be chargeable for the Coſt, and almoſt to be executed is impoſſible.

Solitudo in periculis.

2. If the Emperor ſhould die in this Confederacy, we ſhould be left alone in the War.

Amicorum ſuſpitio vitanda.

3. It may be the German Proteſtants might be more offended with this Conjunction with the Emperor, doubting their own Cauſes.

Sperandum bene ab amicis.

4. The Amity with France is to be hoped will amend and continue; and the Commiſſioners coming may perchance reſtore.

Corro-

Corrolarium of a mean way.

Judicium.

1. So to help the Emperor, as we may alſo join with other Chriſtian Princes, and conſpire againſt the French King, as a common Enemy to Chriſtendom.

Reaſons for the Common Conjunction.

1. The Cauſe is common, and therefore there will be more Parties to it. — Auxilia communia.
2. It ſhall avoid the chargeable entry into Aid with the Emperor, according to the Treaties. — Sumptus vitandi.
3. If the Emperor ſhould die or break off, yet it is moſt likely ſome of the other Princes and Parties will remain, ſo as the King's Majeſty ſhall not be alone. — Amicorum copia.
4. The Friendſhip ſhall much advance the King's other Cauſes in Chriſtendom. — Dignitas cauſæ.
5. It ſhall be moſt honourable to break with the French King for this common Quarrel of Chriſtendom. — Pro fide & Religione.

Reaſons againſt this Conjunction.

1. The Treaty muſt be with ſo many Parties, that it can neither be ſpeedily or ſecretly concluded. — Inter multos nihil ſecretum.
2. If the Matter be revealed, and nothing concluded, then conſider the French King's Offence, and ſo may he at his leaſure be provoked to practiſe the like Conjunction againſt England with all the Papiſts. — Amicitiæ irritate.

Concluſion.

1. The Treaty to be made with the Emperor, and by the Emperor's means with other Princes. — The King's Hand.
2. The Emperor's Acceptation to be underſtanded, before we treat any thing againſt the French King.

15. Jan. 1552.

This ſeems not to be the King's Hand, but is interlined in many places by him.

Certain Articles deviſed and delivered by the King's Majeſty, for quicker, better, and more orderly diſpatch of Cauſes, by his Majeſty's Privy Council.

Cotton Libr. Nero C. 10.

1. HIs Majeſty willeth, that all Suits, Petitious, and common Warrants delivered to his Privy-Council, be conſidered by them on the Mundays in the Morning, and anſwered alſo on the Saturdays in Afternoon; and that that day, and none others, be aſſigned to that purpoſe.

2. That in anſwering theſe Suits and Bills of Petition, heed be taken that ſo many of them as pertain to any Court of his Majeſty's Laws be as much as may be referred to thoſe Courts where by order they are triable; ſuch as cannot be ended without them, be with expedition determined.

3. That in making of thoſe Warrants for Mony that paſs by them, it be foreſeen that thoſe Warrants be not ſuch as may already be diſpatcht by Warrant dormant, leſt by means of ſuch Warrants, the Accompts ſhould be uncertain.

*Provided that on Sundays they be preſent at Common-Prayer.

4. His Majeſty's pleaſure is, That on the * Sundays, they intend the Publick Affairs of this Realm; they diſpatch Anſwers to Letters for the good order of the Realm, and make full Diſpatches of all Things concluded the Week before.

5. That on the Sunday Night, the Secretaries, or one of them, ſhall deliver to his Majeſty a Memorial of ſuch Things as are to be debated by his Privy-Council, and then his Majeſty to appoint certain of them to be debated on ſeveral days, viz. Munday Afternoon, Tueſday, Wedneſday, Thurſday, Friday, Morning.

6. That

6. That on Friday at Afternoon, they shall make a Collection of such things as have been done the four days past; how many of those Articles they have concluded; how many they debated but not ended; how many the time suffered not to peruse; and also the principal Reasons that moved them to conclude on such Matters as seemeth doubtful.

7. That on Saturday Morning they shall present this Collection to his Majesty, and know his Pleasure upon such things as they have concluded, and also upon all the private Suits.

8. That on Sunday Night again, his Majesty having received of the Secretaries such new Matters as hath arisen upon new occasion with such Matters as his Council have left, some not determined, and some not debated, shall appoint what Matters, and on which days shall be determined, the next week following.

9. That none of them departed his Court for longer than two days, without there be left here at the least eight of the Council, and that not without giving notice thereof to the King's Majesty.

10. That they shall make no manner of Assembly or Meeting in Council, without there be to the number of four at the least.

11. Furthermore, if they be assembled to the number of four, and under the number of six, then they shall reason and debate things, examine all Inconveniences and Dangers, and also Commodities on each side; make those things plain which seem diffuse at the first opening; and if they agree amongst themselves, then at the next full Assembly of six, they shall make a perfect conclusion and end with them.

12. Also if there rise such matter of weight, as it shall please the King's Majesty himself to be at the debating of, then warning shall be given, whereby the more may be at the debating of it.

13. If such Matter shall happen to rise as shall require long debating or reasoning, or e're it come to a full conclusion or end, then his Majesty's Council shall not intermeddle other Causes, nor fall to other Matters for that day, until they have brought it to some end.

14. When Matters for lack of time be only debated, and yet brought to no end, then it shall be noted how far, and to what Point the Matter is brought, and which have been the principal Reasons on each side, to the intent when the Matter is treated or spoken of again, it may the sooner and easilier come to conclusion.

15. In Matters that be long, tedious, and busy, there may be pointed or chosen two or three, more or less, as the case shall seem to require, to prepare, set forth, and make plain the Matters, and to bring report thereof, whereby the things being less cumbrous and diffuse, may the easilier be dispatcht.

Finally;

Finally; If upon Advertiſements, Letters, or other occaſion whatſoever there ariſe, Matters of great Importance, that require haſte, his Majeſty's meaning is not, but that ſuch Matters be waved, conſidered, and determined, notwithſtanding the Articles pointed to ſeveral days, ſo that nevertheleſs this Order be not generally or commonly broken.

17. That all Warrants for Reward above 40 l. and for his Buſineſs or Affairs above 100 l. paſs not but under his Signature.

18. That no private Suit be intermedled with the great Affairs, but heard on the Mundays before.

19. If there be under four, and a Matter of Expedition ariſe, they ſhall declare it to the King's Majeſty, and before him debate it, but not ſend anſwer without it require wonderful haſte.

The Councils Letter to the Justices of Peace.

An Original.

Cotton Libr. Titus B. 2.

AFter our right hearty Commendations: where the most Noble King, of famous memory, our late Soveraign Lord and Master King Henry the 8*th*, (whom God pardon) upon the great Trust which his Majesty had in your virtuous Wisdoms and good Dispositions to the Common-Wealth of this Realm, did specially name and appoint you, among others, by his Commissions under his Great Seal of England, to be Conservatours and Justices of his Peace, within that his County of Norfolk. Forasmuch as the same Commissions were dissolved by his decease, it hath pleased the King's Majesty, our Soveraign Lord that now is, by the Advice and Consent of us, the Lord Protector and others, Executors to our said late Soveraign Lord, whose Names be underwritten; to whom, with others, the Government of his most Royal Person, and the Order of his Affairs, is by his last Will and Testament committed, till he shall be of full Age of eighteen Years, to cause new Commissions again to be made for the conservation of his Peace throughout this Realm, whereof you shall by this Bearer receive one for that County. And for that the good and diligent execution of the Charge committed to you and others by the same, shall be a notable Surety to the King, our Soveraign Lord's Person that now is, to whom God give increase of Vertue, Honour, and many Years, a most certain Stay to the Common-Wealth, which must needs prosper where Justice hath place and reigneth: We shall desire you, and in his Majesty's Name charge and command you, upon the receit hereof, with all diligence, to assemble your selves together; and calling unto you all such others as be named in the said Commission. You shall first cry and call to God to give you Grace to execute this Charge committed unto you with all Truth and Uprightness, according to your Oaths, which you shall endeavour your selves to do in all things appertaining to your Office accordingly: in such sort as all private Malice, Sloth, Negligence, Displeasure, Disdain, Corruption, and sinister Affections set apart, it may appear you have God, and the preservation of your Soveraign Lord, and natural Country before your Eyes; and that you forget not that by the same, your Selves, your Wives, and your Children, shall surely prosper and be also preserved. For the better doing whereof, you shall at this your first Assembly, make a division of your selves into Hundreds or Wapentakes; that is to say, Two at the least, to have especial eye and regard to the good Rule and Order of that, or those Hundreds, to see the Peace duly kept, to see Vagabonds and Perturbers of the Peace punished, and that every Man apply himself to do as his Calling doth require; and in all things to keep good Order, without alteration, innovation, or contempt of any thing that by the Laws of our late Soveraign Lord is prescribed and set forth unto us, for the better direction and framing of our selves towards God and honest honeſt Policy. And if any Perſon, or Perſons, whom ye ſhall think you cannot Rule and Order, without trouble to this Country, ſhall preſume to do the contrary, upon your Information to us thereof, we ſhall ſo aid and aſſiſt you in the execution of Juſtice, and the punishment of all ſuch contemptuous Offenders, as the ſame ſhall be example to others. And further, his Majeſty's Pleaſure, by the Advice and Conſent aforeſaid is, That you ſhall take ſuch Orders amongſt you, as you fail not once every ſix weeks, till you ſhall be otherwiſe commanded, to write unto the ſaid Lord Protector, and others of the Privy-Council, in what ſtate that Shire ſtandeth; and whether any notable things have happened, or were like to happen, in thoſe Parts, that you cannot redreſs, which would be ſpeedily met withal and looked unto; or whether you ſhall need any advice or counſel, to the intent we may put our hands to the ſtay and reformation of it in the beginning, as appertains: Praying you alſo to take order, That every Commiſſioner in the Shire may have a Double, or a Copy of this Letter, both for his own better Inſtruction, and to ſhew to the Gentlemen, and ſuch others as inhabit in the Hundreds, ſpecially appointed to them, that every Man may the better conform himſelf to do Truth, and help to the advancement of Juſtice according to their moſt bounden Duties, and as they will anſwer for the contrary. Thus fare you well. From the Tower of London, the 12*th* of February.

The Order for the Coronation of King Edward.

Sunday, Feb. 13. at the Tower, &c.

This day the Lord Protector, and others his Executors, whoſe Names be hereunto aſcribed, upon mature and deep deliberation had among them, did finally reſolve, That foraſmuch as divers of the old Obſervances and Ceremonies afore-times uſed at the Coronations of the Kings of this Realm, were by them thought meet, for ſundry reſpects, to be corrected; and namely, for the tedious length of the ſame, which ſhould weary and be hurtſome peradventure to the King's Majeſty, being yet of tender Age, fully to endure and bide out. And alſo for that many Points of the ſame were ſuch as by the Laws of the Realm at this preſent were not allowable. The King's Majeſty's Coronation Ex Libro Concilii.

nation ſhould be done and celebrated upon Shrove-Sunday next enſuing, in the Cathedral Church of Weſtminſter, after the Form and Order enſuing.

Firſt; The Arch-biſhop of Canterbury ſhall ſhew the King to the People at four parts of the great Pulpit or Stage to be made for the King, and ſhall ſay on this wiſe; Sirs, Here I preſent King Edward rightful and undoubted Inheritor, by the Laws of God and Man, to the Royal Dignity and Crown Imperial of this Realm, whoſe Conſecration, Inunction, and Coronation, is appointed by all the Nobles and Peers of this Land to be this day. Will ye ſerve at this time, and give your good-will and aſſents to the ſame Conſecration, Inunction, and Coronation, as by your Duty of Allegiance ye be bound to do?

The People to Anſwer, Yea, Yea, Yea; King Edward, King Edward, King Edward.

This done, the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, being reveſted as he ſhould go to Maſs, with the Biſhops of London and Wincheſter on both ſides, with other Biſhops, and the Dean of Weſtminſter in the Biſhop's abſence, to go in order before the King; the King ſhall be brought from his Seat by them that aſſiſted him to the Church to the high Altar, where after his Prayer made to God for his Grace, he ſhall offer a Pall and a pound of Gold, 24 pound in Coin, which ſhall be to him delivered by the Lord Great Chamberlain. Then ſhall the King lie groveling before the Altar, and over him the Arch-biſhop ſhall ſay this Collect, Deus humilium, &c. Then the King ſhall riſe and go to his Chair, to be prepared before the Altar, his Face to the Altar, and ſtanding, one ſhall hold him a Book; and the Arch-biſhop ſtanding before the King, ſhall ask him, with a loud and diſtinct Voice, in Manner and Form following.

Will ye grant to keep to the People of England, and others your Realms and Dominions, the Laws and Liberties of this Realm, and others your Realms and Dominions?

I grant and promit.

You ſhall keep, to your Strength and Power, to the Church of God, and to all the People, holy Peace and Concord.

I ſhall keep.

You ſhall make to be done, after your Strength and Power, equal and rightful Juſtice in all your Dooms and Judgments, with Mercy and Truth.

I ſhall do.

Do you grant to make no Laws, but ſuch as ſhall be to the Honour and Glory of God, and to the Good of the Common-Wealth; and that the ſame ſhall be made by the conſent of your People, as hath been accuſtomed.

I grant and promit.

Then ſhall the King riſe out of his Chair, and by them that before aſſiſted him, be led to the High Altar, where he ſhall make a ſolemn Oath upon the Sacrament, laid upon the ſaid Altar, in the ſight of all the

the People, to observe the Premisses; and laying his Hand again on the Book, shall say;

The things which I have before promised, I shall observe and keep. So God help me, and those Holy Evangelists by Me bodily touched upon this Holy Altar.

That done, the King shall fall again groveling before the High Altar, and the said Arch-bishop kneeling before him, shall, with a loud Voice, begin Veni Creator Spiritus, &c.

Which done, the said Arch-bishop standing, shall say over the King, Te invocamus; and at the end shall kneel again, and then shall the King rise and be set in the Chair again; and after a little pause he shall rise, and assisted with those that did before that Office, go again to the High Altar, where he shall be uncloathed by his Great Chamberlain unto his Coat of Crimson Satin; which, and also his Shirt, shall be opened before and behind on the Shoulders, and the bowght of the Arms, by the said Great Chamberlain, to the intent that on those Places he be anointed; and whiles he is in the anointing, Sir Anthony Denny, and Sir William Herbert, must hold a Pall over him. And first, The said Arch-bishop shall anoint the King, kneeling, in the Palms of his Hands, saying these words, Ungas Manus; with this Collect, Respice Omnipotens Deus. After he shall anoint him in the Brest, in the midst of his back, on his two Bowghts of his Arms, and on his Head making a Cross; and after making another Cross on his Head, with Holy Chrism, saying as he anointeth the places aforesaid, Ungatur Caput, ungantur scapulæ, &c. During which time of Unction, the Quire shall continually sing, Ungebant Regem, and the Psalm, Domine in virtute tua lætabitur Rex. And it is to be remembred, that the Bishop or Dean of Westminster, after the King's Inunction, shall dry all the Places of his Body, where he was anointed, with Cotton, or some Linnen Cloth, which is to be burnt. And furthermore the places opened for the same, is to be cloathed by the Lord Great Chamberlain; and on the King's Hands shall be put, by the said Arch-bishop of Canterbury, a pair of Linnen Gloves, which the Lord Great Chamberlain shall before see prepared.

This done, the King shall rise, and the Arch-bishop of Canterbury shall put on the King a Tabert of Tanterton-white, shaped in manner of a Dalmatick; and he shall put upon the King's Head a Quoif, the same to be brought by the Great Chamberlain. Then the King shall take the Sword he was girt withal, and offer it himself to God, laying it on the Altar, in token that his Strength and Power should first come from God. And the same Sword he shall take again from the Altar, and deliver to some great Earl, to be redeemed of the Bishop or Dean of Westminster for 100 s. which Sword shall be born naked afterwards before the King.

Then the King being set in his Chair before the Altar, shall be crowned with St. Edward's Crown; and there shall be brought, by the Bishop or Dean of Westminster, Royal Sandals and Spurs to be presently put on by the Lord Great Chamberlain; and the Spurs again immediately taken off, that they do not encumber him.

Then the Arch-Bishop, with all the Peers and Nobles, shall convey the King, sustained as before, again into the Pulpit, setting him in his Siege

Siege Royal; and then ſhall the Arch-biſhop begin, Te Deum Landamus, which done, the Arch-biſhop ſhall ſay unto the King, Sta & retine modo locum. And the King being thus ſet, all the Peers of the Realm, and Biſhops, holding up their Hands, ſhall make unto him Homage as followeth: firſt, the Lord-Protector alone, then the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, and the Lord Chancellor, ſo two and two as they be placed.

J. N. become your Liege Man, of Life and Limb, and of earthly Worſhip, and Faith, and Truth, I ſhall bear unto you, againſt all manner of Folks, as I am bound by my Allegiance, and by the Laws and Statutes of this Realm. So help me God and Allhallowes. And then every one ſhall kiſs the King's left Cheek; which done, all they holding up their hands together, in token of their Fidelity, ſhall with one Voice on their Knees ſay. We offer to ſuſtain and defend you and your Crown, with our Lives, and Lands, and Goods, againſt all the World. And then with one Voice to cry, God ſave King Edward; which the People ſhall cry accordingly. Then ſhall the King be led to his Travers to hear the High Maſs, and ſo depart home crowned in Order, as he ſet forth accordingly.

THE ſaid Students referring to the conſideration of the ſaid Proteſtor and Council, what the granting out of the ſaid Commiſſion without warrant did weigh; Foraſmuch as the ſaid Protector and Council minding the ſurety of the King's Majeſty, and a direct and upright proceeding in his Affairs, and the obſervation of their Duties in all things, as near as they can, to his Majeſty, with a deſire to avoid all things which might offend his Majeſty, or his Laws; and conſidering, that the ſaid Commiſſion was none of the things which they in their Aſſemblies in Council, at any time ſince the Death of the King's Majeſty late deceaſed, did accord to be paſſed under the Great Seal, ſave for their own Diſcharges required us, whoſe Names be underwritten, for the Opinion they have of our Knowledg and Experience in the Laws of this Realm, to conſider the ſaid Caſe of making of the ſaid Commiſſion without warrant; and after due conſideration thereof, to declare in writing to what the ſaid Caſe doth weigh in Law. We therefore, whoſe Names be under-written, after mature and adviſed conſultation and deliberation thereupon; do affirm and ſay, for our Knowledges and Determinations, That the ſaid Chancellor of England having made forth, under the Great Seal of England, without any Warrant, the Commiſſion aforeſaid hath done, and doth by his ſo doing offend the King's Majeſty, hath and doth by the Common Law, forfeit his Office of Chancellor, and incurreth the Danger, Penalty, and Paiment, of ſuch Fine as it ſhall pleaſe the King's Majeſty, with the Adviſe of the ſaid Lord Protector and Council to ſet upon him for the ſame; with alſo Impriſonment of his Body at the King's Will: In Witneſs whereof we have ſet our Names to this Preſent, the laſt day of February, in the firſt Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King Edward the 6th, by the Grace of God, King of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and in Earth of the Church of England, and alſo of Ireland the Supream Head; And have likewiſe, for more ample teſtimony of this our Opinion of, and upon the Premiſſes, put and ſubſcribed our Names to this preſent Duplicate of the ſame here aſſerted, in this preſent Act of this 6th day of the month of March accordingly.

Number 6.

The Duke of Somerſet's Commiſſion to be Protector.

Ex Libro Concilii. Fol. 62.

EDward the 6th, by the Grace of God, King of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and of the Church of England, and alſo of Ireland, in Earth the Supream Head. Whereas our Council, and divers of the Nobles and Prelates of this our Realm of England, conſidering Our young and tender Age, have thought meet and expedient, as well for Our Education, and bringing up in Knowledge, Learning, and Exerciſes of Good and Godly Manners, Vertues, and Qualities, meet and neceſſary for a Prince of Our Eſtate, and whereby We ſhould, and may at Our full Age be the more able to miniſter and execute the Charge of our Kingly Eſtate and Office, committed unto Us by the Goodneſs of Almighty God, and left, and come unto Us, by right Inheritance, after and by the deceaſe of Our late Sovereign Lord and Father, of moſt famous Memory, King Henry the 8th, whoſe Soul God pardon. As alſo to the intent, that during the time of our Minority, the great and weighty Cauſes of our Realms and Dominions may be ſet forth, conducted, paſſed, applied, and ordered, in ſuch ſort, as ſhall be moſt to the Glory of God, our Surety and Honour; and for the Weal, Benefit, and Commodity of Us, Our ſaid Realms and Dominions, and of all Our loving Subjects of the ſame, have adviſed Us to nominate, appoint, and authorize ſome one meet and truſty Perſonage, above all others, to take the ſpecial Care and Charge of the ſame for Us, and in our Name and Behalf; without the which the things before remembred could not, nor can be done ſo well as appertaineth. We therefore uſing their Advices and Counſels in this behalf, did heretofore aſſign and appoint our dear and well-beloved Uncle Edward, now Duke of Somerſet, Governour of our Perſon, and Protector of our ſaid Realms and Dominions, and of our Subjects and People of the ſame. Which thing, albeit We have already declared heretofore, and our Pleaſure therein publiſhed by Word of our Mouth, in the preſence of Our ſaid Council, Nobles, and Prelats of

Our

Our ſaid Realm of England, and not by any Writing ſet forth under Our Seal for that only purpoſe. Yet for a more perfect and manifeſt knowledg, and further corroboration and underſtanding of Our determination in that behalf; and conſidering that no manner of Perſon is ſo meet to have and occupy the ſaid Charge and Adminiſtration, and to do Us ſervice in the ſame, as is Our ſaid Uncle Edward, Duke of Somerſet, eldeſt Brother to our Natural moſt gracious late Mother Queen Jane, as well for the proximity of Blood, whereby he is the more ſtirred to have ſpecial eye and regard to our Surety and good Education, in this our ſaid Minority; as alſo for the long and great experience which Our ſaid Uncle hath had in the Life-time of Our ſaid dear Father, in the Affairs of Our ſaid Realm and Dominions, both in time of Peace and War; whereby he is more able to Order and Rule Our ſaid Realms, Dominions, and Subjects of the ſame: and for the ſpecial confidence and truſt that We have in Our ſaid Uncle, as well with the Advice and Conſent of our Council, and other our Nobles and Prelats, as alſo of divers diſcreet and ſage Men that ſerved Our ſaid late Father in his Council and weighty Affairs; We therefore, by theſe Preſents, do not only ratify, approve, confirm, and allow, all and every thing and things whatſoever deviſed or ſet forth, committed or done by Our ſaid Uncle, as Governor of our Perſon, and Protector of our ſaid Realms and Dominions, and of the Subjects of the ſame, ſith the time he was by Us named, appointed, and ordained by Word Governor of Our Perſon, and Protector of Our ſaid Realms and Dominions, and of the Subjects of the ſame, as is aforeſaid, or otherwiſe any time before, ſithence the death of Our ſaid late Father. But alſo by theſe Preſents, We for a full and perfect Declaration of the Authority of Our ſaid Uncle, given and appointed as aforeſaid, do nominate, appoint, and ordain Our ſaid Uncle, Governor of Our ſaid Perſon, and Protector of Our ſaid Realms and Dominions, and of the Subjects of the ſame, until ſuch time as We ſhall have, by the ſufferance of God, accompliſhed the Age of eighteen Years.

And We alſo do grant to Our ſaid Uncle, by theſe Preſents, full Power and Authority, from time to time, until ſuch time as We ſhall have accompliſhed the ſaid of Age of eighteen Years, to do, procure, and execute, and cauſe to be done, procured, and executed, all and every ſuch Thing and Things, Act and Acts, which a Governor of the King's Perſon of this Realm, during his Minority, and a Protector of his Realms, Dominions, and Subjects, ought to do, procure, and execute, or cauſe to be done, procured, and executed; and alſo all and every other thing and things, which to the Office of a Governor of a King of this Realm, during his Minority, and of a Protector of his Realms, Dominions, and Subjects, in any wiſe appertaineth or belongeth. Willing, Authoriſing, and Commanding, Our ſaid Uncle, by theſe Preſents, to take upon him the Name, Title, and Authority of Governor of our Perſon, and Protector of our Realms, Dominions, and Subjects; and to do, procure, and execute, and cauſe to be done, procured and executed, from time to time, until We ſhall have accompliſhed the ſaid Age of eighteen Years, all and every Thing and Things, Act and Acts, of what Nature, Quality, or Effect ſoever they be or ſhall be, concerning our Affairs, Doings, and Proceedings, both both Private and Publick, as well in Outward and Forreign Causes and Matters, as also concerning our Affairs, Doings, and Proceedings within Our said Realms and Dominions, or in any of them, or concerning any Manner, Causes, or Matters, of any of our Subjects of the same, in such like manner and form as shall be thought, by his Wisdom and Discretion, to be for the Honour, Surety, and Prosperity, good Order, Wealth, or Commodity of Us, or of any of Our said Realms and Dominions, or of the Subjects of any of the same.

And to the intent Our said Uncle should be furnished with Men qualified in Wit, Knowledg, and Experienee, for his Aid and Assistance, in the managing and accomplishment of Our said Affairs, We have, by the Advice and Consent of our said Uncle, and others, the Nobles, Prelats, and wise Men of Our said Realm of England, chosen, taken, and accepted, and by these Presents do chuse, take, accept, and ordain to be our Counsellors, and of our Council, the most Reverend Father in God, Thomas Arch-bishop of Canterbury, and our right Trusty and well-beloved William, Lord St. John, Great Master of our Household, and President of our Council; John Lord Russel Keeper of our Privy-Seal; and our Trusty and right well-beloved Cousins, William Marques of Northampton; John Earl of Warwick, Great Chamberlain of England; Henry Earl of Arundel, our Lord Chamberlain; Thomas Lord Seymour of Sudley, High Admiral of England; the Reverend Father in God, Cuthbert Bishop of Dureſme, and Our right Trusty and well-beloved Richard Lord Rich; Sir Thomas Cheney Knight of our Order, and Treasurer of our Houshold; Sir John Gage Knight of our Order, and Comptroller of our Houshold; Sir Anthony Brown Knight of our Order, Master of our Horse; Sir Anthony Wingfield Knight of our Order, our Vicechamberlain; Sir William Paget Knight of our Order, Our chief Secretary; Sir William Petre Knight, one of Our two principal Secretaries; Sir Ralph Sadler Knight, Master of our Great Wardrobe; Sir John Baker Knight, Dr. Wotton Dean of Canterbury and York; Sir Anthony Denny and Sir William Herbert Kts. Gentlemen of our Privy-Chamber; Sir Edward North Kt. Chancellor of our Court of Augmentations and Revenues of our Crown; Sir Edward Montague Kt. Chief Justice of our Common-Pleas; Sir Edward Wotton Kt. Sir Edmund Pekham Kt. Cofferer of our Houshold; Sir Thomas Bromley Kt. one of the Justices for Pleas before us to be holden, and Sir Richard Southwell Kt.

And furthermore We are contented and pleased, and by these Presents do give full Power and Authority to our said Uncle, from time to time, until We shall have accomplished, and be of the full Age of eighteen Years, to call, ordain, name, appoint, and swear such, and as many other Persons of our Subjects, as to him our said Uncle shall seem meet and requisite to be of our Council; and that all and every such Person or Persons, so by our said Uncle, for and during the time aforesaid to be called, named, ordained, appointed, and sworn of our Council, and to be our Counsellor or Counsellors, We do by these Presents name, ordain, accept, and take our Counsellor and Counsellors, and of our Council in like manner and form, as if he, they, and every of them, were in these Presents by Us appointed, named, and taken to be of our Council, and our Counsellor or Counsellors, by expres Name or

Names

Names. And that alſo of our forenamed Counſellors, or of any others which our ſaid Uncle ſhall hereafter at any time take and chuſe to be our Counſellor or Counſellors, or of our ſaid Council, he our ſaid Uncle ſhall, may, and have Authority by theſe Preſents, to chuſe, name, appoint, uſe, and ſwear of Privy-Council, and to be our Privy-Counſellor or Counſellors, ſuch and ſo many as he from time to time ſhall think convenient.

And it is Our further Pleaſure, and alſo We will and grant by theſe Preſents, for Us, our Heirs and Succeſſors, That whatſoever Cauſe, Matter, Deed, Thing, or Things, of what Nature, Quality, or Condition ſoever the ſame be; yea, though the ſame require, or ought by any Manner, Law, Statute, Proclamation, or other Ordinance whatſoever, to be ſpecially, or by Name, expreſſed or ſet forth in this Our preſent Grant or Letters Patents, and be not herein expreſſed or mentioned, ſpecially which our ſaid Uncle, or any of our Privy-Counſellor, or Counſellors, with the Advice, Conſent, or Agreement of Our ſaid Uncle, have thought neceſſary, meet, expedient, decent, or in any manner-wiſe convenient to be deviſed, done, or executed, during our Minority, and until We come to the full Age of eighteen Years, for the Surety, Honour, Profit, Health, or Education of our Perſon; or for the Surety, Honour, Profit, Weal, Benefit, or Commodity of any of our Realms, Dominions, or Subjects; and the ſame have deviſed, done, or executed, or cauſed to be deviſed, executed, or done at any time ſince the Death of Our moſt Noble Father of moſt famous memory. We are contented, and pleaſed, and will and grant, for Us, our Heirs and Succeſſors, by theſe Preſents, that the ſame Cauſe, Matter, Deed, Thing and Things, and every of them, ſhall ſtand, remain, and be (until ſuch time our ſaid Uncle, with ſuch and ſo many of Our foreſaid Counſellors as he ſhall think meet to call unto his aſſiſtance, ſhall revoke and annihilate the ſame) good, ſure, ſtable, vailable, and effectual, to all Intents and Purpoſes, without offence of Us, or againſt Us, or of or againſt any of our Laws, Statutes, Proclamations, or other Ordinances whatſoever; and without incurring therefore into any Danger, Penalty, Forfeit, Loſs; or any other Encumbrance, Penalty, or Vexation of his or their Bodies, Lands, Rents, Goods, or Chattels; or of their, or of any of their Heirs, Executors, or Adminiſtrators, or of any other Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, which have done or executed any Cauſe, Matter, Deed, Thing or Things, now, or any time ſince the Death of Our ſaid Father, by the Commandment or Ordinance of Our ſaid Uncle, or any of our Counſellors, with the Advice, Conſent, or Agreement of Our ſaid Uncle.

And further, We are contented and pleaſed, and will and grant, for Us, our Heirs and Succeſſors, by theſe Preſents, that whatſoever Cauſe, Matter, Deed, Thing or Things, of what Nature, Quality, or Condition ſoever the ſame be, or ſhall be; yea, though the ſame require, or ought by any Manner, Law, Statute, Proclamation, or other whatſoever Ordinance to be ſpecially and by name expreſſed and ſet forth in this our preſent Grant and Letters Patents, and be not herein ſpecially named or expreſſed, which our ſaid Uncle ſhall at any time, during our Minority, and until We ſhall come to the full Age of eighteen Years, think neceſſary, meet, expedient, decent, or in any wiſe convenient convenient to be deviſed, had, made, executed or done in our Name, for the Surety, Honour, Profit, Health, or Education of our Perſon, or which our ſaid Uncle, with the Advice and Conſent of ſuch, and ſo many of our Privy-Council, or of our Counſellors, as he ſhall think meet to call unto him from time to time, ſhall at any time, until We come unto the full Age of eighteen Years, think neceſſary, meet, decent, expedient, or in any-wiſe convenient to be deviſed, had, made, executed, or done in our Name, for the Surety, Honour, Profit, Weal, Benefit, or Commodity of any of our Realms, Dominions, or Subjects, or any of them, he our ſaid Uncle and Counſellors, and every of them, and all and every other Perſon or Perſons, by his Our ſaid Uncle's Commandment, Direction, Appointment, or Order, or by the Commandment, Appointment, Direction, or Order of any of Our ſaid Counſellors, ſo as our ſaid Uncle agree, and be contented, to and with the ſame, ſhall and may do, or execute the ſame without diſpleaſure to Us, or any manner of Crime or Offence to be by Us, our Heirs or Succeſſors, laid or imputed to him Our ſaid Uncle, or any Our ſaid Counſellors, or any other Perſon or Perſons therefore, or in that behalf, and without any offence of or againſt our Laws, Statutes, Proclamations, or other whatſoever Ordinances; and without incurring therefore into any Dammages, Penalty, Forfeit, Loſs, or any other Encumbrance, Trouble, or Vexation of his, or any of their Bodies, Lands, Tenements, Goods or Chattels; or of his or their, or any their Heirs, Succeſſors, Aſſigns, Executors or Adminiſtrators. And therefore we Will and Command, not only all and every our Judges, Juſtices, Serjeants, Attornies, Sollicitors, Sheriffs, Eſcheators, Bailiffs, and all other our Officers, Miniſters, and Subjects, that now be, or hereafter ſhall be, in no wiſe to Impeach, Appeal, Arreſt, Trouble, Vex, Injure, or Moleſt in our Name or otherwiſe, Our ſaid Uncle, or our ſaid Counſellors, or any of them, or any other Perſon, for any Cauſe, Matter, Deed, Thing or Things, which he or they, or any of them have done, or ſhall do, execute, or cauſe to be executed or done as aforeſaid; But alſo We require, and nevertheleſs ſtraitly Charge and Command, by theſe Preſents, all and every our Officers, Miniſters, and Subjects, of what Eſtate, Degree, or Condition ſoever he or they be, or ſhall be, to be obedient, aiding, attendant and aſſiſting to Our ſaid Uncle and Counſellors, and to every of them as behoveth, for the execution of this Charge and Commiſſion given and committed unto Our ſaid Uncle and Council as aforeſaid, as they tender our Favour, and their own Weals, and as they will anſwer unto Us at their uttermoſt Perils for the contrary. In Witneſs whereof, We have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patents; Witneſs our Self at Weſtminſter, the 13*th* day of March, in the firſt Year of our Reign.

The Form of bidding Prayer before the Reformation.

The Bedes on the Sunday.

Out of the Feſtival, printed An. 1509.

YE ſhall kneel down on your Knees, and lift up your Hearts, making your Prayers to Almighty God, for the good State and Peace of all-holy Church, that God maintain, ſave, and keep it. For our Holy Father the Pope, with all his true College of Cardinals, that God for his Mercy them maintain and keep in the right Belief, and it hold and increaſe, and all Miſbelief and Hereſy be leſs and deſtroyed. Alſo ye ſhall pray for the Holy Land, and for the Holy Croſs, that Jeſus Chriſt died on for the redemption of Mens Souls, that it may come into the Power of Chriſtian Men the more to be honoured for our Prayers. Alſo ye ſhall pray for all Arch-biſhops and Biſhops; and eſpecially for the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury our Metropolitane, and for the Biſhop of N. our Dioceſan, that God of his Mercy give to them Grace ſo to govern and rule Holy Church, that it may be to the Honour and Worſhip of him, and Salvation of our Souls. Alſo ye ſhall pray for Abbots, Priors, Monks, Canons, Friers, and for all Men and Women of Religion, in what Order, Eſtate, or Degree that they ſtand in, from the higheſt Eſtate unto the loweſt Degree. Alſo ye ſhall pray for all them that have Charge and Cure of Chriſtian Mens Souls, as Curats and Parſons, Vicars, Prieſts and Clarks; and in eſpecial for the Parſon and Curat of this Church, and for all the Prieſts and Miniſters that ſerve therein, or have ſerved therein; and for all them that have taken any Order, that Almighty God give them Grace of continuance well for to keep and obſerve it to the honour and health of their Souls. Alſo ye ſhall pray for the Unity and Peace of all Chriſtian Realms, and in eſpecial for the good Eſtate, Peace and Tranquillity, of this Realm of England, for our Liege Lord the King, that God for his great Mercy ſend him Grace ſo to Govern and Rule this Realm, that God be pleaſed and worſhipped, and to the Profit and Salvation of this Land. Alſo ye ſhall pray for our Liege Lady the Queen, my Lord Prince, and all the noble Progeny of them; for all Dukes, Earls, Barons, Knights and Eſquires, and other Lords of the King's Council, which have any Rule and Governance in this Land, that God give them Grace ſo to Council, Rule, and Govern, that God be pleaſed, the Land defended and to the Profit and Salvation of all the Realm. Alſo ye ſhall pray for the Peace, both on Land and on the Water; that God grant Love and Charity among all Chriſtian People. Alſo ye ſhall pray for all our Pariſhes, where that they be, on Land or on Water, that God ſave them from all manner of Perils; and for all the good Men of this Pariſh for their Wives, Children, and Men, that God them maintain, ſave and keep. Alſo ye ſhall pray for all true Tithers, that God multiply their Goods and Encreaſe; for all true Tillers that labour for our Suſtenance, that Till the Earth; and alſo for all the Grains and Fruits that be ſown, ſet, or done on the Earth, or ſhall be done, that God ſend ſuch ſuch Weather that they may grow, encreaſe, and multiply, to the help and profit of all Mankind. Alſo ye ſhall pray for all true Shipmen and Merchants, whereſoever that they be, on Land or on Water, that God keep them from all Perils, and bring them home in ſafety, with their Goods, Ships, and Merchandiſes, to the Help, Comfort, and Profit of this Realm. Alſo ye ſhall pray for them that find any Light in this Church, or give any Beheſts, Book, Bell, Chalice, or Veſtment, Surplice, Water-cloath, or Towel, Lands, Rents, Lamp or Light, or any other Adornments, whereby God's Service is the better ſerved, ſuſtained and maintained in Reading and Singing, and for all them that thereto have counſelled, that God reward and yield it them at their moſt need. Alſo ye ſhall pray for all true Pilgrims and Palmers, that have taken their way to Rome, to Jeruſalem, to St. Katherines, or St. James, or to any other place, that God of his Grace give them time and ſpace, well for to go and to come, to the profit of their Lives and Souls. Alſo ye ſhall pray for all them that be ſick or diſeaſed of this Pariſh, that God ſend to them Health, the rather for our Prayers; for all the Women which be in our Lady's Bands, and with Child, in this Pariſh, or in any other, that God ſend to them fair Deliverance, to their Children right Shape, Name, and Chriſtendom, and to the Mothers, Purification; and for all them that would be here, and may not, for Sickneſs or Travail, or any other lawful Occupation, that they may have part of all the good Deeds that ſhall be done here in this Place, or in any other. And ye ſhall pray for all them that be in good Life, that good Men hold long therein; and for them that be in Debt, or deadly Sin, that Jeſus Chriſt bring them out thereof, the rather for our Prayers. Alſo ye ſhall pray for him or her that this day gave the Holy Bread, and for him that firſt began and longeſt holdeth on, that God reward it them at the day of Doom; and for all them that do well, or ſay you good, that God yield it them at their need, and for them that otherwiſe ſhould that Jeſus Chriſt amend them; For all thoſe, and for all Chriſtian Men and Women, ye ſhall ſay a Pater Noſter; Ave Maria; Deus Creator noſtri; Gloria Patri; Kyrie Eleiſon; Chriſte Eleiſon; Kyrie Eleiſon; Pater Noſter; Et ne nos; Sed libera; Verſus; Oſtende nobis; Domine exaudi; Domine ſalvum fac Regem; Salvum fac Populum; Domine da Pacem; Domine exaudi; Dominus vobiſcum; Oremus; Eccleſiæ tuæ quæſumus; Deus in cujus manu; Deus a quo ſancta, &c. Furthermore, ye ſhall pray for all Chriſtian Souls, for Arch-biſhops and Biſhops Souls; and in eſpecial, for all that have been Biſhops of this Dioceſs; and for all Curats, Parſons and Vicar's Souls, and in eſpecial, for them that have been Curats of this Church, and for the Souls that have ſerved in this Church. Alſo ye ſhall pray for the Souls of all Chriſtian Kings and Queens, and in eſpecial for the Souls of them that have been Kings of this Realm of England; and for all thoſe Souls that to this Church have given Book, Bell, Chalice, or Veſtment, or any other thing, by the which the Service of God is better done, and Holy Church worſhipped. Ye ſhall alſo pray for your Father's Soul, for your Mother's Soul; for your Godfathers Souls, for your Godmothers Souls, for your Brethren and Siſters Souls, and for your Kindreds Souls, and for your Friends Souls, and for all the Souls we be bound to pray for; and for all the Souls that be in the Pains of Purgatory, there abiding the Mercy of Almighty God; and in especial for them that have most need and least help, that God of his endless Mercy lessen and minish their Pains by the means of our Prayers, and bring them to his Everlasting Bliss in Heaven. And also of the Soul Day or of them that upon such a day this Week we shall have the Anniversary; and for all Christian Souls ye shall devoutly say a Pater Noster and Ave Maria; Psalmus de profundis, &c. with this Collect, Oremus; Absolve quæsumus Domine animas famulorum tuorum Pontificum, Regum, Sacerdotum, Parentum, Parochianorum, Amicorum, Benefactorum Nostrorum, & omnium fidelium defunctorum, ab omni vinculo delictorum; ut in Resurrectionis Gloriâ inter sanitos & electos tuos resuscitati respirent, per Jesum Christum Dominum nostrum. Amen.

Bishop Tonstal's Letter, proving the Subjection of Scotland to England.

An Original.

Cotton Libr. Caligula B. 7

PLease it your Grace, my Lord Protector, and you right honourable Lords of the King's Majesty's Council, to understand, that I have received your Letter of the 4*th* of this month, by which ye will me to search all mine old Registers, and ancient Places to be sought where any thing may be found for the more clear declaration to the World of the King's Majesty's Title to the Realm of Scotland, and to advertise you with speed accordingly: And also to signify unto you what ancient Characters and Monuments for that purpose I have seen, and where the same are to be sought for. According unto which your Letters, I have sought with all diligence all mine old Registers, making mention of the Superiorities of the Kings of England to the Realm of Scotland, and have found in the same of many Homages made by the Kings of Scots to the Kings of England, as shall appear by the Copies which I do send to your Grace and to your Lordships herewith. Ye shall also find in the said Copies the Gift of the Barony of Coldingham made to the Church of Duresm by Edgar the King of Scots; which Original Gift is under Seal, which I shewed once to my Lord Meux at Duresm, in the presence of you my Lord Protector. I find also a confirmation of the same Gift by King William Rufus in an old Register but not under Seal, the Copy whereof is sent herewith. The Homages of Kings of Scotland which I have found in the Registers, I have sent in this Copy. I send also herewith the Copy of a Grant made by King Richard the First unto William King of Scots and his Heirs, How as oft as he is summoned to come to the Parliament, he shall be received in the Confines of the Realm of Scotland, and conducted from Shire to Shire unto his coming to the Parliament; and what the King doth allow him for his Diet every day unto the Court; and also what Diet and Allowance he hath, being at the Parliament, both in Bread and Wine, Wax and Candle, for his time of his abode there; and of his Conduct in his return home.

And

And where King William, King of Scots, made Homage to King Henry the Second, and granted, That all the Nobles of his Realm should be his Subjects, and make Homage to him; and all the Bishops of his Realm should be under the Arch-bishops of York: And the said King William delivered to the said King Henry, the Castles of Roxburgh, Edinburgh, and the Castle of Barwick, as is found in my Register; and that the King of England should give all Abbeys and Honours in Scotland, or at least they should not be given without his Counsel. I do find in the confirmation of the same, out of the old Registers of the Priors of Duresm, Homage made by the Abbots, Priors, and Prioresses of Scotland, to King Edward the First, in French, which I do send herewith. Also I do send herewith in French, how King Edward the First was received and taken to be Supream Lord in Scotland, by all those that pretend Title to the Crown of Scotland, as next Heirs to the King, that was then dead without Issue, and the compromise of them all made unto the said King Edward the First to stand to his Judgment, which of all them that did claim should have the Crown of Scotland: The Transcript of which Compromise in French, was then sent by the said King Edward, under the Seal of the King's Exchequer in green Wax, to the Prior of Duresm, to be registred for a perpetual memory, that the Supremity of Scotland belonged to the Kings of England, which yet the Chapiters of Duresm have to shew, which thing he commandeth them to put in their Chronicles.

And touching the second part of your Letter, where you will me to certifie you what I have seen in the Premisses; so it is, that I was commanded by mine old Master, of famous memory, King Henry the Seventh, to make search among the Records of his Treasury, in the Remembrance for Solemnities to be done at his Coronation in most solemn manner; according to which commandment, I made search in the said Treasury, where I fortuned to find many Writings for the Supremacy of the King to the Realm of Scotland; and among others also, a Writing with very many Seals of Arms of Scots, confessing the right of the Supremacy to the King of England; which Writings I doubt not may be found there.

I have also sent a Copy of a Book my self have of Homages made to the Kings of England by the Kings of Scotland, which the Chancellor of England in King Henry the Seventh's days had gathered out of the King's Records, which I doubt not, but out of the King's Records and Ancient Books, the same may be found again by my Lord Chancellor and the Judges.

Furthermore your Grace, and you the Right Honourable Lords of the Council, shall understand, That in making much search for the Premisses, at the last we found, out of the Registers of the Chapters of Duresm, when it was a Priory, the Copy of a Writing, by which King Edward the Second doth renounce such Superiority as he had in the Realm of Scotland, for him and his Heirs, to Robert King of Scots then being, as will appear by a Copy of the same, which I do send you herewith, making mention, in the end of the said Writings, of a Commission that he gave to Henry the Lord Percy, and to William the Lord Souch, under his Letters Patents, to give his Oath upon the same. And after the said Writing, we found also in the said Book, a Renunciation of the ſaid King Edward, of a Proceſs that he had commenced before the Biſhop of Rome, againſt Robert King of Scots and his Subjects, for breaking their Oath to him, as will appear by the Copy thereof, which I do ſend alſo herewith. And touching the ſaid Renunciation of King Edward the Second, to the Superiority of the Realm of Scotland, I have often heard it ſpoken of by Scots, but I did never ſee the form of it in writing, until I ſee it now; which thing it is not unlikely but the Scots have under the Seal of the ſaid King Edward. Whereunto anſwer is to be made, That a King renouncing the right of his Crown, cannot prejudice his Succeſſors, who have at the time of their entry, the ſame whole right that their Predeceſſors had at their firſt entry, as Men learned in the Civil Law can by their learning ſhew.

And furthermore, ſearch is to be made in the King's Records in the Treaſury, whether Homages have been made ſithence King Edward the Second's Time; that is to ſay, in the Times of King Edward the Third, King Richard the Second, King Henry the Fourth, King Henry the Fifth, and King Henry the Sixth. In which Times, if any Homage can be found to be made, it ſhall appear the ſame Renunciation to have taken none effect in the Succeſſors, and Ancient Right to be continued again. For after King Edward the Fourth and King Henry the Sixth ſtrove for the Crown, I think none Homage of Scotland will be found, for then was alſo loſt Gaſcoigne and Guienne in France. It is alſo to be remembred, that when the Body of King Henry the Fifth was brought out of France to be buried at Weſtminſter, the King of Scots then being came with him, and was the chief Mourner at his Burial; which King of Scots, whether he made any Homage to King Henry the Fifth in his Life-time, or to King Henry the Sixth at his Coronation, it is to be ſearched by the Records of that time.

This is all that can be found hitherto, by all the moſt diligent ſearch that I could make in my Records here; and if any more can be found, it ſhall be ſent with all ſpeed.

And thus Almighty preſerve your Grace, and your Honourable Lordſhips, to his Pleaſure and yours.

From Ackland the 15*th* Of October, 1547.

Cuth. Dureſme.

The Oath given to the Scots, who submitted to the Protector.

YOu shall bear your Faith to the King's Majesty, our Sovereign Lord Edward the Sixth, &c. till such time as you shall be discharged of your Oath by special License. And you shall, to the uttermost of your power, serve his Majesty, truly and faithfully, against all other Realms, Dominions, and Potentates, as well Scots as others. You shall hear nothing that may be prejudicial to his Majesty in any of his Realms or Dominions, but with as much diligence as you may, shall cause the same to be opened, so as the same come to his Majesty's Knowledg, or to the knowledg of the Lord Protector, or some of his Majesty's Privy Council. You shall, to the uttermost of your possible Power, set forwards and advance the King's Majesties affairs in Scotland, for the Marriage and Peace. Ex Libro Concilii. Fol. 139.

The Protestation of the Bishop of London made to the Visitors, when he received the King's Majesties Injunctions and Homilies.

Ex Libro Concilii. Fol. 110.

I Do receive these Injunctions and Homilies, with this Protestation, That I will observe them, if they be not contrary and repugnant to God's Law, and the Statutes and Ordinances of this Church.

The Submission and Revocation of the same Bishop, made before the Lords of the King's Majesties Council, presently attending upon his Majesty's Person; with the Subscription of his Name thereunto.

WHereas I Edmund Bishop of London, have at such time as I received the King's Majesty's, my most dread Sovereign Lord's Injunctions and Homilies at the Hands of his Highness Visitors, did unadvisedly make such Protestation, as now, upon better consideration of my duty of Obedience, and of the ill Example that may ensue to others thereof, appeareth to me neither reasonable, nor such as might well stand with the Duty of an humble Subject; forasmuch as the same Protestation, at my request, was then by the Register of the Visitation enacted and put in Record; I have thought it my bounden Duty, not only to declare before your Lordships, That I do now, upon better consideration of my Duty, renounce and revoke my said Protestation, but also most humbly beseech your Lordships, that this my Revocation of the same may likewise be put in the same Records for a perpetual Memory of the Truth: Most humbly beseeching your good Lordships, both to take order that it may take effect, and also that my former unadvised doings may, by your good Mediations, be pardoned of the King's Majesty.

Gardiner's Letter to Sir John Godsalve concerning the Injunctions.

Ex MS. Col. C. C. Cantab.

MR. Godsalve, after my right hearty Commendations, with like thanks for the declaration of your good mind towards me (as you mean it) although it agreeth not with mine Accompt, such as I have had leisure to make in this time of Liberty, since the Death of my late Soveraign Lord, (whose Soul Jesu pardon). For this have I reckoned, reckon'd, that I was called to this Bishoprick without the offence of God's Law, or the King's, in the attaining of it. I have kept my Bishoprick these sixteen Years, accomplished this very day, that I write these my Letters unto you, without offending God's Law, or the King's, in the retaining of it, howsoever I have of frailty otherwise sinned. Now if I may play the third part well, to depart from the Bishoprick without the offence of God's Law, or the King's, I shall think the Tragedy of my Life well passed over: and in this part to be well handled is all my care and study now, how to finish this third Act well; for so I offend not God's Law, nor the King's, I will no more care to see my Bishoprick taken from me, than my self to be taken from the Bishoprick. I am by Nature already condemned to die, which Sentence no Man can pardon, nor assure me of delay in the execution of it; and so see that of necessity I shall leave my Bishoprick to the disposition of the Crown from whence I had it, my Household also to break up, and my bringing up of Youth to cease, the remembrance whereof troubleth me nothing. I made in my House at London a pleasant study that delighted me much, and yet I was glad to come into the Country and leave it; and as I have left the use of somewhat, so can I leave the use of all to obtain a more quiet; it is not loss to change for the better, Honesty and Truth are more leef to me than all the Possessions of the Realm, and in these two to say and do frankly, as I must, I never forbear yet: And in these two, Honesty and Truth, I take such pleasure and comfort, as I will never leave them for no respect, for they will abide by a Man, and so will nothing else. No Man can take them away from me but my self; and if my self do them away from me, then my self do undo my self, and make my self worthy to lose my Bishoprick, whereat, such as gape, might take more sport than they are like to have at my hands. What other Men have said or done in the Homilies I cannot tell, and what Homilies or Injunctions shall be brought hither, I know not; such as the Printers have sold abroad, I have read and considered, and am therefore the better instructed how to frame my self to the Visitors at their repair hither, to whom I will use no manner of Protestation but a plain Allegation, as the Matter serveth, and that Honesty and Truth shall bind me to speak; for I will never yield to that should not beseem a Christian. Bishops ought never to lose the inheritance of the King's Laws due to every English Man for want of Allegation. I will shew my self a true Subject, humble and obedient, which repugneth not with the preservation of my Duty to God, and my Right in the Realm, not to be enjoined against an Act of Parliament: which mine intent I have signified to the Council, with request of redress in the Matter, and not to compel me to such an Allegation, which, without I were a Beast, I cannot pretermit: and I were more than a Beast, if after I had signified to the Council Truth and Reason in words, I should then yield in my Deeds not to care for it. My Lord Protector, in one of such Letters as he wrote to me, willed me not to fear too much; and added I know him so well, and divers others of my Lords of the Council, that I cannot fear any hurt at their hands, in the Allegation of God's Law and the King's, and I will never defame them so much as to seem to fear it. And of what strength an Act of Parliament is, the Realm was taught in the Case of her that we called Queen Ann, where all ſuch as ſpake againſt her in the Parliament-Houſe, although they did it by ſpecial Commandment of the King, and ſpake that was truth, yet they were fain to have a Pardon, becauſe that ſpeaking was againſt an Act of Parliament. Did you never know, or here tell of any Man, that for doing that the King our late Sovereign Lord willed, deviſed, and required to be done, He that took pains, and was commanded to do it, was fain to ſue for his Pardon, and ſuch other alſo as were doers in it: and I could tell who it were. Sure there hath been ſuch a Caſe, and I have been preſent when it hath been reaſoned, That the doing againſt an Act of Parliament, excuſeth not a Man, even from the Caſe of Treaſon, although a Man did it by the King's Commandment. You can tell this to your remembrance, when you think further of it, and when it cometh to your remembrance, you will not be well content with your ſelf, I believe, to have adviſed me to enter the breach of an Act of Parliament, without ſurety of Pardon, although the King command it, and were ſuch indeed as it were no matter to do it at all. And thus I anſwer the Letters with worldly civil Reaſons, and take your mind and Zeal towards me to be as tender as may be; and yet you ſee that the following of your Advice might make me loſe my Biſhoprick by mine own Act, which I am ſure you would I ſhould keep, and ſo would I, as might ſtand with my Truth and Honeſty, and none otherwiſe, as knoweth God, who ſend you heartily well to fare.

The Concluſion of Gardiner's Letter to the Protector, againſt the lawfulneſs of the Injunctions.

Cotton Libr. Veſp. D. 18.

WHether the King may command againſt the Common Law, or an Act of Parliament, there is never a Judg, or other Man in the Realm, ought to know more by experience, of that the Lawyers have ſaid, than I.

Firſt, My Lord Cardinal had obtained his Legacy by our late Sovereign Lord's Requeſt at Rome; yet being it was againſt the Laws of the Realm, the Judges cenſured the Offence of Premunire; which Matter I bore away, and take it for a Law of the Realm, becauſe the Lawyers ſaid ſo, but my Reaſon digeſted it not.

The Lawyers, for the confirmation of their Doings, brought in a Caſe of my Lord Typtoft, an Earl he was, and learned in Civil Laws; who being Chancellor, becauſe in execution of the King's Commiſſion he offended the Laws of the Realm, he ſuffered on Tower Hill: they brought in the Examples of many Judges that had Fines ſet on their Heads in like caſe, for tranſgreſſion of the Laws by the King's Commandment; and this I learned in this Caſe.

Since that time being of the Council, when many Proclamations were deviſed againſt the Carriers out of Corn; when it came to puniſhing the Offenders, the Judges would anſwer, it might not be by the Laws, becauſe the Act of Parliament gave liberty, Wheat being under a price: Whereupon at the laſt followed the Act of Proclamations, tion, in the passing whereof were many large words.

When the Bishop of Exeter and his Chancellor were by one Body brought into a Premunire, I reasoned with the Lord Audley, then Chancellor, so far, as he bad me hold my peace, for fear of entring a Premunire my self: But I concluded, that although I must take it as of their Authority that it is Common Law, yet I could not see how a Man authorised by the King, as since the King's Majesty hath taken upon him the Supremacy, every Bishop is, that Man could fall in a Premunire.

I reasoned once in the Parliament House, where was free Speech without danger; and there the Lord Audley Chancellor, then to satisfy me, because I was in some secret estimation as he knew. Thou art a good Fellow, Bishop, (quoth he) look the Act of the Supremacy, and shew the King's Doings be restrained to Spiritual Jurisdiction: And in another Act, No Spiritual Law shall have place contrary to a Common Law, or an Act of Parliament. And if this were not (quoth he) the Bishops would enter in with the King, and by means of his Supremacy order the Law as you listed; but we will provide (quoth he) that the Premunire shall never go off your Heads. This I bare away there, and held my peace.

Since that time, in a Case of Jewels, I was fain, with the Emperor's Ambassador Chapinius when he was here, and in the Emperor's Court also, to defend and maintain by Commandment, that the King's Majesty was not above his Laws, and therefore the Jeweller, although he had the King's Bill signed, yet it would not serve, because it was not obtained after the Order of the Law, in which Matter I was very much troubled. Even this time twelve-month, when I was in Commission with my Lord great Master, and the Earl of Southampton, for the altering of the Court of Augmentations, there was my Lord Montague, and other of the King's Learned Council, of whom I learned what the King might do against an Act of Parliament, and what danger it was to them that medled. It is fresh in my Memory, and they can tell whether I say true or no; and therefore being learned in so notable Causes, I wrote in your absence therein, as I had learned by hearing the Common Lawyers speak (whose Judgment rule these Matters) howsoever my reason can digest them. When I wrote thereof, the Matter was so reasonable, as I have been learned by the Lawyers of the Realm, that I trusted my Lords would have staied till your Graces return.

A Letter from the Duke of Somerset to the Lady Mary, in the beginning of King Edward's Reign.

Madam, my humble Commendations to your Grace premised;

THese may be to signify unto the same, that I have received your Letters of the second of this present, by Jane your Servant, acknowledging my self thereby much bound unto your Grace; nevertheless I am very sorry to perceive that your Grace should have or Cotton Libr. Faustin. C. 2.

conceive any ſiniſter or wrong Opinion in me and others, which were by the King, your late Father, and our moſt gracious Maſter, put in truſt as Executors of his Will, albeit the truth of our Doings being known to your Grace, as it ſeemeth by your ſaid Letter not to be. I truſt there ſhall be no ſuch Fault found in us, as in the ſame your Grace hath alleaged; and for my part, I know none of us that will willingly neglect the full execution of every Jot of his ſaid Will, as far as ſhall and may ſtand with the King our Maſter's Honour and Surety that now is: otherwiſe I am ſure that your Grace, nor none other his faithful Subjects, would have it take place; not doubting but our Doings and Proceedings therein, and in all things committed to our Charge, ſhall be ſuch as ſhall be able to anſwer the whole World, both in honour and diſcharge of our Conſciences. And where your Grace writeth, that the moſt part of the Realm, through a naughty Liberty and Preſumption, are now brought into ſuch a Diviſion, as if we Executors go not about to bring them to that ſtay that our late Maſter left them; they will forſake all Obedience, unleſs they have their own Will and Phantaſies, and then it muſt follow that the King ſhall not be well ſerved, and that all other Realms ſhall have us in an Obloquy and Deriſion, and not without juſt cauſe. Madam, as theſe words written or ſpoken by you ſoundeth not well, ſo can I not perſwade my ſelf, that they have proceeded from the ſincere mind of ſo vertuous and ſo wiſe a Lady, but rather by the ſetting on and procurement of ſome uncharitable and malicious Perſons, of which ſort there are too many in theſe days, the more pity: but yet we muſt not be ſo ſimple ſo to weigh and regard the ſayings of ill-diſpoſed People, and the Doings of other Realms and Countries, as for that Report we ſhould neglect our Duty to God, and to our Soveraign Lord and Native Country, for then we might be juſtly called evil Servants and Maſters; and thanks be given unto the Lord, ſuch hath been the King's Majeſty's Proceedings, our young noble Maſter that now is, that all his faithful Subjects have more cauſe to render their hearty thanks for the manifold Benefits ſhewed unto his Grace, and to his People and Realm, ſithence the firſt day of his Reign until this hour, than to be offended with it; and thereby rather to judg and think, that God, who knoweth the Hearts of all Men, is contented and pleaſed with his Miniſters, who ſeek nothing but the true Glory of God, and the Surety of the King's Perſon, with the Quietneſs and Wealth of his Subjects. And where your Grace writeth alſo, That there was a Godly Order and Quietneſs left by the King our late Maſter, your Grace's Father, in this Realm at the time of his Death; and that the Spirituality and Temporality of the whole Realm, did not only, without compulſion, fully aſſent to his Doings and Proceedings, eſpecially in Matters of Religion, but alſo in all kind of Talk, whereof, as your Grace wrote, ye can partly be witneſs your ſelf; at which your Grace's Sayings I do ſomething marvel: For if it may pleaſe you to call to your remembrance what great Labours, Travels, and Pains, his Grace had, before he could reform ſome of thoſe ſtiff-necked Romaniſts or Papiſts: yea, and did not they cauſe his Subjects riſe and rebel againſt him, and conſtrained him to take the Sword in his hand, not without danger to his Perſon and Realm? Alas, why ſhould your Grace ſo ſhortly forget that great Outrage done by thoſe Generations of of Vipers unto his Noble Perſon only for God's Cauſe? Did not ſome of the ſame ill kind alſo, I mean that Romaniſt Sect, as well within his own Realm as without, conſpire oftentimes his Death, which was manifeſtly and oftentimes proved, to the confuſion of ſome of their privy Aſſiſters. Then was it not that all the Spirituality, nor yet the Temporality, did ſo fully aſſent to his Godly Orders, as your Grace writeth of? Did not his Grace alſo depart from this Life before he had fully finiſhed ſuch Orders as he minded to have eſtabliſhed to all his People, if Death had not prevented him? Is it not moſt true, that no kind of Religion was perfected at his Death, but left all uncertain, moſt like to have brought us into Parties and Diviſions, if God had not only helpt us? And doth your Grace think it convenient it ſhould ſo remain? God forbid. What regret and ſorrow our late Maſter had, the time he ſaw he muſt depart, for that he knew the Religion was not eſtabliſhed as he purpoſed to have done, I and others can be witneſs and teſtify; and what he would have done further in it, if he had lived, a great many know, and alſo I can teſtifie: And doth your Grace, who is learned, and ſhould know God's Word, eſteem true Religion, and the knowledg of the Scriptures, to be new-fangledneſs and fantaſie? For the Lord's ſake turn the Leaf, and look the other while upon the other ſide, I mean, with another Judgment, which muſt paſs by an humble Spirit through the Peace of the Living God, who of his infinite Goodneſs and Mercy grant unto your Grace plenty thereof, to the ſatisfying of your Sovereign, and your moſt noble Hearts continual deſire.

Certain Petitions and Requeſts made by the Clergie of the Lower Houſe of the Convocation, to the moſt Reverend Father in God the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury his Grace, and the reſidue of the Prelats of the Higher Houſe, for the furtherance of certain Articles following.

Firſt; That Eccleſiaſtical Laws may be made and eſtabliſhed in this Realm by thirty two Perſons, or ſo many as ſhall pleaſe the King's Majeſty to name and appoint, according to the effect of a late Statute made in the 35*th* Year of the moſt noble King, and of moſt famous Memory, King Henry the 8*th*. So that all Judges Eccleſiaſtical, proceeding after thoſe Laws, may be without danger and peril. Ex MS. Dr. Stillingfleet.

Alſo that according to the Ancient Cuſtom of this Realm, and the Tenour of the King's Writ for the ſummoning of the Parliament, which be now, and ever have been, directed to the Biſhops of every Dioceſs, the Clergy of the Lower Houſe of the Convocation may be adjoined, and aſſociate with the Lower Houſe of the Parliament; or elſe, That all ſuch Statutes and Ordinances as ſhall be made concerning all Matters of Religion and Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical, may not paſs without the ſight and aſſent of the ſaid Clergy.

Alſo

Alſo that whereas by the Commandment of King Henry the 8th, certain Prelats and learned Men were appointed to alter the Service in the Church, and to deviſe other convenient and uniform Order therein; Who according to the ſame Appointment, did make certain Books, as they be informed: Their Requeſt is, That the ſaid Books may be ſeen and peruſed by them, for a better expedition of Divine Service to be ſet forth accordingly.

Alſo that Men being called to Spiritual Promotions, or Benefices, may have ſome Allowance for their neceſſary Living, and other Charges to be ſuſtained and born, concerning the ſame Benefices, in the firſt Year wherein they pay the firſt Fruits?

Whether the Clergy of the Convocation may liberally ſpeak their Minds without danger of Statute or Law?

Number 17.

A ſecond Petition to the ſame purpoſe.

Ex MS. Dr. Stillingfleet.

WHere the Clergy, in this preſent Convocation aſſembled, have made humble ſuit unto the moſt Reverend Father in God, my Lord Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, and all the other Biſhops, That it may pleaſe them to be a Mean to the King's Majeſty, and Lord Protector's Grace, that the ſaid Clergy, according to the Tenour of the King's Writ, and the Ancient Laws and Cuſtoms of this Noble Realm, might have their Room and Place, and be aſſociated with the Commons in the Nether Houſe of this preſent Parliament, as Members of the Common-Wealth, and the King's moſt humble Subjects. And if this may not be permitted and granted unto them, that then no Statutes or Laws concerning the Chriſtian Religion, or which ſhall concern eſpecially the Perſons, Poſſeſſions, Rooms, Livings, Juriſdictions, Goods or Chattels of the ſaid Clergy, may paſs nor be enacted, the ſaid Clergy not being made privy thereunto, and their Anſwers and Reaſons not heard. The ſaid Clergy do moſt humbly beſeech an Anſwer and Declaration to be made unto them, what the ſaid moſt Reverend Father in God, and all other the Biſhops, have done in this their humble Suit and Requeſt, to the end that the ſaid Clergy, if need be, may chuſe of themſelves ſuch able and diſcreet Perſons, which ſhall effectually follow the ſame Suit in the Name of them all.

And whereas in a Statute ordained and eſtabliſhed by Authority of Parliament at Weſtminſter, in the 25th Year of the Reign of the moſt excellent Prince King Henry the 8th; The Clergy of this Realm ſubmitting themſelves to the King's Highneſs, did knowledg and confeſs, according to the Truth, That the Convocations of the ſame Clergy have been, and ought to be aſſembled by the King's Writ, and did promiſe farther, in Verbo Sacerdotii, that they never from thenceforth would preſume to attempt, alledg, claim, or put in uſe, or enact, promulge, or execute any new Canons, Conſtitutions, Ordinances, Provincials, Provincials, or other, or by whatsoever other Name they shall be called in the Convocation, unless the King's most Royal Assent and License may to them be had to make, promulge, and execute the same. And his Majesty to give his most Royal Assent and Authority in that behalf, upon pain of every one of the Clergy doing the contrary, and being thereof Convict, to suffer Imprisonment, and make Fine at the King's Will. And that no Canons, Constitutions, or Ordinances shall be made or put in execution within this Realm, by Authority of the Convocation of the Clergy, which shall be repugnant to the King's Prerogative Royal, or the Customs, Laws, or Statutes of this Realm; which Statute is eft-soons renewed and established in the 27th Year of the Reign of the most noble King, as by the Tenour of both Statutes more at large will appear. The said Clergy being presently assembled in Convocation, by Authority of the King's Writ, do desire that the King's Majesty's License in writing, may be for them obtained and granted, according to the effect of the said Statutes authorising them to attempt, entreat, and commune of such Matters, and therein freely to give their Consents, which otherwise they may not do upon pain and peril premised.

Also the said Clergy desireth, that such Matters as concerneth Religion, which be disputable, may be quietly and in good order reasoned and disputed among them in this House, whereby the Verities of such Matters shall the better appear, and the Doubts being opened, and reasonably discussed, Men may be fully perswaded with the quietness of their Consciences, and the time well spent.

A Paper offered to Q. Elizabeth, and afterwards to K. James, concerning the Inferior Clergies being brought to the House of Commons.

Reasons to induce her Majesty, that Deans, Arch-deacons, and some other of her grave and wise Clergie, may be admitted into the Lower House of Parliament.

1. IN former Times, when Causes Ecclesiastical were either not at all, or else very rarely treated of in that Assembly, the Clergy were thought Men most meet to consult and determine of the Civil Affairs of this Realm. Ex MS. Dr. Barlace.

2. The Supream Authority in Church-Causes, is not newly granted, but reunited and restored to the Crown; and an Order is by Law already established, how all Abuses in the Church are to be reformed: so as no Cause concerning Religion may be handled in that House, without her Majesty's special leave, but with the manifest impeaching of her Prerogative Royal, and contempt of the said Order.

3. If it shall please her Highness to give way to this Course, that Church-Matters be there debated, and in part concluded: How much more necessary is it now, than it was in former Times, that some of the Clergy should be there present at the same?

4. *It

4. * It doth not appear why they were excluded, but as it is thought either the King offended with ſome of them, did ſo grievouſly puniſh the whole Body, or elſe the Ambition of one of them meeting with the ſubtilty of an undermining Politick, did occaſion this cauſeleſs Separation.

* In the ſame Paper written over to be preſented to K. James, this Article is thus varied. It is thought the Clergy falling into a Premunire, and ſo not in the King's Protection, it did afterwards pleaſe the King to pardon them, but not to reſtore them. So began this Separation, as far forth as can be collected; then the Wiſdom of a great Politician, meeting with the Ambition of as great a Prelat, wrought the continuance of the ſaid Separation; under this pretence, That it ſhould be moſt for the Honour of him and his Clergy, to be ſtill by themſelves in two Aſſemblies of Convocation, anſwerable in proportion to the two Houſes of Parliament. There are many other inconſiderable Amendments made by Biſhop Ravis's own hand.

5. They are yet to this day called by ſeveral Writs, directed into their ſeveral Dioceſſes under the Great Seal, to aſſiſt the Prince in the High Court of Parliament.

6. Though the Clergy and the Univerſities be not the worſt Members of this Common-Wealth, yet in that reſpect they are of all other in worſt condition; for in that Aſſembly every Shire hath their Knights, and every incorporate Town their Burgeſſes, only the Clergy and the Univerſities are excluded.

7. The Wiſdom and Juſtice of this Realm doth intend, That no Subject ſhould be bound to that Law, whereunto he himſelf (after a ſort) hath not yielded his Conſent; but the Clergy and the Univerſities may now be concluded by Law, without their Conſent, without their juſt Defence, without their Privity.

8. The many Motions made ſo prejudicial to the State and Being of the Clergy and Univerſities, followed now with ſo great eagerneſs in that Houſe, would then be utterly ſilenced, or ſoon repreſſed, with the ſober and ſufficient Anſwers of the Clergy preſent.

9. It would much repair the Reputation and Credit of the Clergy, which now is expoſed to great contumely and contempt, as generally abroad in this Land, ſo particularly in that Houſe. And whoſo is religious and wiſe may obſerve, That the Contempt of the Clergy is the high way to Atheiſm and all Prophaneneſs. Men are Fleſh and not Spirit, led by ordinary outward Means, and not uſually overwrought by extraordinary Inſpirations; and therefore do eaſily deſpiſe their Doctrine, whoſe Perſons they have in contempt.

10. Look into the whole World, Chriſtian or Unchriſtian, and ſee if the Civil State in every Place be not ſupported and maintained by the Dignity and Authority of their Clergies, ſubordinate and ſubjected unto them: As on the contrary, where the Clergy is baſe and contemptible, there grows an Anarchy and Confuſion. It is Conſcience that works Obedience to the temporal Magiſtrate, not Conſtitutions, nor Couſtraint; the one may command it, the other may correct the breach of it, only Religion effects a peaceable Subjection.

11. It concerneth the Clergy, moſt of all Men in England, that the preſent State be continued, as now it is happily eſtabliſhed without any alteration. Whereas ſome others in that Houſe may think it would be good for them to fiſh in troubled Waters, or that any change would be better being to them, than their present Estate wherein they live so Malecontent, through their own unthriftiness or malignity of Nature, or perverseness of Opinion.

12. If hereafter God in justice shoul plague us for our Sins, by taking away the joy of our Hearts, yet how greatly would it tend to his Glory, the Good of this Land, and the honour of her blessed Memory; if it shall please her Majesty, to leave a Portion of the Clergy interessed in that House, where they may stand for the Godly Government established in her days, against all Innovation of Popery or Puritanism?

13. In the mean time (which God in Mercy grant may be for many Generations) her Majesty shall be sure of a number more in that Assembly, that ever will be most ready to maintain her Prerogative, and to enact whatsoever may make most for her Highness safety and contentment, as the Men that next under God's Goodness do most depend upon her Princely Clemency and Protection.

14. It would much recover the ancient Estimation and Authority of that Assembly, if it might be encreased with Men of Religion, Learning and Discretion; which now is somewhat imbased by Youths, Serving-men, and Out-Laws, that injuriously are crept into the Honorable House.

15. And it is the more necessary that there were some more Men of Gravity and Judgment in that Meeting, that might counterpoise the Rashness and headiness of others that have intruded themselves, especially considering that a Cipher is as sufficient to promote a single Figure of One into the place of Ten, as the best Man that giveth Voice in that House, when they come to calculating.

A Letter of Martin Bucers to Gropper.

Gratiam & Pacem Doctissime & Amicissime Vir.

Quod tam sero respondeo ad tuas Literas, quanquam etiam occupationes Ministerii mei, tamen id magis in causa fuit, quod non satis sciverem, quomodo respondere conveniret, simul meæ in te Charitati meoq; Ministerio, & præsenti temporis conditioni. Sed tamen quia Charitati Deus facile omnia secundat, & frugifera facit, hac incitatus nunc respondeo, & respondeo ex ejus dictatione. Ex MS. Col. C. C. Cantab.

Et primum de eo, quod te de meo adventu & Ministerio non præmonuerim. Quod per totam Germaniam increbuerat, etiam antequam Ego certus de vocatione ista essem, non putavi te latere posse. Nec etiam ut adveni & priusquam aliquid Ministerii inivissem, tuum colloquium expetii. Certe nihil maluissem quam a te ante omnia doceri & instrui. Novit Christus quid tibi Tribuam.

Quod scribis te cupere meam conditionem sic esse ut Clero & populo Vestræ Coloniæ Agrippinæ gratus esse & placere possem, hanc cum secus se res habeant, non esse quod tibi quid imputem. Tibi optime Groppere nihil hujus imputo, confido enim te, me, quo ipſe loco habes, eo etiam ſtudere apud alios collocare.

Sed cogitemus juxta, cui, Ego Clero iſtic, cui populo & cui gratus minus ſim, & non placeam, Clerus & Populus Chriſti cum Domino ſuo. Perſonam nullam in invocantibus Chriſtum, in iis præſertim, quos aliqua Religionis Noſtræ opinio commendat, averſatur: quamvis deprehenſi in contumelia Chriſti, in deſertione verbi ejus, in Scandalo objecto Eccleſiæ ejus; Lex noſtra non Judicat quenquam niſi audierit prius ab eo, & cognoverit quid fecerit. Audiant, cognoſcant, tum Judicent: audire & cognoſcere nolunt nec Judicare jure poſſunt. Vulgata eſt hæc Reſponſio, ſed noſti etiam Jure Divino, Naturæ, & ſcripto ab hominibus niti.

Sed O Clerum, O ſortem Domini, & habentes Chriſtum ſortem ſuam. Gratias ago Chriſto Domino noſtro quod in me nihil deprehendet veſter Clerus & Populus, cur me ullo Jure abjicere, nedum proſequi queant. Aſſumpſit me Dominus, Servorum non eſt rejicere: poſuit me in Miniſterium ſuum Chriſtus, depelli ine eo nemo de Clero Chriſti poſtulabit. Agnoſcunt ſe invicem & amant, atq; in opere eodem permovent, quicunq; Chriſti Spiritu vivunt & aguntur, qui hunc non habet, Chriſti non ſunt, quicquid ipſi ſe, vel alii eos vocent.

Diſplicet in me quod videor aliquid Canonum, ſed humanitus tum Conditorum, tranſgreſſus. Hoc ſi propter Eccleſiam Chriſti, vel ejus ædificationem vel ornatum diſpliceret, non tolerata fuiſſent tam diu, & hodie tolerarentur, tam horrendæ & Manifeſtæ Simoniæ, Sacrilegia, & vitæ totius tanta, adeoq; & Canonibus, & Divinis Legibus graviter damnata fœditas. Chriſti igitur veritas, & libertas in me diſplicet, non tranſgreſſio Canonum, quam in ſummis neceſſariis Sanctionibus penitus & tot jam ſæculis pro ridiculo habent.

Conſolabor itaq; me in Domino, Beati eſtis, cum vos odio habuerint homines, & a ſe excluſerint, atq; convitiis proſciderint & rejecerint nomen veſtrum tanquam nefandum; Cauſa Filii hominis, Qui in Cœlis ſedet. Pater videt profecto hoſce conatus contra Regnum Filii ſui, & brevi loquetur illis in ira ſua. Avertat miſericordia ejus, quæ ſequuntur.

Deploranda profecto Cæcitas, non videre hanc Dei clariſſimam lucem, infanda ſtupiditas, iſta Dei Judicia non ſentire. Quotidie cernunt & audiunt ut collidantur, qui impingunt in hanc Petram Scandali, & ut commolat illa, in quos ipſa ceciderit, & tamen conantur huc rejicere hunc lapidem, quem Pater in Zion pro fundamento & angulo poſuit. Sed dolent hæc & tibi, ac mecum ea deploras, provides enim quid iſta malorum invehant, & adhuc invectura ſint.

Audio pleroſq; multo quam antea ſolitum fuit concionari purius, audivi etiam quoſdam ipſe, in quorum concionibus nihil reprehendendum audiebatur, aut quam multa deſiderabantur. Chriſtum Christum pure & ἐνεργῶς cum effectu prædicat, qui ferat tam pudendam Idolatriam? Et si ornari statuam posse aliquo colore dicere conetur, quare non eum cultum præscribet, quem gratum Martyribus & S. Patres tradiderunt, cultum qui Cruci Christi sit consentaneus: Sed sicut ipsi verbis Christo omnia tribuunt, facto autem quærunt & prosequuntur ea multa contra Christum, ita faciunt etiam populum delectari nonnihil Saniore Doctrina. Omni autem Vita & Religione permanere in omnibus Superstitionibus & Vitæ impuritate in qua antea hærebat.

Jactatur magna populi devotio istis & erga Pastores suos reverentia, hoc autem gravius peccatur, cum illis Christus non quam simplicissime in omnibus etiam Ceremoniis prædicatur. Sed O spinas existimationis & commoditas mundialis, O fundum tenuem, & humorem malignum, in quo æstus Crucis enatum semen tam cito arefacit! Hæc de iis scribo ad quos pertinent.

De te non dubito Gloriam Christi & propugnationem Regni ejus ubi quoq; ut scribis, cordi esse: tamen te rogo per Christum id quod agis diligenter & coram Christo Domino exercitas.

Sed nolui tamen sic urgere Causam Christi, ut dum promotam eam velim, magis remorer. Zelum oportet esse secundum scientiam. Recte hæc, si rite intelligantur. Sed scientia Spiritus, non Carnis, hic opus est. Causa Christi nec debet nec potest per se quidem urgeri nisi assiduis precibus, & modesta, leni, Religiosa, sed libera, sed clara, sed integra confessione & prædicatione Christi, eaq; quæ non verbis tantum sed etiam factis constet. Hoc si scimus & agimus, Zelum habemus secundum scientiam, & Causam Christi tantum promovere, & remorari non possumus. Nam Christo tradita est omnis potestas in Cœlo & in Terra, ipsique nihil est Potestatis per se Pontifici, cucullatis & personatis, ac quibusvis titulis titulatis hominibus, qui scilicet ægreferant liberam & apertam Christi Prædicationem. Est quidem aliquando tacendum Evangelium Christi, sed apud canes & porcos, imo nec apud hos tacendum est, cum Gloria Christi agitur: sed animose confitendum est, quanquam non sit illis late explicandum, id est, Sanctum hoc projiciendum & Margaritæ istæ spargendæ.

Sunt qui ferre nos Lutheranos non possunt, & tamen a Regno Christi non abhorrent? Ubi quæso sunt & qui? Qui enim aliquid Christi sapiunt, ii neminem odisse & condemnare sustinent, non auditum, non cognita causa; nam Filii Dei agnoscunt loquelam Christi, oves quæ sequuntur vocem ejus, per quemcunq; eam insonari fecerit.

Si Reformatio Ecclesiæ per istos ulla quæritur, indubie id quærent, ut Membra Christi omnia sub Capite Christo recolligantur & reconcinnentur & conptentur. Quare nemo horum, qui vero Reformationis sunt studio tenetur, ullum hominem sub ullo titulo, quamvis odiosum scandalo Crucis Christi, cuiquam imposuerit, ab hoc sancto opere instaurandi Ecclesias rejiciat, præsertim cum luce meridiana constet clarius, Pontificios nihil prorsus passuros mutari. Quid ergo? non quæremus ut Patria nostra tam pernitiosis desidiis aliquando liberaretur, ut uno tandem ore Christum glorificemus.

Ne resecemus vites, & uvas queramus a Spinis. Valeat apud nos præjudicium Christi; quoscq; ille assumpsit, eos conservi ne repudiemus. Quid cuiq; datum sit facile videre est: arbor quælibet ut plantata est, ut ingenium habet, ita fert fructum. Ne fugiamus Scandalum

Crucis cum quo Christus est. Et si Christi nos non pudet, nec servorum ejus nos pudeat. Paulus scribit Timotheo, ne pudet te Testimonii Domini nostri, neq; mei vincti ejus: ita dum nos negotia Domini agimus sinceriter, nec nostri quisquam, quamtumlibet nos Mundus inter damnatos numeret, qui Christi sit, pudebit. Non est res ulla, ad quam quisquam eam sincere agit, magis expetat adjuvari se, etiamsi fieri posset ab omnibus Creaturis, atq; est negotium Reformationis Christianæ.

Irascentur quidam, tumultuabuntur graviter credo, & impedient negotium Domini; hoc non credo, neq; enim poterunt. Et ut Dominus eis gravissima contra Regnum suum facere concedat, tamen nobis Filii Dei propterea nihil tacendum, nihil dissimulandum, nihil remittendum est in hac Causa Christi.

Jubes me non suspicari te sic mundo inescatum, ut refugias Crucem Domini ferre, si ita res postulet, & fructum facturus videare: de te profecto hoc bonis apud quos convenit semper Testor, te mihi multo plura in Causa Christi hactenus semper reipsa præstitisse, quam promisisse aut etiam verbis præ te tulisse: apud me quidem, cum contrarium tuæ vitæ cidat a quodam, nisi te Christi membrum & præclaris dotibus ornatum suspicerem, credo, ita dedit mihi Dominus sublimia Mundi non mirari, tuam amicitiam & familiaritatem tantopere non quæsiviſſem, nec ut studio colerem: sed valde oro Dominum det tibi videre ubi, quando & qua ratione fructum pro Regno facere possis; & animet te ac corroboret forti contemplatione Potestatis & Majestatis suæ, ut vere dicas, non mihi gloriari nisi in Cruce Domini Nostri Jesu Christi per quem mihi Mundus Crucifixus est & ego mundo. Tantæ opes, honores, Curiarum sæcularium, tamen spinæ sunt, tamen onera sunt. Presbyteri Domini Nostri Jesu Christi, cujus præcipuum munus est prædicare Christum. Clericum veteres Sancti non patiebantur, vel tutelam pupillorum, vel curam viduarum suscipere, tam liberum volebant esse eris hujus Sæculi omnem Clericum: at quantis tu ac etiam privatis cum, nec tamen semper Pupillorum & Viduarum prægravaris, id dolet hodie & tibi ipsi. Acceptabile Tempus nunc est & Dies Salutis, sed tempus breve, visitationem Nostram tempore agnoscamus & sequamur.

Hæc dum non datur commentari tecum coram, quia te vere diligo, quia colo sinceriter, cum hunc certum haberem nuncium, ad te scribere volui.

Quod magnificum D. Cancellarium meis Verbis diligenter Salutasti, gratias ago, utinam autem & resalutare ille, vel hic cum fuit, quod usq; ad eam Diem quo iterum abiit clam me fuit, admittere me ad pium colloquium dignatus esset. Tamen rogo salutes illum officiose meis verbis.

Dominus Jesus qui solus & efficit & largitur omne bonum, donet ut omnia in ipso quæramus, & ab ipso expectemus: Sic facile nos in ipso agnoscemus & complectemur, quicquid odiosorum Titulorum Diabolus & Membra ejus injiciant. In Christo enim nec Mas quidem & Fœmina, Judæus & Ethnicus, nedum Lutherani & Romani; sed omnes unum sunt. In hoc bene vale, & fac pro Christi Charitate ut tandem nos aliquando videamus, & Sancto Colloquio nos mutuo recreemus. Optime mi & colende atq; vere dilecte Cordi meo Groppere. Bonn pridie Calendas Februarii 1543.

M. Bucerus.

Præcipuum oblitus eram, te per Christum rogo & obtestor, mone ad hunc me, versantem in Negotio Christi. Debes hoc Christo; & apud me tuto depones omnia nec unquam frustra monebis.

Questions and Answers concerning the Divorce of the Marquess of Northampton.

1. QUid dirimit Matrimonii Vinculum? Ex MS. Dr. Stillingfleet.
2. Quas ob causas dirimi poterit?
3. An dirimi poterit Conjugium a thoro, non a vinculo?
4. Quibus casibus possit sic dirimi?
5. An exceptio illa (excepta Fornicationis causa) etiam in Lucæ, Marci & Pauli locis, qui de his rebus tractant, est subaudienda?
6. An etiam Uxor, repudiata propter Adulterium, alteri poterit nubere?
7. An redire ad priorem maritum, repudiatæ Adulteræ liceat?
8. An Maritus, propter Adulterium, ab Uxore casta possit repudiari?

Ad primam Respondemus; Ipso Adulterii facto Matrimonii vinculum dirimi. Nam alioquin, ob solum Adulterium non liceret viro Uxorem repudiare: voluntas viri solicitat judices, Judices palam faciunt Ecclesiæ, virum licite talem repudiare Uxorem.

Ad secundam Resp. Quod ob solam causam stupri dirimitur Matrimonii vinculum: cujus ipso quidem facto, Conjugii dissolvitur nodus; & loquimur his, qui Sacrosancti Matrimonii jus agnoscunt.

Ad tertiam Resp. Quod non; quia Mulier quamdiu vixerit, alligata est viro, Rom. 7. item ne fraudetis vos invicem, 1 Cor. 7. item in eodem loco Uxori Vir debitam benevolentiam reddat simpliciter, & Uxor viro, non Vir non habat potestatem sui corporis, sed Uxor similiter; nec Uxor habeat potestatem sui corporis, sed Vir.

Ad quartam patet in responsione ad tertiam.

Ad quintam Respondemus; quod exceptio ista, viz. Nisi causa stupri; est subaudienda in Luca, Marco & Paulo: alioquin manifesta erit repugnantia inter Matthæum & eos.

Ad sextam respond. Quod repudiata propter Adulterium, quia Uxor repudiantis desiit esse, ob idq; libera est sicut aliæ omnes post obitum virorum possunt aliis nubere; æquo jure juxta illud Pauli, si non continent, contrahant Matrimonium, 1 Cor. 7.

Ad septimam respond. Quod non licet repudiatæ Adulteræ redire ad repudiantem, tanquam alligatæ ei Jugi vinculo Matrimonii.

Ultima Quæstio Nihil ad Nos.

Injunctions

Number 21.

Injunctions given by the King's Majesty's Visitors, to all and every the Clergie and Laity, now resident within the Deanry of Ducastre.

Ex MS. Dr. Johnson.

Item. YOu shall not hereafter, in the Pulpit or elsewhere, on the Sunday, or any other day, give knowledg to your Parishioners, when or what day in the Week any of the Abrogate Holy-days were solemnized or kept in the Church, but omit the same with silence as other Working-days, for the utter abolishing of the remembrance thereof.

Item. You shall teach your Parishioners, That Fasting in the Lent, and other days, is a meer Positive, that is to say, Man's Law; and by the Magistrates, upon considerations, may be altered, changed, and dispensed with: and that therefore all Persons having just cause of Sickness, or other Necessity, or being licensed thereto, may temperately eat all kinds of Meat, without scruple or grudg of Conscience.

Item. You shall every day, that an High Mass is said or sung at the High Altar, before the same Mass, read openly in your Church the English Suffrages, for the preservation and safeguard of the King's Majesty's People, and prosperous success of his Affairs.

Item. You shall every Sunday, at the time of your going about the Church with Holy-Water, into three or four places, where most audience and assembly of People is, for the declaration of the Ceremonies, say, distinctly and plainly, that your Parishioners may well hear and perceive the same, these words, Remember Christ's Blood-shedding, by the which only sprinkling of all your Sins you have free pardon.

And in like manner, before the dealing of the Holy Bread, these words,

Of Christ's Body this is a Token; which on the Cross for our sins was broken; wherefore of his Death if you will be partaker, Vice and Sin you must be forsaker.

And the Clarke in the like manner shall bring down the Pax, and standing without the Church-Door, shall say loudly to the People these words;

This is a Token of joyful Peace, which is betwixt God and Man's Conscience: Christ alone is the Peace-maker, which straitly commands Peace between Brother and Brother.

And so long as ye use these Ceremonies, so long shall ye use these Significations.

Item

Item. The Church-Wardens of every Parish-Church shall, some one Sunday, or other Festival day, every Month, go about the Church, and make request to every of the Parish for their charitable Contribution to the Poor; and the Sum so collected, shall be put in the Chest of Alms for that purpose provided. And forasmuch as the Parish-Clark shall not hereafter go about the Parish with his Holy Water as hath been accustomed, he shall, instead of that labour, accompany the said Church-Wardens, and in a Book Register the Name and Sum of every Man that giveth any thing to the Poor, and the same shall intable; and against the next day of Collection, shall hang up some-where in the Church in open place, to the intent the Poor having knowledg thereby, by whose Charity and Alms they be relieved, may pray for the increase and prosperity of the same.

Item. The Church-Wardens, for the better relief of honest Poverty, shall, upon sufficient Surety found for the repayment of the same, lend to some young married Couple, or some poor Inhabitants of their Parish, some part of the said Alms, whereby they may buy some kind of Stuff, by the working, sale, and gains whereof, they may repay the Sum borrowed, and also well relieve themselves; or else the said Church-Wardens to buy the Stuff themselves, and pay the Poor for their working thereof; and after sale of the same, to return the Sum, with the gain, to the said Chest, there to remain to such-like use.

Item. Forasmuch as heretofore you have not, by any means, diligence or study, advanced your selves unto knowledg in God's Word, and the Scriptures, condignly, as appertaineth to Priests, and Dispensers of God's Testament; to the intent you may hereafter be of better ability to discharge your selves towards God, and your Offices to the World, you shall daily, for your own study and knowledg, read over diligently, and weigh with judgment, two Chapters of the New Testament, and one of the Old, in English, and the same shall put in use and practice, as well in living as preaching, at times convenient, when occasion is given.

Item. Forasmuch as Drunkenness, Idleness, Brawls, Dissention, and many other Inconveniences do chance between Neighbour and Neighbour, by the assembly of People together at Wakes, and on the Plough-Mondays; it is therefore ordered and enjoined, That hereafter the People shall use, make, or observe no more such Wakes, Plough-Mondays, or drawing of the same, with any such Assembly or Rout of People, or otherwise, as hath been accustomed, upon pain of forfeiting to the King's Highness 40 s. for every Default, to be paid by the Owner of the Plough and Housholder, whereunto the said Plough is drawn, or Wakes are kept.

A Proclamation against those that do innovate, alter, or leave undone any Rite or Ceremony in the Church on their private Authority; and against them which preach without License. Set forth the 6th day of February, in the second Year of the King's Majesty's most gracious Reign.

Ex Reg. Cranmer. Fol. 111.

THe King's Majesty, by the advice of his most entirely beloved Uncle, the Duke of Somerset, Governor of his said Royal Person, and Protector of all his Realms, Dominions, and Subjects, and others of his Counsel; Considering nothing so much to tend to the disquieting of this Realm, as diversity of Opinions and variety of Rites and Ceremonies concerning Religion, and Worshipping of Almighty God; and therefore studying all the ways and means which can be to direct this Church, and the Cure committed to his Highness, in one and most true Doctrine Rite, and Usage, yet is advertised, That certain privat Curats, Preachers, and other Lay-men, contrary to their bounden Duties of Obedience, have attempt, of their own and singular Wit and Mind, in some parts of their Churches, and otherwise, not only to persuade the People from their old and accustomed Rites and Ceremonies, but also themselves use-eth in new Orders every one in their Church, according to their Phantasies; the which, as it is an evident token of Pride and Arrogance, so it tendeth both to Confusion and Disorder, and also to the high displeasure of Almighty God, who loveth nothing so much as Order and Obedience. Wherefore his Majesty straitly chargeth and commandeth, That no manner of Person, of what Estate, Order, or Degree soever he be, of his privat Mind, Will, or Phantasie, do omit, leave undone, change, alter, or innovate any Order, Rite, or Ceremony, commonly used and frequented in the Church of England, and not commanded to be left undone at any time in the Reign of the late Soveraign Lord, his Highness Father, other than such as his Highness, by the Advice aforesaid, by his Majesty's Visitors, Injunctions, Statutes, or Proclamations, hath already, or hereafter shall command to be omitted, left, innovated, or changed, but that they be observed after that sort as before they were accustomed, or else untill by prescribed by the Authority of his Majesty, or by the means aforesaid; upon pain, That whosoever shall offend contrary to this Proclamation, shall incur his Highness Indignation, and suffer Imprisonment, and other grievous Punishments, at his Majesty's Will and Pleasure. Provided always, that for not bearing a Candle upon Candlemas-day; not taking Ashes upon Ash-wednesday; not bearing Palm upon Palm-Sunday; not creeping to the Cross; not taking Holy Bread, or Holy Water; or for omitting other such Rites and Ceremonies concerning Religion, and the use of the Church, which the most Reverend Father in God, the Arch-bishop of Canterbury, by by his Majesty's Will and Commandment, with the Advice aforesaid, hath declared, or hereafter shall declare to the other Bishops, by his Writing under Seal, as heretofore hath been accustomed to be omitted or changed, no Man hereafter be imprisoned, nor otherwise punished, but all such things to be reputed for the observation and following of the same, as though they were commanded by his Majesty's Injunctions. And to the intent that rash and seditious Preachers should not abuse his Highness People, it is his Majesty's Pleasure, That whosoever shall take upon him to preach openly in any Parish-Church, Chappel, or any other open place, other than those which be licensed by the King's Majesty, or his Highness Visitors; the Arch-bishop of Canterbury, or the Bishop of the Diocess where he doth preach, except it be Bishop, Parson, Vicar, Dean, Warden, or Provost, in his or their own Cure, shall be forthwith, upon such attempt and preaching, contrary to this Proclamation, be committed to Prison, and there remain, until such time as his Majesty, by the advice aforesaid, hath taken order for the further punishment of the same. And that the Premises should be more speedily and diligently done and performed, his Highness giveth straitly in Commandment, to all Justices of Peace, Mayors, Sheriffs, Constables, Headboroughs, Churchwardens, and all other his Majesty's Officers and Ministers, and Rulers of Towns, Parishes, and Hamlets, that they be diligent and attendant to the true and faithful execution of this Proclamation, and every part thereof, according to the intent, purport, and effect of the same. And that they of their proceedings herein, or if any Offence be, after they have committed the same to Prison, do certifie his Highness the Lord Protector, or his Majesty's Council, with all speed thereof accordingly, as they tender his Majesty's Pleasure, the Wealth of the Realm, and will answer to the contrary at their utmost perils.

God save the King.

An Order of Council for the Removing of Images.

AFter our right hearty Commendations to your good Lordship, where now of late, in the King's Majesty's Visitation, among other godly Injunctions commanded to be generally observed throughout all Parts of this his Highness Realm, one was set forth for the taking down all such Images as had at any time been abused with Pilgrimages, Offerings, or Censings. Albeit that this said Injunction hath in many parts of the Realm been well and quietly obeyed and executed, yet in many other places much Strife and Contention hath arisen, and daily ariseth, and more and more encreaseth, about the execution of the same: some Men being so superstitious, or rather willful, as they would by their good-wills, retain all such Images still, although they have been most manifestly abused; and in some places also the Images, which by the said Injunctions were taken down, be now restored and set up again;

Regist. Cran. Fol. 32.

again; and almoſt in every place is contention for Images, whether they have been abuſed or not. And whiles theſe Men go about on both ſides contentiouſly to obtain their Minds, contending whether this or that Image hath been offered unto, kiſſed, cenſed, or otherwiſe abuſed, Parties have in ſome places been taken, in ſuch ſort, as further inconvenience is very like to enſue, if Remedy be not provided in time. Conſidering therefore that almoſt in no places of the Realm is any ſure quietneſs, but where all Images be wholly taken away and pulled down already; to the intent that all Contention in every part of the Realm for this Matter may be clearly taken away, and that the lively Images of Chriſt ſhould not contend for the dead Images, which be things not neceſſary, and without which the Churches of Chriſt continued moſt Godly many Years, We have thought good to ſignify unto you, That his Highneſs Pleaſure, with advice and conſent of us the Lord Protector, and the reſt of the Council, is, That immediately upon the ſight hereof, with as convenient diligence as you may, you ſhall not only give order, that all the Images remaining in any Church or Chappel within your Dioceſs be removed and taken away, but alſo by your Letters ſignify unto the reſt of the Biſhops within your Province, this his Highneſs Pleaſure, for the like Order to be given by them, and every of them within their ſeveral Dioceſs; and in the execution hereof We require, both you and the reſt of the ſaid Biſhops, to uſe ſuch foreſight, as the ſame may be quietly done, with as good ſatisfaction of the People as may be. Thus fare your good Lordſhip well. From Somerſet Houſe, the 21 of February, 1547.

The Copy of a Letter ſent to all thoſe Preachers which the King's Majeſty hath licenſed to preach, from the Lord Protector's Grace, and other of the King's Majeſty's moſt honourable Council; the 13th day of May, in the Second Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord, King Edward the 6th.

AFter our right hearty Commendations, as well for the Conſervation of the Quietneſs and good Order of the King's Majeſty's Subjects, as that they ſhould not, by evil and unlearned Preachers, be brought unto Superſtition, Error, or evil Doctrine, or otherwiſe, be made ſtubborn and diſobedient to the King's Majeſty's Godly Proceedings, his Highneſs, by our Advice, hath thought good to inhibit all manner of Preachers, who have not ſuch Licenſe, as in the ſame Proclamation is allowed, to preach, or ſtir the People, in open and common preaching of Sermons, by any means, that the devout and godly Homilies,

Homilies, might the better, in the mean while, ſink into his Subjects Hearts, and be learned the ſooner, the People not being toſſed to and fro with ſeditious and contentious Preaching, while every Man, according to his Zeal, ſome better, ſome worſe, goeth about to ſet out his own Phantaſie, and to draw the People to his Opinion. Nevertheleſs it is not his Majeſty's Mind hereby clearly to extinct the lively Teaching of the Word of God, by Sermons made after ſuch ſort, as for the time the Holy Ghoſt ſhall put into the Preacher's Mind, but that raſh, contentious, hot, and undiſcreet Preachers ſhould be ſtopped; and that they only which be choſen and elect, be diſcreet and ſober Men, ſhould occupy that place, which was made for Edification, and not for Deſtruction; for the Honour of God, and Peace and Quietneſs of Conſcience to be ſet forward, not for private Glory to be advanced; to appeaſe, to teach; to inſtruct the People with Humility and Patience, not to make them contentious and proud; to inſtil into them their Duty to their Heads and Rulers, Obedience to Laws and Orders, appointed by the Superiors who have Rule of God; not that every Man ſhould run before their Heads have appointed them what to do, and that every Man ſhould chuſe his own way in Religion: The which thing yet being done of ſome Men, and they being rather provoked thereto by certain Preachers, than dehorted from it, it was neceſſary to ſet a ſtay therein: And yet foraſmuch as we have a great confidence and truſt in you, that you will not only Preach truly and ſincerely the Word of God, but alſo will uſe circumſpection and moderation in your Preaching, and ſuch Godly Wiſdom as ſhall be neceſſary and moſt convenient for the Time and Place. We have ſent unto you the King's Majeſty's Licenſe to Preach; but yet with this Exhortation and Admoniſhment, That in no wiſe you do ſtir and provoke the People to any Alteration or Innovation, other than is already ſet forth by the King's Majeſty's Injunctions, Homilies, and Proclamations; but contrariwiſe, That you do in all your Sermons exhort Men to that which is at this time more neceſſary; that is, to the emendation of their own Lives, to the obſervance of the Commandments of God, to Humility, Patience, and Obedience to their Heads and Rulers; comforting the Weak, and teaching them the right way, and to flee all old Erroneous Superſtitions, as the Confidence in Pardons, Pilgrimages, Beads, Religious Images, and other ſuch of the Biſhop of Rome's Traditions and Superſtions, with his uſurped Power; the which things be here in this Realm moſt juſtly aboliſhed; and ſtraitly rebuking thoſe, who of an arrogancy and proud haſtineſs, will take upon them to run before they be ſent, to go before the Rulers, to alter and change things in Religion without Authority, teaching them to expect and tarry the time which God hath ordained, to the revealing of all Truth, and not to ſeek ſo long blindly and hidlings after it, till they bring all Orders into contempt. It is not a private Man's Duty to alter Ceremonies, to innovate Orders in the Church; nor yet it is not a Preacher's part to bring that into contempt and hatred, which the Prince doth either allow, or is content to ſuffer. The King's Highneſs, by our Advice, as a Prince moſt earneſtly given to the true knowledg of God, and to bring up his People therein, doth not ceaſe to labour and travel by all godly means, that his Realm might be brought and kept in a moſt Godly and Chriſtian Order, who only may and ought to do it. Why ſhould a private Man, or a Preacher, take this Royal and Kingly Office upon him; and not rather, as his Duty is, obediently follow himſelf, and teach likewiſe others to follow and obſerve that which is commanded. What is aboliſhed, taken away, reformed, and commanded, it is eaſy to ſee by the Acts of Parliament, the Injunctions, Proclamations, and Homilies: the which things moſt earneſtly it behoveth all Preachers in their Sermons to confirm and approve accordingly; in other things which be not yet touched, it behoveth him to think, that either the Prince doth allow them, or elſe ſuffer them; and in thoſe it is the part of a Godly Man, not to think himſelf wiſer than the King's Majeſty, and his Council: but patiently to expect and to conform himſelf thereto, and not to intermeddle further to the diſturbance of a Realm, the diſquieting of the King's People, the troubling of Mens Conſciences, and diſorder of the King's Subjects.

Theſe things we have thought good to admoniſh you of at this time, becauſe we think you will ſet the ſame ſo forward in your preaching, and ſo inſtruct the King's Majeſty's People accordingly, to the moſt advancement of the Glory of God, and the King's Majeſty's moſt Godly Proceedings, that we do not doubt but much Profit ſhall enſue thereby, and great Conformity in the People the which you do inſtruct; and ſo we pray you not to fail to do. And having a ſpecial regard to the weakneſs of the People what they may bear, and what is moſt convenient for the time: in no caſe to intermeddle in your Sermons, or otherwiſe, with Matters in Contention or Controverſion, except it be to reduce the People in them alſo to Obedience, and following of ſuch Orders as the King's Majeſty hath already ſet forth, and no others, as the King's Majeſty and our Truſt is in you, and as you tender his Highneſs Will and Pleaſure, and will anſwer to the contrary at your Peril.

Fare you well.

Whether the Sacrament of the Altar was inſtituted to be received of one Man for another, or to be received of every Man for himſelf? Ex MS. Dr. Stillingfleet.

Anſwers.

THe Sacrament of the Altar was not inſtituted to be received of one Man for another, but to be recived by every Man for himſelf. Cantuarien.

The Sacrament of the Altar was not inſtituted to be received of one Man for one other, but of every Man for himſelf. Eboracen.

I think that the Sacrament of Thanks was not inſtituted to be received of one Man for another, but of every Man for himſelf. London. Worceſter. Hereford. Norvicen. Ciceſtren. Aſſaven.

The Sacrament of the Altar was inſtituted, to be received of every Man by himſelf, to make him a Member of Chriſt's Myſtical Body, and to knit and unite him to Chriſt our Head; as St. Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 10. Unus Panis, & unum Corpus, multi ſumus omnes qui de uno pane participamus. Dunelm.

The Sacrament of the Altar was not inſtituted to be received of one Man for another Sacramentally, no more than one Man to be Chriſtened for another: notwithſtanding the Grace received by him that is Houſled, or Chriſtened, is profitable and available to the whole Myſtical Body of Chriſt, and therefore to every lively Member thereof. Sarisburien.

The Sacrament (as they call it) of the Altar, was not inſtituted to be received of one for another, but of every Man for himſelf: For Chriſt, the Inſtitutor of this Sacrament, ſaith, with manifeſt words, Take, eat, &c. Mat. 26. And alſo, John 6. Except ye eat the Fleſh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye have no Life in you. Whoſo eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, hath eternal Life. Nor the receiving of one Man doth avail or profit any other; otherwiſe than by the way of Example, whereby the People preſent are provoked to the imitation of the thing that is good. Lincoln.

The

Elien. The Sacrament of the Altar was not inſtituted to be received of one Man for another, but of every Man for himſelf.

Covent. & Litchfield. I think and ſuppoſe, that the Sacrament of the Altar was inſtituted to be received of every Man for himſelf; for ſo are the words of Chriſt, Comedite & bibite, ſpeaking to them preſent, and to every one of them.

Carliolen. The Sacrament of the Altar was not ordained or inſtituted to be received of one Man alone, but of all, and for all, becauſe it is the general and continual Remedy, help, and ſuccour of all, which maketh no let or ſtop of themſelves, and their own unfaithful or ſinful Life.

Roffen. Of every Man for himſelf.

Briſtollen. The Sacrament of the Altar was not inſtituted to be received of one Man for another Sacramentally, no more than one Man to be Chriſtened for another, but every Man to receive it in Faith and cleanlineſs of Life for himſelf.

Meneven. The Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt was not inſtituted, that one Man ſhould receive it for another, but every Man for himſelf. Probet autem ſeipſum homo, & ſic de pane illo edat, & de populo illo bibat. Cor. 11.

Dr. Cox. The Sacrament of Thanks was inſtituted to be received of every Man for himſelf, and not of one for another.

Dr. Tyler. Of every Man for himſelf.

Queſt. 2.

Whether the Receiving of the ſaid Sacrament of one Man, doth avail and profit any other?

Anſwers.

Cantuarien. THe Receiving of the ſaid Sacrament by one Man, doth avail and profit only him that receiveth the ſame.

Eboracen. The Receiving of the Sacrament only availeth the Receivers thereof, except it be by reaſon of ſuch Communion as is among the Members of the Myſtical Body of Chriſt.

London. Worceſter. Hereford. Norvicen. Ciceſtren. Aſſaven. I think that the receiving of the ſaid Sacrament, doth not avail or profit any other, but only as all other good Works done of any Member of Chriſt's Church, be available to the whole Myſtical Body of Chriſt, and to every lively Member of the ſame, by reaſon of mutual participation, Participation, and ſpiritual Communion between them. And alſo it may be profitable to others, as an Example whereby others may be ſtirred to Devotion, and to like Receiving of the ſame.

The Receiving of the Sacrament of one Man doth profit another, as the health and good-liking of one Member, doth in part ſtrengthen the Body, and other Members of the ſame: for St. Paul ſaith, Multi unum corpus ſumus in Chriſto, ſinguli autem alter alterius membra, Rom. 12. & 1 Cor. 12. Si gaudet unum membrum, congaudent omnia membra. And in a Myſtical Body, the good living of one Man, ſtirreth another to the ſame. Dunelm.

The Oblation made after the Conſecration in the Maſs, is the offering unto the Father of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, by the Miniſter, with the Commemoration of the Paſſion, and with Thankſgiving for the ſame, and with the Prayers of the Miniſter and People, that it may be available to all Chriſtian People. Sarisburien.

The receiving thereof of one Man, doth not avail or profit any other, but as all good Deeds profit the Congregation; and as one Member healed or taking nouriſhment, profiteth another Member. Elien.

And I ſuppoſe alſo, that the Receiving of one Man doth not avail or profit another, but as every good Act or Deed of one Member doth profit to the whole Body. Covent. & Litchfield.

The Receiving of the Sacrament, as it noteth the Act of him who receiveth, it may be, that it neither availeth or profiteth him who receiveth, nor any other, but alſo hurts the Receiver, if he preſume to take it raſhly or unworthily. But as touching the thing which is Sacred, offered, and diſtributed by the Common Miniſter in the Maſs, repreſenting the Holy Church, or Myſtical Body of Chriſt, and is received both of him and other that will, whatſoever the Receiving or Receiver be, it availeth and profiteth all preſent, abſent, Living and Dead. Carliolen.

No, but as the receipt of wholſome Doctrine, the receipt of the Fear of God, the receipt of any Godly Gift that is profitable to any one Member of Chriſt's Myſtical Body, may be ſaid generally to profit the whole Body, becauſe there is a myſtical Communion, and a ſpiritual Participation amongſt all the Members of Chriſt in all Godlineſs; as there is in the natural Body a natural participation of all natural Affections both good and evil. Roffen.

It appeareth, by the words of St. Cyprian, Epiſt. 6. Lib. 3. that it ſhould be profitable and available to others, foraſmuch as he wrote theſe words of the faithful Chriſtians which departed this World in Perſion, and ſaid; Quanquam fideliſſimus & devotiſſimus frater noſter, inter cætera ſolicitudinem & curam ſuam cum fratribus in omni obſequio pietatis impertitur, qui nec illic curam corporum —— ſcripſerit ac ſcripſit ac ſignificat mihi dies quibus in carcere beati fratres noſtri ad immortalitatem Briſtollen.

litatem glorioſæ mortis exitu tranſeant & celebrentur, hic a nobis Oblationes & Sacrificia ob commemorationes eorum, quæ cito vobiſcum, domine proſperante, celebrabimus. Ita enim docuit Apoſtolus Chriſti unus Panis & unum
1 Cor. 1. Corpus multi ſumus omnes, qui de uno Pane, & de uno Calice participamus. Nec loquitur de his ſolis qui eo tempore Corinthi conveniebant, & Sacramentum ab unius Sacerdotis manu recipiebant; Verum potius de ſeipſis tunc procul a Corintho agente, & Corinthiis ipſis omnibuſq; in Chriſtum credentibus ubi tandem conſtituti eſſent quos omnes ſignificat unum eſſe Corpus qui toto orbe de uno Pane communicantes participarent.

Meneven. The Sacrament profiteth him only, that receiveth it worthily; like as it damnifieth him only that receiveth it unworthily. Nam qui edit aut bibit indigne, judicium ſibi ipſi edit ac bibit, 1 Cor. 11.

Dr. Cox. The Receiving of the ſaid Sacrament, doth avail and profit the Receiver only, and none other, but by occaſion to do the like.

Dr. Tyler. So much as the Chriſtening of one Man profiteth another, which after my Opinion profiteth nothing.

Queſt. 3.

What is the Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs?

Anſwers.

Cantuarien. THe Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs is not ſo called, becauſe Chriſt indeed is there offered and ſacrificed by the Prieſt and the People, (for that was done but once by himſelf upon the Croſs) but it is ſo called, becauſe it is a Memory and Repreſentation of that very true Sacrifice and Immolation which before was made upon the Croſs.

Eboracen. The Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs, is the preſenting of the very Body and Blood of Chriſt to the Heavenly Father, under the Forms of Bread and Wine, conſecrated in the remembrance of his Paſſion, with Prayer and Thankſgiving for the Univerſal Church.

London. Worceſter. Hereford. Norvicen. Ciceſtren. Aſſaven. I think it is the preſentation of the very Body and Blood of Chriſt being really preſent in the Sacrament; which Preſentation the Prieſt maketh at the Maſs, in the Name of the Church, unto God the Father in memory of Chriſt's Paſſion and Death upon the Croſs; with thankſgiving therefore, and devout Prayer, that all Chriſtian People, and namely they which ſpiritually join with the Prieſt in the ſaid Oblation, and of whom he maketh ſpecial remembrance, may attain the benefit of the ſaid Paſſion.

Dunelm. The Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs, is the preſenting of Chriſt by the Prieſt, in commemoration of his Paſſion, being one eternal and permanent Sacrifice, preſent in the Sacrament by his Omnipotenpotent Word left to us, to have his Death and Paſſion in remembrance, with giving thanks for the ſame, and Prayer of the Miniſter, and them which be preſent, that the ſame may be available to the whole Church of Chriſt, both Quick and Dead in the Faith of Chriſt.

Which Oblation, commemoration of Chriſt's Paſſion, giving of Thanks and Prayer, taketh effect only in them which by their own proper Faith ſhall receive the ſame effect. Sarisburien.

There is properly no Oblation nor Sacrifice, but a remembrance of the One Oblation of Chriſt upon the Croſs, made once for all; a giving of Thanks for the ſame, and the Prayer of the publick Miniſter for the whole Congregation; which Prayer only taketh effect in them, who by their own proper Faith receive the benefit of Chriſt: And where many of thoſe Authors do ſay there is an Oblation and Sacrifice, they ſpoke ſo, becauſe in this Sacrament we be admoniſhed of the Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt upon the Croſs. Lincoln.

If Oblation be taken pro re Oblata, then, as old Ancient Doctors write, it is, Corpus & Sanguis, ſcil. Verum, & Corpus, ſcil. Myſticum. If ye take it pro actu offerendi, it is a Commemoration and Repreſentation of Chriſt's Death once ſuffered upon the Croſs, with Thankſgiving for the ſame. Elien.

I ſuppoſe the very Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs, is this; That after the Benediction, that is to ſay, the words of Conſecration ſpoken by the Prieſt, and the divine working of Chriſt preſently, by the which there is the very precious Body, and the precious Blood of Chriſt preſent to be ſo received; then the Prieſt offereth up the holy Memory of our Redemption to God the Father, moſt humbly praying, that as it was once offered up by Chriſt upon the Croſs, for the Redemption of Man-kind, ſo it may take effect now, and at all times, eſpecially in thoſe that with a true Faith, with a full Truſt and Hope will ſo worthily receive it. Covent. & Litchfield.

The Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs, is, even the ſame which was offered by Chriſt on the Croſs, ever and every-where abiding and enduring of like ſtrength, virtue and power. The difference is, That on the Croſs Chriſt being there both Prieſt and Sacrifice, offered himſelf viſibly; and in the Maſs, being likewiſe both Prieſt and Sacrifice, offereth himſelf inviſibly, by the common Miniſter of the Church, who in the name and ſtead of the whole faithful Congregation offereth and preſenteth, as he bid and commanded by Chriſt. Carliolen.

The Repreſentation and Commemoration of Chriſt's Death and Paſſion, ſaid and done in the Maſs, is called the Sacrifice, Oblation, or Immolation of Chriſt: Non rei veritate, (as learned Men do write) ſed intelligendi Myſterio. Roffen.

In giving Thanks unto the Father, as Chriſt did himſelf at his Supper, taking the Bread and Wine into his hands, and with the words Briſtollen.

of Conſecration, conſecrating the ſame, and then making preſentation of the very Body and Blood of Chriſt unto God the Father, in the Name of the Church, in the memory of Chriſt's moſt painful Paſſion and Death, ſuffered upon the Croſs; and ſo worthily receiving the ſame, and with giving Thanks again for the ſame at the latter end; as the Goſpel ſaith, Hymno dicto; but what this Hymn or Prayer was, I find no mention.

Meneven. The Oblation and Sacrifice of Chriſt mentioned in the Maſs, is a memorial of Chriſt's only Sacrifice upon the Croſs, once offered for ever; Unica enim Oblatione, perfectos effecit in perpetuum eos qui ſanctificantur, Heb. 10.

Dr. Cox. The Oblation of the Sacrifice of Chriſt in the Maſs, is the Prayer, the Praiſe, the Thankſgiving, and the remembrance of Chriſt's Paſſion and Death.

Dr. Tyler. There is no Oblation, ſpeaking properly; but ſome Ancient Doctors, and the uſe of the Church, calleth the receiving of it, with the Circumſtances then done, an Oblation; that is to ſay, a Memorial and Remembrance of Chriſt's moſt precious Oblation upon the Croſs.

Queſt. 4.

Wherein conſiſteth the Maſs by Chriſt's Inſtitution?

Anſwers.

Cantuarien. THe Maſs, by Chriſt's Inſtitution, conſiſteth in thoſe things which be ſet forth in the Evangeliſts, Mat. 26. Mark 14. Luk. 22. 1 Cor. 10, & 11.

Eboracen. The Maſs, by Chriſt's Inſtitution, conſiſteth in the Conſecration and Oblation of the very Body and Blood of Chriſt, with Prayer, Thankſgiving, and Receiving of the ſame, as appeareth in the Evangeliſts Matth. 26. 27. Mark 14, & 15. Luke 22, and 23. John 6. 1 Cor. 10. & 11. Acts 2.

London. Worceſter. Hereford. Norvicen. Ciceſtren. Aſſaven. I think it conſiſteth principally, in the Conſecration, Oblation and Receiving of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, with Prayers and Thankſgiving; but what the Prayers were, and what Rites Chriſt uſed or commanded at the firſt Inſtitution of the Maſs, the Scripture declareth not.

Dunelm. The Maſs, by Chriſt's Inſtitution, conſiſteth in thoſe things which be ſet forth by the Evangeliſts, Matth. 26. Mark 19. Luke 22. and Paul 1 Cor. 10, 11, & 12. and Acts 2. with humble and contrite Confeſſion, the Oblation of Chriſt, as before: the Receiving of the Sacrament, giving of Thanks therefore, and Common Prayer for the Myſtical Body of Chriſt.

The

The Maſs, by Chriſt's Inſtitution, conſiſteth in thoſe things which be ſet forth in the Evangeliſts, Mat. 26 Mark 14. Luk 22. 1 Cor. 10, & 11. Act 2. and 13. Sarisburien.

It conſiſteth in theſe things which be ſet forth Mat. 26. Mark 19. Luk 22. 1 Cor. 10. 11. Acts 2. Lincoln.

The Maſs, by Chriſt's Inſtitution, conſiſteth in thoſe things which be ſet forth in the Evangeliſts, Matth. 26. Luke 22. and 1 Cor. 10. 11. and Acts 2. Elien.

The Maſs, by Chriſt's Inſtitution, only expreſſing the Form of Chriſt by the Scripture, conſiſteth in the taking of the Bread, and giving thanks to God the Father, in the Benediction and Conſecration, in the receiving or diſtribution, and receiving of them, to whom the diſtribution is made by the hands of the Prieſt: as the Eldeſt Authors affirm, in the renewing of the memory of our Redemption by an undoubted Faith, and for that to give moſt humble thanks; ſo calling to remembrance, as often as it is thus done, the ineſtimable benefit of our Redemption. What Thanks that Chriſt gave before this moſt holy Action, or what Thanks that he gave after it, by the general words of Matthew, Hymno dicto, are not expreſſed: So that there appeareth, both before this moſt Holy Action, and alſo after, to be a certain Ceremony appointed by Chriſt more than is expreſſed: Moreover, by the Doctrine of the Apoſtle, it behoveth every Man to be wiſe and circumſpect, that he receive not this moſt bleſſed Sacrament unworthily and unreverently, not making difference betwixt the receiving of the moſt bleſſed Body of Chriſt, and other Meats. Covent. & Litchfield. Chap. 24. 1 Cor. 11.

The Maſs, by Chriſt's Inſtitution, conſiſteth in Conſecrating, Offering, Receiving, and Diſtributing of the bleſſed Body and Blood of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, according to that he himſelf did, willed, and commanded to be done. This we have manifeſted by the Evangeliſts, St. Paul, and St. Luke, in the Acts. But becauſe Chriſt was, after his Reſurrection long with his Diſciples, communicating and treating of the Kingdom of God, what ſhould be done here to come thither, it may be well thought, that whatſoever he or his Holy Spirit left with the Apoſtles, and they with others, after which alſo the whole Univerſal Congregation of Chriſtian People uſeth and obſerveth, moſt ancient and Holy Doctors in like form noteth, may likewiſe be ſaid and taken to be Chriſt's Inſtitution. Carliolen.

I am not able to ſay, that the Maſs conſiſteth by Chriſt's Inſtitution in other things, than in thoſe which be ſet forth in the Evangeliſts, Matthew, Mark, and Luke, in the Acts, and 1 Cor. 10. & 11. Roffen.

As I take it, the Maſs by Chriſt's Inſtitution, conſiſteth in thoſe Things and Rites, which be ſet forth unto us, in the 26*th* of St. Matthew, the 14*th* of St. Mark, and the 22 of St. Luke; and alſo as mention is made in the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, Chap. 10. Briſtollen.

and 11. and Acts 11. any other Inſtitution I read not of by Scripture.

Meneven. Chriſt's Inſtitution compriſeth no more in the Maſs, than the Communion of the Body and Blood to be miniſtred and received under both kinds, of Bread and Wine, according as is declared by the Evangeliſts, *Mat.*26. Mark 14. Luke, in the Acts 2.

Dr. Cox. The Maſs, by Chriſt's Inſtitution, conſiſteth in Thankſgiving to the Father, in diſtributing of the Body and Blood of Chriſt to the Congregation, to have the Death and Paſſion of Chriſt in remembrance, and in the end to laud and praiſe God.

Dr. Tyler. In giving of Thanks to God the Father, and bleſſing and breaking it, and reverently receiving the Holy Sacraments, with all ſuch Rites and Circumſtances as Chriſt did in both the kinds.

Queſt. 5.

What time the accuſtomed Order began firſt in the Church, that the Prieſt alone ſhould receive the Sacrament?

Anſwers.

Cantuarien. I Think the uſe, that the Prieſt alone did receive the Sacrament without the People, began not within ſix or ſeven hundred Years after Chriſt.

Eboracen. The accuſtomed Order that the Prieſt alone ſhould receive the Sacrament, began about the time of Zepherinus; who when the common People had left their daily and frequent Communion, ordained that they ſhould communicate, at the leaſt once in the Year, that was Eaſter; which Ordinance Innocentius the third confirmed.

London. Worceſter. Hereford. Norvicen. Ciceſtren. Aſſaven. I know no further Order or Commandment of the Church, but what time the devotion of the People was ſo greatly decayed, that they would not come to receive the Sacrament, then the Prieſts were compelled to receive it alone.

Dunelm. The cuſtom began, that the Prieſt alone ſhould receive the Sacrament of neceſſity, when the People falling from Devotion would not come to the Communion, but cared more for their worldly Buſineſs, than for godly receiving the Sacrament: for in the beginning they received it daily by frequent Devotion; after, thrice a Week; after, on the Sundays only; after, thrice in the Year, at Chriſtmaſs, Eaſter, and Whitſunday; after, only once in the Year, at Eaſter, by coldneſs of Devotion.

The

The time certain is not known, moſt Men aſcribe it unto Gregory, who was more than 600 Years after Chriſt; for that every Biſhop of Rome bringing in his Portion, (ſome Introitus, ſome Kyrie Eleiſon, ſome Graduale) the Maſs in the ſaid Gregory's time, was grown to the full quantity it is now of, and Mens Inventions began to ſtep before, and get ground of Chriſt's Inſtitution; but from the beginning it was not ſo, for Chriſt did not eat and drink alone at his laſt Supper, but gave the Bread and Cup to all preſent. In the Primitive Church one did not eat alone, and the reſt look on, but they did eat together, and drink together, as it is to be ſeen Acts 2. 1 Cor. 11. And Anacletus writes thus, Peracta Conſecratione omnes communicent, qui noluerint Eccleſiaſticis careant liminibus. De Conſe. Diſt. 1. Cum Epiſcopus, &c. Lincoln.

The very time I know not, but is to be ſuppoſed, that that cuſtom crept into the Church by negligence and ſlackneſs of the Lay-People, who would not ſo oft receive it as the Prieſt would; for in the beginning, the Communion with the Laity was Quotidiane, which the Prieſt obſerveth ſtill unto this day, and not the Laity; and there be Canons that bindeth the Prieſt to the receiving of it as oft as he doth Conſecrate; and the cauſe why the Prieſts did not receive it, after they had conſecrated, ſhould ſeem to be, that there was none to receive it with them, which was the occaſion of the making of thoſe Canons, as I ſuppoſe. Elien.

Becauſe Scripture ſaith, Panis quem frangimus, nonne communicatio corporis eſt, &c. Likewiſe de Chalice, cui benedicimus; and alſo, bibite ex eo omnes. And the Canons ſaid to be of the Apoſtles, Can. 10. and 10. and of the Antiochian Council, Can. 2. Anacletus in an Epiſtle, commandeth the Sacrament to be received of more than of the Prieſt alone. Dyoniſe alſo declareth the ſame, and alſo long after Chryſoſt. St. Ambroſe and St. Auſtin, both complain of the ſlackneſs of ſome, and earneſtly exhort the People to the receipt thereof. Therefore I ſuppoſe that cuſtom, that the Prieſt ſhould receive it alone, where it was celebrated openly, was not received in the Church of Chriſt by the ſpace of four or five hundred Years at leaſt after Chriſt. Roffen.

I know no ſuch Order or Commandment of the Church, but what time the Devotion of the People began greatly to decay, and would not come to receive the Sacrament, then I think the Prieſts were compelled to receive it alone. Briſtollen.

I ſuppoſe not long after the Apoſtles time, the godly Devotions of the People decaying, who at the beginning uſed to come daily, and after that weekly, after that thrice in the Year, and at laſt but once in the Year, the Prieſt was forced to receive the Sacrament alone. Dr. Cox.

Queſt. 6.

Whether it be convenient that the ſame Cuſtom continue ſtill within this Realm?

Anſwers.

Cantuarien. I Think it more agreeable to the Scripture and Primitive Church, that the firſt uſage ſhould be reſtored again, that the People ſhould receive the Sacrament with the Prieſt.

London. Worceſter. Hereford. Norvicen. Ciceſtren. Aſſaven. I would wiſh, that at every Maſs, there would be ſome to receive the Sacrament with the Prieſt: Nevertheleſs if none will come to receive it, I think it lawful and convenient, that the Prieſts of this Realm of England may ſay Maſs, and receive the Sacrament alone.

Dunelm. It were much convenient that People were exhorted to come to it oftner, if they could be brought thereto. Nevertheleſs, if none will communicate, it is not meet that the Prieſts ſtirred to communicate, or ſhould forbear for coldneſs or lack of other Mens Devotion.

Lincoln. Nothing can be better, or more wiſely deviſed than Chriſt did ordain, and the Apoſtles, according to his Ordinance, did uſe; we ought therefore to captivate our Senſes and Underſtandings to the Wiſdom of Chriſt; and think that moſt convenient, that to his Ordinance is moſt correſpondent: And as St. Paul notes, by eating all of one Bread, and drinking all of one Cup, we be put in remembrance, that we be all one Body in Chriſt, and have received all one Spirit. Nevertheleſs the ſlackneſs of ſome ought not to be prejudicial to the reſt, nor the refuſing of one to be Impediment to another.

Elien. If the Lay-men could be brought to it, it were better not to continue; but if they cannot, it is not convenient that Prieſts, who would communicate for their own Comfort, ſhould be defrauded by other Mens ſlackneſs.

Roffen. I ſuppoſe it were beſt, that that Cuſtom ſhould be reformed unto the Rule of Scripture, and unto the Patern of the Primitive Church.

Briſtollen. I think it were good, that at every Maſs there were ſome to receive the Sacrament with the Prieſt; nevertheleſs, if none will come to receive it, I think it lawful and convenient, that the Prieſt ſay Maſs, and receive the Sacrament alone, when he is diſpoſed, or by the Chriſtian Congregation deſired.

Dr. Cox. I think it not convenient that the ſaid Cuſtom ſhould continue, if by any godly Mean the People might be brought to receive the Sacrament with the Prieſt.

Quest. 7.

Whether it be convenient that Masses Satisfactory should continue, (that is to say) Priests hired to sing for Souls departed.

Answers.

I Think it not convenient that Satisfactory Masses should continue. Cantuarien.

I think that such of the School-men as do write of Masses Satisfactory, do define them otherwise than is declared in this Question: Nevertheless I think, that it is not against the Word of God, but that Priests praying in the Mass, both for the Quick and Dead, and doing other things in the Church about the Ministration of the Sacraments, may take a Living for the same. London. Worcester. Hereford. Norwich. Chichester. St. Asaph.

All Priests saying Mass be bound in the same, to pray for the whole mystical Body of Christ, Quick and Dead, though they be not hired thereto; and those that be deputed thereto, if they say Mass, must do the same though they were not hired: And yet, as St. Paul saith, Those that be partakers of Spiritual Things with others, ought to minister unto them temporal Things in recompence, Rom. 15. Dunelm.

St. Paul saith, Heb. 10. That we are made Holy by the Offering of the Body of Jesus once for all; and Heb. 9. That Christ by his own Blood, entred in once to the Holy Place, and found eternal Redemption; which Redemption and Satisfaction, unless we think insufficient, it were meet Masses Satisfactory to be taken away, and not to count Christ and his Apostles, either unlearned, or unloving Teachers; and who could not or would not teach a thing so necessary. Nauclerus does write, that Gregory the third gave commandment to Priests to pray and offer for the Dead. And though ancient Writers make oft mention of Prayer for the Dead, yet they never allow any Hireling to that purpose. Lege Augst. ad Aurel. de coercenda temulentia. Lincoln.

It is one thing to sing Satisfactory, and another to be hired to sing Mass for the Souls departed: for the first importeth, that the Mass should be a Satisfaction for the sins of the Soul departed; which is not so, but the second, that is, to sing or pray for the Souls departed, is a laudable custom, and seemeth to have some ground in Scripture; which custom hath been always continued from the Apostles time, and hath been used in the Mass, as appeareth by Ancient Doctors, Aust. Amb. Chrys. and others; and therefore this to continue I think it meet. But to say Mass for Mony, thinking it a Commutation or just Compensation betwixt the Prayer and the Mony that he is hired for, I think it soundeth to Avarice and Simonie; and yet, dignus est operarius mercede su. Like-as, Prædicans Evangelium sine sumptu debet ponere Evangelium Elien.

lium, & tamen Dominus ordinavit his qui Evangelium annunciant de Evangelio vivere.

Carlile. If by this be meant, that any Thing, or Action either of the Priest, should be a full and perfect Satisfaction of Sins Venial and Mortal; I know we read not of any such Satisfactory, neither would I say that Priests be hired after that common fashion and contracts of the World, to sing for Souls departed, but rather that they, as they be ordered to do, do say and sing their Mass, having in their remembrance, both generally and specially, as shall most appertain both to the Living and the Dead; and then, as they be worthy, must have their Livings by the Altar which they serve, as St. Paul at large declareth. But as for the full and perfect Satisfaction of all manner of Sins, that is to be attributed only to Christ, his Passion and Justification; yet after the mind of St. Austin, St. Jerom, with others, Pro non valde malis possunt atonet fiant & de levioribus peccatis, cum quibus obligati defuncti non possunt post mortem absolvi, &c.

Rosson. That Masses Satisfactory should continue to be sung for Souls departed, by Priests hired thereunto, I think it not convenient.

Bristollen. I think that the Word of God, and St. Paul meant, that all Priests may offer Gifts and Sacrifices unto God for the Offences of the People, (as it is written in the 5th of the Hebrews) Omnis Pontifex, &c. and may receive and take (ministring the Sacrament and Sacramentals in the Church to the Congregation) a Living for the same.

Dr. Cox. Masses to be said for satisfaction of Sin, (since Christ is the only Satisfaction for all Sin) is an Abuse not to be continued: and Priests to be hired only to sing for Souls departed, seemeth to be a superstitious Function in Christ's Church.

Quest. 8.

Whether the Gospel ought to be taught at the time of the Mass, to the understanding of the People being present?

Answers.

Cantuarien. I Think it very convenient, that the Gospel, concerning the Death of Christ, and our Redemption, should be taught to the People in the Mass.

York. It is expedient that the Gospel be taught at the time of the Mass, to the understanding of the People being present.

London, &c. I think it not necessary to have a Sermon at every Mass, but the oftner the same is done to the edifying of the People, (so that the service of their Vocation be not thereby defrauded) the more it is to be commended.

It

It is much convenient that the Gospel be taught to the understanding of the People being present, when it may be. Howbeit, it is not so of the Substance of the Mass, but the Mass may be done without it, and it done at other times as well as at the Mass. Dunelm.

Christ distributing the Sacrament to his Disciples, does say, (as it is Luk. 22.) Hoc facite in meam commemorationem: And if St. Paul doth thus write to the Corinthians, Quotiescunq; manducabitis panem hunc ac Calicem bibitis, mortem Domini annunciabitis donec veniet. The glad Tydings therefore, the great Benefit that we receive by Christ's Death and Sufferings, (which we see as in a Glass, in this Holy Sacrament) ought to be set forth and preached to the People, so oft as they come to the Holy Communion. Linceln.

That the Gospel be read or taught at the time of the Mass, that the People there present may understand; it is good and godly, and convenient it should be so. Elien.

I think it convenient and necessary, that as the King's most Excellent Majesty, his most dear Uncle my Lord Protector's Grace, with the most honourable Council beside, hath already appointed and enjoined to be done, that at all such times as the People (as they ought) be most gathered together, in the Principal and High Mass, the Gospel be taught and declared to the best understanding of the People. Carliolen.

The Annunciation of Christ's Death and Passion, and the Benefit of the same, that the forgiveness of Sins, to all the true and faithful Believers therein, ought evermore to be set forth in the Mass to the edification of the People; which thing cannot be done, according to St. Paul's mind and meaning, 1 Cor. 14. as I suppose, except it be set forth to the peoples understanding. Roffen.

I think it is not against God's Word, but the oftner the same is done to the edifying of the people, received with Devotion, and intending redress of Life thereby, the more it is to be affected and used. Briſtollen.

In the Mass-time, it were convenient to have some Doctrines, after the Example of the Primitive Church, that at the Blessed Communion the people might be edified. Dr. Cox.

Queſt. 9.

Whether in the Maſs it were convenient to uſe ſuch Speech as the People may underſtand?

Anſwers.

Cantuarien. I Think it convenient to uſe the Vulgar Tongue in the Maſs, except in certain ſecret Myſteries, whereof I doubt.

Eboracen. It were convenient to uſe ſuch Speech in the Maſs, as the People might underſtand.

London. Worceſter. Hereford. Norvicen. Ciceſtren. Aſſaven. To have the whole Maſs in Engliſh, I think it neither expedient, neither convenient.

Dunelm. It is convenient that the common Latin Tongue to theſe Weſt parts of Chriſtendom, be uſed in the Maſs, being the Common-Prayer of the whole Church, namely, in the Myſteries thereof, leſt rude people ſhould vilely prophane the Holy Myſteries thereof by contempt. Nevertheleſs certain Prayers might be in the Mother Tongue, for the inſtruction and ſtirring of the Devotion of the People, as ſhall be thought convenient.

Lincoln. St. Paul would all things in the Congregation, and Publick Aſſembly, ſo to be ſpoken that they might edify; and in ſuch a Language, that the people preſent might ſay Amen to our Thankſgiving. And long after the Apoſtles times, all the people preſent did anſwer the Prieſt, (he ſpeaking in a Language that they did underſtand) like as the Clark or Boy doth now anſwer (as he is taught) in a Language that he underſtands not. Cypri habet de Conſ. diſtinct. 1. Ca. Quanda.

Elien. It was ſo uſed in Dalmatia in St. Hierom's time, and in Sclavonia in Cyril's time, who making ſuit to the Court of Rome for the ſame; and the Matter being debated in the Conſiſtory, and having many Adverſaries, ſuddenly there was heard a Voice, as it were, from Heaven; Omnis Spiritus laudet Dominum, & omnis Lingua confiteatur ei. Whereupon Cyrillus had his Petition granted him.

Carliolen. This Queſtion was deeply ſearched and tried for, in the moſt excellent and of higheſt memory, King Henry the Eighth his time, by the beſt Clerks of his Realm, in his preſence; and then and there concluded, and upon that ſame by Proclamation commanded, That holy Scripture ſhould not be evulgate in Engliſh. Yet after it was otherwiſe ſeen and provided for: Therefore therein I would wiſh, that were moſt to the quiet edification of Chriſtian people, and ſhall ſubmit my ſelf ſelf to my Superiors and Betters, ſubmitting mine Underſtanding to their Judgments.

I think it not only convenient that ſuch Speech ſhould be uſed in the Maſs as the people might underſtand, but alſo to ſpeak it with ſuch an audible Voice, that the People might hear it, that they be not defrauded of their Own, which Saint Paul teacheth to belong to them; and alſo that they may anſwer, as Cyprian ſaith, the people did in his days, Habemus ad Dominum. Nevertheleſs, as concerning that part that pertaineth to the Conſecration, Dyoniſe and Baſil moveth me to think it no inconvenience, that part ſhould be ſpoken in ſilence. Roffen.

If the Maſs ſhould be wholly in Engliſh, I think we ſhould differ from the Cuſtom and Manner of all other Regions: therefore if it may ſtand with the King's Majeſty's Pleaſure, I think it not good to be ſaid all in Engliſh. Briſtollen.

Per me Paulum Epiſcopum Briſtollenſem.

Queſt. 10.

When the Reſervation of the Sacrament, and the hanging up of the ſame firſt began?

Anſwers.

The Reſervation of the Sacrament began, I think, ſix or ſeven hundred Years after Chriſt: The hanging up, I think, began of late time. Cantuarien.

Polidore Virgil doth write, that Innocentius the Third decreed the Sacrament to be kept, to be in a readineſs for the Sick. And Honorius the third confirmed the ſame; adding, that it ought to be reſerved in loco ſingulari, mundo, & ſignato. Commanding alſo the Prieſts that they ſhould often inſtruct the people reverently to bow down at the Elevation-Time, and when it is born to the Sick. As for the hanging up of the Sacrament over, or ſetting it upon the Altar, is of a later time, not yet received in divers places of Chriſtendom. Lincoln.

Some Questions, with Answers made to them by the Bishops of Worcester, Chichester, and Hereford.

The Question.

What or wherein John's Fasting, giving Alms, being Baptized, or Receiving the Sacrament of Thanks in England, doth profit and avail Thomas dwelling in Italy, and not knowing what John in England doth?

The Answer.

Worcester. Chichester. Hereford. THe distance of place doth not lett nor hinder the Spiritual Communion which is between one and another, so that John and Thomas, whersoever they be, far and sundry, or near together, being both lively Members of Christ, receive either of others Goodness some Commodity; although to limit what or wherein, is unsearchable, and only pertaineth to the Knowledg of God.

The Question.

Whether the said Acts in John do profit them that be in Heaven, and wherein?

The Answers.

Luc. 15. Gaudium est in Cœlo super uno peccatore pœnitentiam agente, &c.

The Question.

Whether it lieth in the said John, to defraud any Member of Christ's Body of the benefit of his Fasting, Alms-Deeds, Baptism, or Receiving of the Sacrament, and to apply the same benefit to one Person more than to another?

The Answer.

Charity defraudeth no Man of any such benefit that might come to him; and it lieth in God only to apply the same, and not in any Man, otherwise than by Desire and Prayer; but the better the Man is, the more available his Prayer is to them, for whom he especially prayeth.

The Question.

What thing is the Presentation of the Body and Blood of Christ in the Mass, which you call the Oblation and Sacrifice of Christ? and wherein wherein ſtandeth it, in Act, Geſture, or Words? and in what Act, Geſture, or Words?

The Anſwer.

The Preſentation, &c. ſtandeth in ſuch Words, Prayers, Supplications, and Actions, as the Prieſt uſeth at the Maſs, having the Body and Blood of Chriſt there preſent in the Sacrament.

The Queſtion.

Is there any Rite or Prayer not expreſſed in the Scripture, which Chriſt uſed or commanded at the firſt Inſtitution of the Maſs, which we be now bound to uſe; and what the ſame be?

The Anſwer.

That Chriſt uſed Rites and Prayers at the Inſtitution and Diſtribution of the Sacrament, the Scripture declareth: But what Rites and Prayers they were we know not; but I think we ought to uſe ſuch Rites and Prayers as the Catholick Church hath, and doth uniformly obſerve.

The Queſtion.

Whether in the Primitive Church there were any Prieſts that lived by ſaying of Maſs, Mattins, and Even-ſong, and praying for Souls only? And whether any ſuch ſtate of Prieſthood be allowed in the Scripture, or be meet to be allowed now?

The Anſwer.

There were Prieſts in the Primitive Church which preached not, but exerciſed themſelves in Prayer for the Quick and the Dead, and other Spiritual Miniſtrations in the Church; and accuſtomably uſed common Prayers both Morning and Evening; and ſuch ſtate of Prieſthood is not againſt the Scripture.

The Queſtion.

For what Cauſe it were not expedient nor convenient to have the whole Maſs in Engliſh?

The Anſwer.

A Collection of ſome of the Chief Indulgences then in the Engliſh Offices.

Horæ B. Mariæ Virg. ad uſum Sarum, Printed at Paris, 1526.

Folio 38.

TO all them that be in the State of Grace, that daily ſay devoutly this Prayer before our Bleſſed Lady of Pity, ſhe will ſhew them her bleſſed Viſage, and warn them the Day and the Hour of Death; and in their laſt End, the Angels of God ſhall yield their Souls to Heaven; and he ſhall obtain 500 Years, and ſo many Lents of Pardon, granted by five Holy Fathers, Popes of Rome.

Folio 42.

Our Holy Father Sixtus the 4*th*, Pope, hath granted to all them that devoutly ſay this Prayer before the Image of our Lady, the ſum of 11000 Years of Pardon.

Folio 44.

Our Holy Father the Pope, Sixtus, hath granted, at the inſtance of the high-moſt and excellent Princeſs Elizabeth, late Queen of England, and Wife to our Sovereign Liege Lord King Henry the 7*th*, (God have mercy on her ſweet Soul, and all Chriſtian Souls) that every day in the Morning, after three tollings of the Ave-Bell, ſay three times the whole Salutation of our Lady, Ave Maria Gratia; that is to ſay, at ſix of the Clock in the Morning three Ave Maries; at twelve of the Clock at Noon three Ave Maries; and at ſix of the Clock at Even; for every time ſo doing, is granted of the Spiritual Treaſure of Holy Church, 300 days of Pardon, toties quoties. And alſo our Holy Father, the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury and York, with other nine Biſhops of this Realm, have granted, three times in the day, forty days of Pardon to all them that be in the ſtate of Grace, able to receive Pardon; the which began the 26*th* day of March, Anno 1492. Anno Henrici 7. and the ſum of the Indulgence and Pardon for every Ave Maria, 860 days, toties quoties. This Prayer ſhall be ſaid at the tolling of the Ave-Bell.

Folio 47.

Our Holy Father the Pope Boniface, hath granted to all them that devoutly ſay this lamentable contemplation of our Bleſſed Lady, ſtanding under the Croſs weeping, and having compaſſion with her ſweet Son Jeſus, ſeven Years of Pardon, and forty Lents. And alſo Pope John the 22*d* hath granted 300 days of Pardon.

Folio 50.

Theſe be the fifteen Do's, the which the Holy Virgin S. Bridget was wont to ſay daily before the Holy Rood in S. Paul's Church at Rome; whoſo ſays this a whole Year, ſhall deliver fifteen Souls out of Purgatory of his next Kindred, and convert other fifteen Sinners to good good Life; and other fifteen Righteous Men of his kind ſhall perſevere in good Life; and what ye deſire of God ye ſhall have it, if it be to the Salvation of your Souls.

Folio 54.

To all them that before this Image of Pity devoutly ſay five Pater Noſters, and five Ave Maries, and a Credo, piteouſly beholding thoſe Arms of Chriſt's Paſſion, are granted 32755 Years of Pardon; and Sixtus the 4*th* Pope of Rome, hath made the fourth and the fifth Prayer, and hath doubled his foreſaid Pardon.

Folio 56.

This Epiſtle of our Saviour, ſendeth our Holy Father Pope Leo, to the Emperor Carolo Magno; of the which we find written, Who that beareth this Bleſſing upon him, and ſaith it once a day, ſhall obtain forty Years of Pardon, and eighty Lentings, and he ſhall not periſh with ſudden Death.

Folio 57.

This Prayer made by S. Auſtin, affirming who that ſays it daily kneeling, ſhall not die in Sin; and after this Life ſhall go to the everlaſting Joy and Bliſs.

Folio 58.

Our Holy Father the Pope, John 22*d*, hath granted to all them that devoutly ſay this Prayer, after the Elevation of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, 3000 days of Pardon for deadly Sins.

Ibid.

Our Holy Father the Pope, Bonifacius the Sixth, hath granted to all them that ſay devoutly this Prayer following, between the Elevation of our Lord, and the three Agnus Dei, 10000 Years of Pardon.

Folio 61.

Our Holy Father, Sixtus the 4*th*, hath granted to all them that be in the ſtate of Grace, ſaying this Prayer following immediately after the Elevation of the Body of our Lord, clean remiſſion of all their Sins perpetually enduring. And alſo John the Third, Pope of Rome, at the requeſt of the Queen of England, hath granted to all them that devoutly ſay this Prayer before the Image of our Lord Crucified, as many days of Pardon, as there were Wounds in the Body of our Lord in the time of his bitter Paſſion, the which were 5465.

Folio 65.

Theſe five Petitions and Prayers made S. Gregory, and hath granted unto all them that devoutly ſay theſe five Prayers, with five Pater Noſters, five Ave Maries, and a Credo, 500 Years of Pardon.

Folio 66.

Theſe three Prayers be written in the Chappel of the Holy Croſs in Rome, otherwiſe called, Sacellum Sanctæ Crucis ſeptem Romanorum, who that devoutly ſay them, they ſhall obtain ten hundred thouſand Years of Pardon for deadly Sins, granted of our Holy Father John, 22*d* Pope of Rome.

Folio 68.

Who that devoutly beholdeth theſe Arms of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall obtain 6000 Years of Pardon of our Holy Father S. Peter, the firſt Pope of Rome, and of thirty other Popes of the Church of Rome, Succeſſors after him. And our Holy Father, Pope John the 22*d*, hath hath granted unto all them, very contrite and truly confeſſed, that ſay theſe devout Prayers following, in the commemoration of the bitter Paſſion of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, 3000 Years of Pardon for deadly Sins, and other 3000 for Venial Sins, and ſay firſt a Pater Noſter and Ave Maria.

Folio 71.

Our Holy Father, Pope Innocentius the Second, hath granted to all them that ſay this Prayer devoutly, in the worſhip of the Wound that our Lord had in his bleſſed Side, when he was dead, hanging in the Croſs, 4000 days of Pardon.

Folio 72.

This moſt devout Prayer, ſaid the Holy Father S. Bernard, daily kneeling in the worſhip of the moſt Holy Name Jeſus. And it is well to believe, that through the Invocation of the moſt excellent Name of Jeſu, S. Bernard obtained a ſingular Ward of perpetual Conſolation of our Lord Jeſu Chriſt. Aud theſe Prayers written in a Table that hanged at Rome in S. Peter's Church, nigh to the High Altar there, as our Holy Father the Pope evely is wont to ſay the Office of the Maſs; and who that devoutly, with a contrite Heart, daily ſay this Oriſon, if he be that day in the ſtate of eternal Damnation, then his eternal Pain ſhall be changed him in temporal pain of Purgatory; then if he hath deſerved the pain of Purgatory, it ſhall be forgotten and forgiven, through the infinite Mercy of God.

Injunctions for a Viſitation of Chauntries.

To the Parſon, Vicar, Curat, Chaunter, Prieſts, Church-Wardens, and two of the moſt honeſt Perſons of the Pariſh of being no Founders, Patrons, Donors, Leſſees, nor Farmers of the Promotions or Corporations hereafter recited, nor of any part thereof, and to four of them at the leaſt.

Ex MS. Dr. Johnſon.

FIrſt, Ye ſhall make diligent ſearch and inquiry, immediately upon the receit hereof, of the number; and how many Chauntries, Hoſpitals, Colleges, free Chappels, Fraternities, Brotherhoods, Guilds and Salaries, or Wages of Stipendiary Prieſts, being Perpetuities now charged, or that ought to be charged, or chargeable, to the paiment of the firſt Fruits and Tenths, and of all Colleges chargeable, and not chargeable to the ſaid paiment of Tenths and firſt Fruits, which be within your Church and Pariſh.

Alſo you ſhall enquire of the Orders, Ordinances, Kinds, Qualities, Degrees, Uſes and Abuſes, or Miſuſes, Conditions, Eſtates, and Neceſſities, of and concerning all and every the ſaid Chantries, Fraternities, Guilds, Stipends, or Wages, and other the Premiſes; and by what Names, Sir-names, Corporations, or Titles, they and every of them be taken or known; and to what intents, purpoſes, and deeds of of Charity they and every of them were founded, ordained, and made; and ye shall take into your hands, and also bring with you, at the day of your Certificate, the Foundations, and all other Writings which you have or can attain, for the true declaration and proof of the same.

Also you shall enquire, how and what manner or sort the Revenues and Profits of the Lands and Possessions of all the aforesaid Promotions, and every of them, be used, expended, imploied, or bestowed.

Also how many of the said Promotions be Parish-Churches.

Also how far space or distance the said Chantries and Chappels be, and stand from the Parish Churches, of the Parishes wherein they do stand.

Also ye shall enquire of all the Houses, Lands, Tenths, Rents, Possessions and Revenues, united, annexed, or appertaining to the aforesaid Chantries, Hospitals, Guilds, and other Promotions abovesaid, and to every of them, and of the yearly value thereof, and shall make a true and perfect Rental or other Book thereof.

And ye shall enquire of all the Resolutes, Deductions, and yearly paiments or charges going forth of the Premises, and of every part thereof, and shall certify the same in writing; that is to say, for every Chantry, or other the aforesaid Promotions severally by it self; and over this, to bring with you all such Rentals of the same, and every of them, as ye have or may attain or come by.

Also ye shall enquire of all the Lands, Rents, Possessions, and Hereditaments, which were or be united, annexed, or pertaining to the aforesaid Promotions or Corporations, or to any of them, which at any time since the fourth day of February, in the 27*th* Year of the King's Majesty's Reign, did appertain or belong to them, or any of them, and of the Goods, Jewels, and Ornaments, lately pertaining or belonging to the same.

Also ye shall enquire how many of the aforesaid Chantries, Hospitals, Guilds, and other the aforesaid Promotions and Corporations, and what Lands, Rents, or parcels thereof, sithence the 4*th* day of February, in the 27*th* Year of the Reign of our aforesaid Sovereign Lord, been or have been dissolved, purchased, or by any other means or ways taken, entred unto, or obtained by any of the King's Majesty's Subjects, by their own Authorities, without the King's License.

And ye shall enquire of the Lands, Tenths, Rents, and Hereditaments thereof, and of the yearly value of the same, and of all the Goods and Ornaments of the same; and of the yearly Resolutes, Deductions, and Paiments going forth of the same; and shall make a true Rental or Book thereof, and shall certify the same particularly.

Also ye shall enquire of all the Plate, Jewels, Ornaments, Goods, and Chattels, meerly and truly pertaining or belonging to all the aforesaid Promotions or Corporations, and to every of them severally, and shall make one true Inventory thereof, with the value of the same, and of every parcel thereof, that is to say, in true weight of all parcels of Plate, Chalices, and other; and the price or value of all other Ornaments, Goods, or Chattels, and in whose hands or possession the same be or remain.

Alſo, finally, ye ſhall make ready and finiſh your Certificate in writing, before the of all and ſingular the Premiſes, and of every Article above-ſaid ſeverally, and not in groſs, or in one whole Article, as ye will anſwer and be ſworn to the ſame: And that you, and every of you, being reſident or remaining within the ſaid Pariſh, ſhall Sign and Seal the ſame; and ye ſhall ſend the ſame your Certificate ſealed unto us, at ſuch day and place as hereafter ſhall be aſſigned unto you, by one of the moſt honeſt of the aforeſaid Church-Wardens, and by all the Incumbents of the Chantries, Chappels, Hoſpitals, Guilds and Promotions aforeſaid, if there be but one incumbent in the ſaid Promotions, or any of them; And if there be more Incumbents than one in the ſaid Promotions, or any of them being of one Foundation, that then one of the ſaid Incumbents, together with the ſaid honeſt Church Wardens, and other Incumbents, being but one of one Foundation, as is aforeſaid. Foreſeeing always, that your Proceedings and Certificate of the Premiſes, and every part thereof, be executed, ordered, and done, with all diligence, ſubſtantially and truly, that the ſame may ſo appear unto us at our repair to view and ſurvey the Premiſes, as ye will then have condign thanks for the ſame, and avoiding your extream damage, which may enſue of the contrary.

The Protector's Letter to Gardiner, concerning the Points he was to handle in his Sermon.

Ex MS. Col. C. C. Cantab.

WE commend us unto you; We ſent to you yeſterday our Servant William Cecil, to ſignify unto you our Pleaſure and Advice, That you ſhould, in this your next Sermon, forbear to intreat upon thoſe Principal Queſtions, which remain among the number of Learned Men in this Realm, as yet in Controverſy, concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, and the Maſs; as well for that your private Argument or Determination therein might offend the People, naturally expecting deciſions of litigious Cauſes, and thereby Diſcord and Tumult ariſe; the occaſions whereof we muſt neceſſarily prevent and take away; as alſo for that the Queſtions and Controverſies reſt at this preſent in conſultation, and with the pleaſure of God, ſhall be, in ſmall time by publick Doctrine and Authority, quietly and truly determined. This Meſſage we ſend to you, not thinking but your own Wiſdom had conſidered ſo much in an apparent Matter; or at the leaſt, upon our remembrance, ye would underſtand it and follow it with good Will, conſulting thereby your own Quiet in avoiding Offence, as obſerving our Pleaſure in avoiding Contention. Your Anſwer thereunto, our ſaid ſaid Servant hath declared unto us in this manner. Ye can no wiſe forbear to ſpeak of the Sacrament, neither of the Maſs; this laſt being the chief Foundation, as ye ſay, of our Religion, and that without it we cannot know that Chriſt is our Sacrifice; the other being ſo ſpoken of by many, that if you ſhould not ſpeak your Mind thereof what ye think, you know what other Men would think of you; in the end, concluding generally, that you will ſpeak the Truth, and that ye doubt not but that we ſhall be therewith content; adding alſo, as our ſaid Servant reporteth unto us, That you would not wiſh that we our ſelves ſhould meddle or have to do in theſe Matters of Religion, but that the care thereof were committed to you the Biſhops, unto whom the blame, if any ſhould be deſerved, might well be imputed.

To this your Anſwer, if ſo it be, we reply very ſhortly, ſignifying unto you our expreſs Pleaſure and Commandment, on our Soveraign Lord the King's Majeſty's behalf, charging you, by the Authority of the ſame, to abſtain in your ſaid Sermon from treating of any Matter in controverſy concerning the ſaid Sacrament and the Maſs, and only to beſtow your Speech in the expert explication of the Articles prefcribed unto you, and in other wholſome Matter, of Obedience of the People, and good Converſation and Living; the ſame Matters being both large enough for a long Sermon, and not unneceſſary for the time. And the treaty of other, which we forbid you not meet in your private Sermon to be had, but neceſſarily reſerved for a public Conſultion, and at this preſent utterly to be forborn for the common Quiet.

This our expreſs Pleaſure, wherein we know how reaſonably we may command you, and you (we think) know how willingly ye ought to obey us. For our intermedling with theſe Cauſes of Religion, underſtand you, that we account it no ſmall part of our Charge, under the King's Majeſty, to bring his People from Ignorance to Knowledg, and from Superſtition to true Religion, eſteeming that the chief Foundation to build Obedience upon: and where there is a full conſent of others, the Biſhops and learned Men, in a Truth, not to ſuffer you, or a few other, with wilful headineſs, to diſſwade all the reſt. And although we preſume not to determine Articles of Religion by our Self, yet from God we knowledg it, we be deſirous to defend and advance the Truth, determined or revealed, and ſo conſequently we will not fail, but withſtand the Diſturbers thereof. So fare you well. From Sion, June 28. Anno 1548.

An Original.

I Think that although the Word of God does exhort and counſel Prieſts to live in Chaſtity, out of the cumber of the Fleſh and of the World, that thereby they may wholly attend to their Calling; yet the Bond of continuing from Marriage, doth only lie upon Prieſts in this Realm, by reaſon of Canons and Conſtitutions of the Church, and not by any Precept of God's Word, as in that they ſhould be bound by any Vow: Which (in as far as my Conſcience is) Prieſts in this Church of England do not make. Ex MS. Col. C. C. Cantab.

I think that it ſtandeth well with God's Word, that a Man which hath been, or is but once married, being otherwiſe accordingly qualified, may be made a Prieſt.

And I do think, that foraſmuch as Canons and Rules made in this behalf, are neither Univerſal nor Everlaſting, but upon Conſiderations may be altered & changed; Therefore the King's Majeſty, and the higher Powers

Powers of the Church, may, upon ſuch Reaſons as ſhall move them, take away the Clog of perpetual Continence from Prieſts, and grant that it may be lawful for ſuch as cannot, or will not contain, to marry a Wife; and if ſhe die, then the ſaid Prieſt to marry no more, remaining ſtill in the Miniſtration.

Articles of High Treaſon, and other Miſdemeanours againſt the King's Majeſty, and his Crown, objected to Sir Thomas Seymour Kt. Lord Seymour of Sudley, and High Admiral of England.

Ex Libro Concilii. Fol. 236.

1. WHereas the Duke of Somerſet was made Governor of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and Protector of all his Realms and Dominions, and Subjects; to the which you your ſelf did agree, and gave your conſent in writing; it is objected and laid unto your Charge, That this notwithſtanding you have attempted and gone about, by indirect means, to undoe this Order, and to get into your hands the Government of the King's Majeſty, to the great danger of his Highneſs Perſon, and the ſubverſion of the State of the Realm.

2. It is objected, and laid to your Charge, that by corrupting with Gifts, and fair Promiſes, divers of the Privy-Chamber, you went about to allure his Highneſs to condeſcend and agree to the ſame your moſt heinous and perilous purpoſes, to the great danger of his Highneſs Perſon, and of the ſubverſion of the State of the Realm.

3. It is objected, and laid unto your Charge, that you wrote a Letter with your own hand; which Letter the King's Majeſty ſhould have ſubſcribed, or written again after that Copy, to the Parliament Houſe; and that you delivered the ſame to his Highneſs for that intent: With the which ſo written by his Highneſs, or ſubſcribed, you had determined to have come into the Commons-Houſe your ſelf; and there, with your Fautors and Adherents before prepared, to have made a Broil, or Tumult, or Uproar, to the great danger of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and ſubverſion of the State of this Realm.

4. It is objected, and laid unto our Charge, That you your ſelf ſpake to divers of the Council, and laboured with divers of the Nobility of the Realm, to ſtick and adhere unto you for the Alteration of the State, and Order of the Realm, and to attain your other Purpoſes, to the danger of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, now in his tender Years, and ſubverſion of the State of the Realm.

5. It is objected, and laid unto your Charge, that you did ſay openly and plainly, You would make the Blackeſt Parliament that ever was in England.

6. It is objected, and laid to your Charge, That being ſent for by the Authority, to anſwer to ſuch things as were thought meet to be reformed in you, you refuſed to come; to a very evil Example of Diſobedience, and danger thereby of the ſubverſion of the State of the Realm.

7. It

7. It is Objected, and laid to your Charge, That ſith the laſt Seſſions of this Parliament, notwithſtanding much clemency ſhewed unto you, you have ſtill continued in your former miſchievous Purpoſes; and continually, by your ſelf and other, ſtudied and laboured to put into the King's Majeſty's Head and Mind, a miſliking of the Government of the Realm, and of the Lord Protector's Doings, to the danger of his Perſon, and the great peril of the Realm.

8. It is Objected, and laid to your Charge, That the King's Majeſty being of thoſe tender Years, and as yet by Age unable to direct his own things, you have gone about to inſtill into his Grace's Head, and as much as lieth in you, perſwaded him to take upon himſelf the Government and managing of his own Affairs, to the danger of his Highneſs Perſon, and great peril of the whole Realm.

9. It is Objected, and laid to your Charge, That you had fully intended and appointed, to have taken the King's Majeſty's Perſon into your own Hands and Cuſtody, to the danger of his Subjects, and peril of the Realm.

10. It is Objected, and laid to your Charge, That you have corrupted with Mony, certain of the Privy-Chamber, to perſwade the King's Majeſty to have a credit towards you; and ſo to inſinuate you to his Grace, that when he lacked any thing, he ſhould have it of you and none other Body, to the intent he ſhould miſlike his ordering, and that you might the better, when you ſaw time, uſe the King's Highneſs for an Inſtrument to this purpoſe, to the danger of his Royal Perſon, and ſubverſion of the State of the Realm.

11. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you promiſed the Marriage of the King's Majeſty at your Will and Pleaſure.

12. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you have laboured, and gone about to combine and confederate your ſelf with ſome Perſons: and ſpecially moved thoſe Noble-men, whom you thought not to be contented, to depart into their Countries, and make themſelves ſtrong; and otherwiſe to allure them to ſerve your purpoſe by gentle Promiſes and Offers, to have a Party and Faction in readineſs to all your Purpoſes, to the danger of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and peril of the State of the Realm.

13. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you have parted, as it were, in your imagination and intent the Realm, to ſet Noble-men to countervail ſuch other Noble-men as you thought would let your deviliſh Purpoſes, and ſo laboured to be ſtrong to all your Devices; to the great danger of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and great peril of the State of the Realm.

14. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you had adviſed certain Men to entertain and win the favour and good-wills of the head Yeomen and Ringleaders of certain Countries, to the intent that they might bring the Multitude and Commons, when you ſhould think meet, to the furtherance of your Purpoſes.

15. It is Objected, and laid to your Charge, That you have not only ſtudied and imagined how to have the Rule of a number of Men in your hands, but that you have attempted to get, and alſo gotten, divers Stewardſhips of Noblemens Lands, & their Manoreds, to make your Party ſtronger, for your Purpoſes aforeſaid; to the danger of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and great peril of the State of the Realm.

16. It is Objected, and laid to your Charge, That you have retained young Gentlemen, and hired Yeomen, to a great multitude, and far above ſuch number as is permitted by the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, or were otherwiſe neceſſary or convenient for your Service, Place, or Eſtate, to the fortifying of your ſelf towards all your evil Intents and Purpoſes; to the great danger of the King's Majeſty, and peril of the State of the Realm.

17. It is Objected, and laid to your Charge, That you had ſo travailed in that Matter, that you had made your ſelf able to make, of your own Men, out of your Lands, and Rules, and other your Adherents, 10000 Men, beſides your Friends, to the advancement of all your Intents and Purpoſes; to the danger of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and the great peril of the State of the Realm.

18. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you had conferred, caſt, and weighed ſo much Mony as would find the ſaid 10000 Men for a Month; and that you knew how and where to have the ſame Sum; and that you had given warning to have and prepare the ſaid Maſs of Mony in a readineſs; to the danger of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and great peril to the State of the Realm.

19. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you have not only, before you married the Queen, attempted and gone about to marry the King's Majeſty's Siſter, the Lady Elizabeth, ſecond Inheritor, in remainder to the Crown, but alſo being then let by the Lord Protector, and others of the Council, ſithence that time, both in the life of the Queen, continued your old Labour and Love; and after her death, by ſecret and crafty means, practiſed to atchieve the ſaid purpoſe of marrying the ſaid Lady Elizabeth; to the danger of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and peril of the ſtate of the ſame.

20. It is Objected, and laid to your Charge, That you married the late Queen ſo ſoon after the late King's Death, that if ſhe had conceived ſtreight after, it ſhould have been a great doubt whether the Child born, ſhould have been accounted the late King's or yours; whereupon a marvellous danger and peril might, and was like to have enſued to the King's Majeſty's Succeſſion, and Quiet of the Realm.

21. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you firſt married the Queen privately, and did diſſemble and keep cloſe the ſame, inſomuch that a good ſpace after you had married her, you made labour to the King's Majeſty, and obtained a Letter of his Majeſty's Hand, to move and require the ſaid Queen to marry with you; and likewiſe procured the Lord Protector to ſpeak to the Queen to bear you her favour towards Marriage; by the which colouring, not only your evil and diſſembling Nature may be known, but alſo it is to be feared, that at this preſent you did intend to uſe the ſame practice in the marriage of the Lady Elizabeth's Grace.

22. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you not only, ſo much as lay in you, did ſtop and lett all ſuch things as, either by Parliament or otherwiſe, ſhould tend to the advancement of the King's Majeſty's Affairs, but did withdraw your ſelf from the King's Majeſty's Service; and being moved and ſpoken unto, for your own Honour, and for the Ability that was in you, to ſerve and aid the King's Majeſty's Affairs, and the Lord Protector's, you would alway always draw back, and feign Excuſes, and declare plainly that you would not do it.

Wherefore upon the diſcourſe of all theſe aforeſaid things, and of divers others, it muſt needs be intended, that all theſe Preparations of Men and Mony, the attempts and ſecret practices of the ſaid Marriage; the abuſing and perſwading of the King's Majeſty, to miſlike the Government, State, and Order of the Realm that now is, and to take the Government into his own hands; and to credit you, was to none other end and purpoſe, but after a Tittle gotten to the Crown, and your Party made ſtrong both by Sea and Land, with Furniture of Men and Mony ſufficient, to have aſpired to the Dignity Royal, by ſome heinous Enterpriſe againſt the King's Majeſty's Perſon; to the ſubverſion of the whole State of the Realm.

23. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you not only had gotten into your hands the ſtrong and dangerous Iſles of Silly, bought of divers Men; but that ſo much as lay in your Power, you travailed alſo to have Londay; and under pretence to have victualled the Ships therewith, not only went about, but alſo moved the Lord Protector, and whole Council, that you might, by publick Authority, have that, which by private fraud and falſhood, and confederating with Sharington, you had gotten, that is, the Mint at Briſtol, to be yours wholly, and only to ſerve your Purpoſes, caſting, as may appear, that if theſe Traiterous Purpoſes had no good ſucceſs, yet you might thither conveigh a good Maſs of Mony; where being aided with Ships, and conſpiring at all evil Events with Pirats, you might at all times have a ſure and ſafe Refuge, if any thing for your demerits ſhould have been attempted againſt you.

24. It is alſo Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That having knowledg that Sir William Sharington Kt. had committed Treaſon, and otherwiſe wonderfully defrauded and deceived the King's Majeſty, nevertheleſs you both by your ſelf, and by ſeeking Counſel for him, and by all means you could, did aid, aſſiſt, and bear him, contrary to your Allegiance and Duty to the King's Majeſty, and the good Laws and Orders of the Realm.

25. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That where you owed to Sir William Sharington Kt. a great ſum of Mony, yet to abet, bear, and cloak the great falſhood of the ſaid Sharington, and to defraud the King's Majeſty, you were not afraid to ſay and affirm, before the Lord Protector and the Council, that the ſame Sharington did owe unto you a great Sum of Mony, viz. 2800 l. and to conſpire with him in that falſhood, and take a Bill of that feigned Debt into your cuſtody.

26. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you by your ſelf and Miniſters have not only extorted and bribed great Sums of Mony of all ſuch Ships as ſhould go into Iſland, but alſo as ſhould go any other where in Merchandiſe, contrary to the Liberty of this Realm, and to the great diſcouragement and deſtruction of the Navy of the ſame; to the great danger of the King's Majeſty, and the State of the Realm.

27. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That where divers Merchants, as well Strangers as Engliſhmen, have had their Goods piratouſly robbed and taken, you have had their Goods in your hands and cuſtody, daily ſeen in your Houſe, and diſtributed among your Servants and Friends, without any reſtitution to the Parties ſo injured and ſpoiled; ſo that thereby Forreign Princes have in a manner been weary of the King's Majeſty's Amity, and by their Ambaſſadors divers times complained; to the great ſlander of the King's Majeſty, and danger of the State of the Realm.

28. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That where certain Men have taken certain Pirats, you have not only taken from the Takers of the ſaid Pirats all the Goods and Ships ſo taken, without any reward, but have caſt the ſaid Takers, for their good Service done to the King's Majeſty, into Priſon; and there detained them a great time, ſome eight Weeks, ſome more, ſome leſs, to the diſcouraging of ſuch as truly ſhould ſerve the King's Majeſty againſt his Pirats and Enemies.

29. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That divers of the Head Pirats being brought unto you, you have let the ſame Pirats go again free unto the Seas; and taking away from the Takers of them, not only all their Commodity and Profit, but from the true Owners of the Ships and Goods, all ſuch as ever came into the Pirats hands, as though you were authoriſed to be the chief Pirat, and to have had all the Advantage they could bring unto you.

30. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That where Order hath been taken, by the Lord Protector and the whole Council, that certain Goods, piratically taken upon the Seas, and otherwiſe known not to be Wreck nor forfeited, ſhould be reſtored to the true Owners, and Letters thereupon written by the Lord Protector and the Council; to the which Letters, you your ſelf, among the other, did ſet to your Hand; Yet you, this notwithſtanding, have given Commandment to your Officers, That no ſuch Letters ſhould be obeyed; and written your private Letters to the contrary, commanding the ſaid Goods not to be reſtored, but kept to your own uſe and profit, contrary to your own Hand before in the Council-Chamber written, and contrary to your Duty and Allegiance, and to the perilous Example of others, and great ſlander and danger of the Realm.

31. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That where certain Strangers, which were Friends and Allies to the King's Majeſty, had their Ships, with Wind and Weather broken, and yet came unwrecked to the Shore; when the Lord Protector and the Council had written for the reſtitution of the ſaid Goods, and to the Country to aid and ſave ſo much of the Goods as might, you your ſelf ſubſcribing and conſenting thereto; yet this notwithſtanding, you have not only given contrary Commandment to your Officers, but as a Pirat have written Letters to ſome of your Friends to help, that as much of theſe Goods as they could, ſhould be conveyed away ſecretly by Night further off, upon hope that if the ſame Goods were aſſured, the Owners would make no further labour for them, and then you might have enjoyed them; contrary to Juſtice and your Honour, and to the great ſlander of this Realm.

32. It is Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That you have not only diſcloſed the King's Majeſty's Secret Council, but alſo where you your your ſelf, amongſt the reſt, have conſented and agreed to certain things for the advancement of the King's Affairs, you have ſpoken and laboured againſt the ſame.

33. It is further Objected, and laid unto your Charge, That your Deputy Steward, and other your Miniſters of the Holt, in the County of Denbigh, have now, againſt Chriſtmaſs-laſt paſt, at the ſaid Holt, made ſuch proviſion of Wheat, Malt, beefs, and other ſuch things as be neceſſary for the ſuſtenance of a great number of Men; making alſo by all the means poſſible, a great Maſs of Mony; inſomuch that all the Country doth greatly marvel at it, and the more, becauſe your Servants have ſpread Rumours abroad, that the King's Majeſty was dead; whereupon the Country is in a great maze, doubt, and expectation, looking for ſome Broil, and would have been more, if at this preſent, by your apprehenſion, it had not been ſtaied.

The Lord Admiral's Anſwer to three of the former Articles.

TO the firſt, he ſaith, That about Eaſter-Tyde was twelve-months, I be ſaid to Fowler, as he ſuppoſeth it was, that if he might have the King in his cuſtody as Mr. Page had, he would be glad; and that he thought a Man might bring him through the Gallery to his Chamber, and ſo to his Houſe: But this he ſaid he ſpoke merrily, meaning no hurt. And that in the mean time after he heard, and upon that fought out certain Precedents, that there was in England at one time, one Protector, and another Regent of France, and the Duke of Exeter, and the Biſhop of Winchester, Governors of the King's Perſon; Upon that he had thought to have made ſuit to the Parliament-Houſe for that purpoſe, and he had the names of all the Lords, and totted them whom he thought he might have to his purpoſe to labour them. But afterwards communing with Mr. Comptroller at Ely-place, being put in remembrance by him of his aſſenting and agreeing with his own Hand, that the Lord Protector ſhould be Governor of the King's Perſon, he was aſhamed of his doings, and left off that ſuit and labour.

To the ſecond he ſaith, He gave Mony to two or three of them which were about the King. To Mr. Cheek he ſaith, he gave at Chriſtmaſs-tide was twelve-months, when the Queen was at Enfield 40 l. whereof to himſelf 20 l. the other for the King, to beſtow where it pleaſed his Grace amongſt his Servants. Mr. Cheek was very loth to take it, howbeit he would needs preſs that upon him; and to him he gave no more, at no time as he remembreth, ſith the King's Majeſty was crowned.

To the Grooms of the Chamber he hath at Newyears-tydes given Mony, he doth not well remember what.

To Fowler, he ſaith, he gave Mony for the King, ſith the beginning of this Parliament now laſt at London, 20 l.

And divers times, he ſaith, the King hath ſent to him for Mony, and he hath ſent it. And what time Mr. Latimer preached before the King, the King ſent to him to know what he ſhould give Mr. Latimer, and he ſent to him by Fowler 40 l. with this word, that 20 l. was a good reward for Mr. Latimer, and the other he might beſtow amongſt his Servants; whether he hath given Fowler any mony for himself he doth not remember.

To the third, he saith, It is true, he drew such a Bill indeed himself, and proffered it to the King, or else to Mr. Cheek, he cannot well tell; and before that, he saith, he caused the King to be moved by Mr. Fowler, whether he could be contented that he should have the Governance of him as Mr. Stanhope had. He knoweth not what answer he had; but upon that he drew the said Bill to that effect, that his Majesty was content, but what answer he had to the Bill he cannot tell, Mr. Cheek can tell.

The Warrant for the Admiral's Execution.

Ex Libro Concilii. Fol. 247.

THis day, the 17*th* of March, the Lord Chancellor, and the rest of the King's Council, meeting in his Highness Palace of Westminster, heard the Report of the Bishop of Ely, who by the said Lords, and others of the Council, was sent to instruct and comfort the Lord Admiral; after the hearing whereof, consulting and deliberating with themselves of the time most convenient for the execution of the said Lord Admiral, now attainted and condemned by the Parliament, They did condescend and agree, that the said Lord Admiral should be executed the Wednesday next following, betwixt the hours of nine and twelve in the forenoon the same day, upon Tower-Hill. His Body and Head to be buried within the Tower. The King's Writ (as in such Cases as heretofore hath been accustomed) being first directed and sent forth for that purpose and effect. Whereupon calling to the Council-Chamber the Bishop of Ely, they willed him to declare this their Determination to the said Lord Admiral; and to instruct and teach him, the best he could, to the quiet and patient suffering of Justice, and to prepare himself to Almighty God.

Number 36.

A Letter from the Protector to Sir Philip Hobbey, concerning the Rebellions at Home.

KNowing that all ſuch as be Ambaſſadors abroad, are not only deſirous of News, for the love they bear to their own Country naturally, deſiring often to hear of the eſtate of it, but alſo to confirm and confute ſuch Rumors as be ſpread in the Parts where they lie, we have thought good to impart what ſith our laſt Letters hath chanced. The Devonſhire Men are well chaſtiſed and appeaſed; three other of their Captains have voluntarily come in, and ſimply ſubmitted themſelves to Sir Thomas Pomery Kt. Wiſe and Harrice, who before were fled, and could not be found; and the Country cometh in daily to my Lord Privy-Seal, by 100 and 1000, to crave their Pardon, and be put in ſome ſure hope of Grace. Burry, and ſome one or two more of their blind Guides, that eſcaped from the Sword, have attempted, in the mean Seaſon, to ſtir up Somerſetſhire, and have gotten them a Band in Camp; but they are ſent after, and we truſt by this, they have as they deſerve. The Earl of Warwick lieth near to the Rebels in Norfolk, which faint now, and would have Grace gladly, ſo that all might be pardoned, Ket, and the other Arch-Traitors. The number upon them is at a ſtay, and they daily ſhrink ſo faſt away, that there is great hope that they will leave their Captains deſtitute and alone, to receive their worthy Reward; the which is the thing we moſt deſire, to ſpare, as much as may be, the effuſion of Blood, and that namely of our own Nation. In York-ſhire a Commotion was attempted the Week laſt paſt; but the Gentlemen were ſo ſoon upon them, and ſo forwardly, that it was ſtraight ſuppreſſed; and with weeping Eyes, the reſt upon their Knees, they wholly together deſired the Gentlemen to obtain their Pardons; the which the King's Majeſty hath ſo granted unto them, as may ſtand with his Highneſs Honour: So that for the Inner Parts (thanks be to the Almighty God) the Caſe ſtandeth in good Points. The Cauſes and Pretences of theſe Uproars and Riſings, are divers and uncertain, and ſo full of variety almoſt in every Camp, (as they call them) that it is hard to write what it is; as ye know, is like to be of People without Head and Rule, and that would have that they wot not what: Some crieth, Pluck down Incloſures and Parks, Some for their Commons; others pretend the Religion; a number would Rule another while, and direct things as Gentlemen have done; and indeed all have conceived a wonderful hate againſt Gentlemen, and taketh them all as their Enemies. The Ruffians among them, and the Souldiers, which be the chief Doers, look for ſpoil. So that it ſeemeth no other thing but a Plague and a Fury amongſt the vileſt and worſt ſort of Men: for except only Devonſhire and Cornwal, and they not paſt two or three, in all other places not one Gentleman, or Man of Reputation was ever amongſt them, but againſt their Wills, and as Priſoners. In Norfolk, Gentlemen, and all Servingmen, for their ſakes, are as ill handled as may be; but this Broil is well aſſwaged, and in a manner at a point ſhortly to be fully ended, with the Grace of God.

On the other part of the Seas, we have not ſo good News; for the French King taking now his time, and occaſions of this Rebellion within the Realm, is come unto Bullingnois, with a great number of Horſemen and Footmen, himſelf in Perſon: And, as we are advertiſed, of the Letters of the 24*th* of this preſent, from Ambletue or Newhaven, the Almain Camp, or Almain Hill, a piece appertaining to the ſaid Ambletue, was that day delivered to the French, by traiterous conſent of the Camp; their Variance falling out, or feigned, between the Captain and the Souldiers, ſo that they are now beſieged very near, and in a manner round. Howbeit they write, that they truſt the piece it ſelf of Newhaven will be well enough defended, God aſſiſting them, who be in as good and ſtout a Courage as any Men may be, and as deſirous to win Honour, and give a good account of their Charge. Thus we bid you heartily farewel. Auguſt 24. 1549.

But if amongſt you I have no Puddings, then muſt I ſay, as Meſſer, our Prieſt of the Hoſpital, ſaid to his mad Horſe, in our laſt journey to Hoſtia, Al diavolo, al diavolo, ai tutti diavolli. Our Lord preſerve you, and all yours, with deſire to be recommended to all. Feſto omnium Sanctorum, in the Marſhalſea.

Letters and Inſtructions touching Proceedings with the Emperor, to Sir William Paget, Knight of the Order, ſent to the Emperor. 1549.

FIrſt, He ſhall communicate his Inſtructions, and the cauſe of his coming with Sir Philip Hobbey Ambaſſador, Reſident with the Emperor, and accompanied with him at his acceſs to the ſaid Emperor, ſhall deliver his Letters of Credit; and for his Credit ſhall utter his Charge as followeth. Cotton Libr. Galba. B. 12.

First, He ſhall declare what good Will we have to the continuance of the Amity, and the encreaſe of the ſame, by ſuch means as may be deviſed on either Party; and how the Reciproque hath been promiſed on their behalf.

Item. To the intent they may as well perceive our forwardneſs therein, as alſo the World ſee the ſame take effect indeed, he is ſent to ſhew what we have thought upon for this purpoſe; and alſo if they be of a like forwardneſs, to hear again what they think meet in that behalf; and upon this Conference, either to conclude upon both Our Devices, or ſuch one of them as ſhall be thought beſt for both Parties.

Item. We think good, that the Treaty already made between the Emperor and the King's Majeſty of famous Memory, deceaſed, be made perpetual, that is to ſay, confirmed by the Prince, and the Countries on both ſides, whoſe Commodity depend upon the ſame Treaty.

Item. Before the Confirmation, the Treaty to be reviſed by him; and the Ambaſſador, and certain other, to be appointed by the Emperor, to the intent it may appear whether we have both one underſtanding of the words of the Treaty.

Item. Where the debating to and fro of the Amity with his Ambaſſador here, occaſion hath riſen to talk of Marriage between the Infant of Portugal and the Lady Mary; to which thing we perceive the Emperor hath ſithence been made privy; and that in caſe the Emperor mind to treat further of that Matter, he ſhall ſay he hath Commiſſion to hear and conclude thereof.

Item. To declare the State of our Affairs in Scotland at this time; and foraſmuch as the Scots have been very much aided with Victuals, Ammunitions, and other Neceſſaries from his Dominions, by reaſon whereof they are more ſtiff and unwilling to come to Reaſon; the ſaid Comptroller declaring this Conſideration, ſhall do what he may to procure, that not only all ſafe Conducts granted by the Emperor, or the Regent may be caſſed; but alſo his conſent, that if any his Subjects traffique into Scotland, being common Enemies, if they be taken beyond Barwick thitherward, it may be lawful for our Men to take their Goods as forfeit.

Item. To declare our Proceedings with France at this time, and of our ſending Commiſſioners upon the French Motion, who ſhall not conclude any thing prejudicial to the Amity or Treaties already paſſed, or now to be paſſed, between Us and the Emperor, but ſhall depend wholly upon his Proceedings there; ſo as if the Emperor ſhall, upon conſultation of his Affairs, determine with us to do any thing to France, we will frame our Communications with the French thereafter: if otherwiſe, than the ſaid Commiſſioners now ſent to the French ſhall do accordingly.

Item. For making the Treaty perpetual, We think convenient, that the Prince of Spain do confirm and ſign the ſame, and the Low Countries compriſed therein, do alſo in their General Parliaments or Aſſemblies make like Confirmation, and in their Courts to make Decrees thereof; and this, or ſuch form as hath been uſed in thoſe Parts heretofore in like Caſes, to be done for their part: And for our part, the King to Ratify it, the Parliament to Confirm it, and the Courts of Chancery, King's Bench, and Common-Pleas, to make Decrees thereof.

Item. In the reviſing of the Treaty, if any Doubt riſe for the underſtanding of it, which ſhall ſeem by his and the Ambaſſador's diſcretion to be for the King's Profit, to conclude upon it, if they will agree to the ſame; and if there ariſe Doubt, which ſhall ſeem to their diſcretions againſt the King, then to advertiſe hither.

Item. For the caſe of the Marriage, to declare at the firſt what was left by the King's Majeſty deceaſed; and yet nevertheleſs afterward to offer 100000 Crowns, or the Revenue yearly which ſhe hath now upon convenable Dower. The ſaid 100000 Crowns, or Revenue, to be paid at Calais, if the Marriage take place; ſhe to be conveyed to Calais at the King's Charges; the Marriage to be made in the Emperor's Court, or elſe-where in the Low-Country, by his appointment; and for her Dowry to ask by the Year to be paid in caſe of the Infant's Death, at Calais yearly, at the Feaſts of and the Feaſt of and She to return into England with Jewels, Plate, Houſhold-ſtuff, ſuch as ſhould be agreed upon. And thus far to enter for the firſt Degree; and in caſe of further Communication, to advertiſe and receive Anſwer from hence.

Item. Touching our Proceeding with France, to declare how we have continued in War with them, and Scotland theſe four Years alone, without help; and that we think it expedient for us, upon this occaſion now miniſtred by France, to give ear; in the which hearing, we mind to attribute much to the Emperor's Friendſhip; for loth we are to let ſlip from the King any one jot of his Right, if the Emperor will aſſiſt; but otherwiſe we muſt make ſuch a Bargain for the King, as we may with regard to his Honour and Surety. And in this Point the Comptroller ſhall preſs the ſaid Emperor to enter with us, and to put him in a remembrance of his Quarrels, and all ſuch other things as he can deviſe for this purpoſe; and to put him in hope generally, that we will enter gallantly with him. And if he deſcend to Particulars for the form of the Entry, to hear his Opinion, and to advertiſe, and then proceed as anſwer cometh from hence; but ſpecially to remember to ſet forth the comprehenſion of Bulloign for defence, upon a like Reciproque, for ſo ſhall he be brought to think we mind not to conclude with with France, and thereby ſtay ſuch practices, as upon occaſion of the ſaid Comptroller's going, either he with France, or France with him, might enter together. And ſo the Commiſſioners ſent to France, may make the better Bargain for the King. Marry, this Point is not to be opened throughly, till he hear ſome likelihood that our Commiſſioners in France break off without concluſion.

Item. The ſaid Comptroller ſhall eſſay, as of himſelf, whether they will accept Bulloign at the King's Majeſty's Hands, for ſome other reaſonable recompence.

Item. The ſaid Comptroller ſhall uſe his diſcretion, to open the Points aforeſaid to the Emperor, Granvela, or D'Arras, either at one time, or ſeveral times, as to his diſcretion ſhall ſeem convenient; and ſhall addreſs his Pacquets to the Commiſſioners for France lying at Calais, to the end they may ſee his Proceedings, and ſend them over with ſpeed, directing their Charge the better hereafter.

An Account of a Conference the Engliſh Ambaſſadors had with the Emperor's Miniſters, in a Letter to the Protector.

IT may like your Grace to be advertiſed, that upon the 20*th* of this Preſent, came to the Lodging of me the Comptroller, Monſieur D' Arras, and in his company the two Preſidents of the Council, St. Maurice and Viglius; who after a few words of Office paſſed between them and us, entred the Cauſe of their coming, ſaying, That the Emperor having been informed of ſuch Conference as was paſſed this other day between Me and Granvela, hath to declare his readineſs to any thing that might ſatisfy his good Will and Affection to the intent of the King, ſent as here to reviſit the Treatiſe, and ſee how we do agree upon the underſtanding of the ſame. I the Comptroller anſwered, That it was not amiſs, howbeit I had not ſo opened the Matters, nor looked to have it paſſed in ſuch order. But firſt to know the Emperor's Reſolution, how he can be contented with the Confirmation of the Treaty, in the form that I had moved, and then that agreed upon, to proceed to the reviſitation of the ſame. In good Faith, quoth D'Arras, we did ſo underſtand it, and have ſo reported to the Emperor, and this Commiſſion hath he now given us. Well, quoth I, ſeeing you are now here, and have brought the Treaty with you for that purpoſe, we may do ſomewhat in it, and afterwards be adviſed farther, requiring, that in caſe any thing ſhould be found in the paſſages of the Treaty meet to be conſidered, that we might, before further wading in the Matter, know the Emperor's Reſolution, touching as well the Confirmation of the Treaty, as in ſuch things as now might be moved: which they thought reaſonable. And ſo we began to read the Treaty; and when we came to the ſixth Article, wherein it is provided for the common Enmity in caſe of Invaſion, and by the Eſtabliſhment ſet forth, with what number the Invaſion muſt be made; and that both for the Invaſion, and the Number the Prince required to join, ſhall credit credit the Letters of the Prince requiring. I put this Caſe, quoth I, for the underſtanding of this Matter, that the King my Maſter will ſignify by his Letters to the Emperor, that ſuch a day the Scots, our common Enemies, to the number of 7000 Men, with the aid of the French King, affronted the Borders of England, comprehended in the Treaty, and ſet above 2000 Men into the Realm to invade: who did indeed invade, and ſpoil, and burn, and take Priſoners; and therefore would require the Emperor, according to the Treaty, to take the French King, who had aided his Enemies, for his Enemies; for ſo doth he, and ſo will uſe him for his Enemies. Is not the Emperor bound to do it? What ſay you, quoth I, how do you underſtand this Article? It ſhould ſeem yes, quoth D' Arras, but we will ſpeak with the Emperor in it, and bring you an Anſwer. The words be plain, quoth I, and cannot be avoided.

Then in the ſeventh Article, where it is ſaid, That the Prince requiring for his Aid Mony inſtead of Men, muſt, if the Invaſion made by the Enemy ceaſe, reſtore the Mony again which remaineth. And afterwards ſays, That though the Invaſion ceaſe, yet if he will follow the Enemy, he may uſe the Aid for the Time appointed in the Treaty; ſaying in generality, (eo caſu ſubſidiis auxiliaribus, &c.) I asked, Whether in thoſe general words, they mean not the Mony as well as the Men? Whereupon they ſeemed to doubt, and took a Note thereof, to know the Emperor's Pleaſure in the ſame.

In the ninth Article, where it is treated for redreſs of Injuries done by one Subject to the other, there we fell into a Brawl of half an hour, upon a Queſtion that I moved, viz. When they took Juſtice to be denied? And their Anſwer was, That we uſed none at all. And here at length, I fell into their manner of Arreſting of one whole Nation upon a Knave Mariner's Complaint. And he, What Thieves our Nation was upon the Sea, and lawleſs People, and that they never proceed to ſuch Extremities, but when their Subjects had been in England and Juſtice was denied. That hath never been ſeen, quoth I; but if any of your Subjects think himſelf grieved, ſtreight he runeth to Monſieur le Protecteur; and he, by and by, ſetting all the King's Affairs apart, muſt attend to the Affairs of Monſieur le Mariniure, or elſe home runneth he with open cry, That he cannot have Juſtice in England, and you ſtreight believe; and thereupon cometh theſe often Bluſters. And do you think it reaſon, that Monſieur G. or you ſhould attend to every private Man's Complaint; you ſhould then have a goodly Office. No, you ſend them to the ordinary Juſtices, and ſo let that take place and way as it will; but you will never impeach your ſelf more with the Matter. And reaſon, quoth he, but the Cauſe is not alike with you in England, for there, quoth he, all things come to the Lord Protector's Hand, there is none other Judg or Juſtice uſed or cared for in the Realm; no, and his Letters ſometimes not eſteemed, and that our Subjects fear full often, and therefore of force they muſt reſort to Monſieur Protecteur. And this is not true, quoth I, and that Monſieur Hobby knoweth, my Lord Protector, nor none of the Privy-Council, meddle with no private Matters whoſoever it be, but only meddle with Matters of State, leaving all other things to the ordinary courſe of Juſtice, except only many times to gratify your Ambaſſador, and to ſhew himſelf glad glad to nouriſh the Amity, he troubleth himſelf with the Complaints of your Subjects, which, by St. Mary, by my advice, he ſhall do no more, ſeeing it is ſo little conſidered, but ſhall refer them to the common Juſtice. Whither is that? (quoth he). To the Admiralty, quoth I. Marry, a goodly Juſtice, quoth he, for ſo ſhall the poor Man's Cauſe be tried before his Adverſary. And why not tried in our Admiralty (quoth I) as well as in yours? Nay, quoth he, both be naught indeed; they were very ordinary Courts at the beginning of the redreſs of Matters upon the Sea; but now they feel the ſweet of the Gain ſuch, as they care little for Juſtice, and here, as well for relief of poor Men ſpoiled and robbed upon the Seas, as to avoid Arreſts, and ſuch other troubleſome Proceedings on either ſide, we fell to deviſing, and came to this Point; If the Princes for their parts, upon their advertiſement to the Emperor, and we to your Grace, ſhall like it, that Commiſſion ſufficient be given by the Emperor, to two of his Privy-Council, to hear and determine by their diſcretion, ſummary, & de pleno, all Complaints by the King's Subjects here for Criminal Cauſes upon the Sea; and the King's Majeſty to do the like to two of his Privy-Council, for the Complaints in like caſe of the Emperor's Subjects.

And this was all was paſſed in open Conference, ſaying, That in the Diſcourſe for the Confirmation in the Treaty by the Prince and their Countries, as they ſeemed to ſhew the Emperor's readineſs, (but yet not ſo reſolved) that the Prince ſhould confirm the Treaty, and that further any other thing ſhould be done that he might reaſonably do, to declare his good Will to the entertainment and augmentation of his Amity and Affection to the King's Majeſty. So he alleaged divers Reaſons why the Emperor ſhould not ſeek to his Subjects to confirm his Treaties with Forreign Princes. We alleaged the Example of the King, and the French King in times paſt; and what was ſaid in that Caſe at C. in the preſence of himſelf de C. and Chap. Whereunto he anſwered, That the State of France was more reſtrained than the Emperor's; and that the French King could give no piece of his Patrimony, nor bind his Country, without the conſent of his Parliament at Paris, and the three Eſtates; but he thought the King of England to have a greater Prerogative, and the Emperor he was ſure had a greater Prerogative; and ſo had all his Anceſtors, and therefore would be loth now to put himſelf ſo far in their danger: They were, he ſaid, fifteen or ſixteen Parliaments, and if a thing ſhould be propoſed unto them, whereof they had never heard the like before, they would not only muſe much at the Matter, but they would have alſo the ſcanning of it; and what would come of it, the Emperor could not tell, peradventure daſh the Matter, and ſo prejudice his Prerogative with them. Yet now where he and his Anceſtors do, and have always paſſed Treaties with other Princes, and bind their Subjects thereby without making them privy thereto, it would by this means come to paſs, that from henceforth their Subjects would look to be privy to every Treaty, which were not convenient; marry, for the Prince which ſhall ſucceed, to confirm the Treaty, he thought the Emperor could not take it but reaſonable, and doubted not to bring a good Anſwer in the ſame. So as we ſee for this Point, it will come to the confirmation of the King and the Prince, and upon any condition or interpretation of the Treaty to them alſo, wherein we intend to go forwards, for ſo our Inſtruction beareth us, unleſs that before the concluſion and ſhutting up of the Matter, we hear from your Grace to the contrary.

The things being thus far paſſed, and our open Talk at a Point, and they ready to depart, Monſieur D' Arras taking occaſion (as it ſeemed) to ſtay becauſe of the Rain, took me aſide, and asked me if I would command him any other Service. I anſwered, No Service, but Friendſhip, and the continuance of his good Will to the King's Majeſty's Affairs; whereunto he making large Offers, I began to enter with him, how much your Grace, and all the reſt, repoſed themſelves in the friendſhip of the Emperor, and the good Miniſtry of his Father and him, to the furtherance of the King's Majeſty's Affairs; to whom, as in that behalf, they ſhewed themſelves great Friends, ſo did they, like good Servants to their Maſter, for the proſperous ſucceſs of the Affairs of the one, ſerved the turn of the other, and the contrary. Whereupon I diſcourſed largely, as far as my poor Capacity would extend, how neceſſary it was for the Empereror to aid and aſſiſt us in all things, ſo as we are not oppreſſed by Force, or driven, for want of Friendſhip, to take ſuch ways to keep us in quiet, as both we our ſelves would be loth, and our Friends ſhould afterwards have peradventure cauſe to forethink.

I repeated firſt how we entred the Wars for your ſake; for the King might have made his Bargain honourable with France, which no Man knew better than I: how long we have endured the War, and how long alone; how favourable they are to our common Enemies the Scots; how ungentle the French be to us, and by indirect means think to conſume us, to make the Emperor the weaker.

I recited the practices of the French with the Turk, with the Pope, with the Germans, with Denmark; his Aid of the Scots, and all upon intent to impeach the Emperor when he ſeeth time, or at the leaſt attending a good hour, upon hope of the Emperor's Death; the weaker that we be, the eaſilier ſhall he do it; if we forgoe any our Pieces on this ſide, we muſt needs be the weaker; and that ſo we had rather do, than alone to keep War againſt Scotland and France. Wherefore if they will both provide for their own Strength, and give us courage to keep ſtill that which we have, the Emperor muſt be content to take * 13 into defence, as well as other places comprehended in the Treaty; which, I ſaid, we meant not, but upon a reaſonable Reciproque. What Reciproque (quoth he) roundly? Thereupon adviſe you reaſonably, quoth I. O, quoth he, I cannot ſee how the Emperor can honourably make a true Treaty for that Point, without offence of his Treaty with France; and we mean to proceed directly and plain with all Men, quoth he. Why, quoth I, we may bring you juſtly, by and by with us, if we will advertiſe you, as I did even now put my Caſe. Yea, if your Caſe be true, quoth he; but herein we will charge your Honours and Conſciences, whether the Fact be ſo or no? for your Grace ſhall underſtand, that I talked in the Matter ſo ſuſpiciouſly, as though ſuch an Invaſion had been made, and that you would require common Enmity.

* This is a Cipher, and ſtands, I ſuppoſe, for Bulloign.

In

In fine, Sir, after many Motions and Perſwaſions, and long Diſcourſes uſed on my behalf, to induce them to take 13 into defence. His refuge was only, That they would fain learn how they might honeſtly anſwer the French; albeit I ſhewed him ſome forms of Anſwers, which he ſeemed not to like; yet in the end I ſaid, He was a great Doctor, and as he had put the Doubt, ſo he was learned ſufficiently, if he liſted, to aſſoil the ſame. He ſaid, he would open theſe Matters to the Emperor, and truſted to bring me ſuch an Anſwer as I ſhould have reaſon to be ſatisfied, and ſo departed; whereof, as ſoon as we have knowledg, your Grace ſhall be advertiſed accordingly. And thus we beſeech God, to ſend your Grace well to do all your Proceedings.

Number 40.

A Letter from Sir William Paget, and Sir Philip Hobbey, concerning their Negotiation with the Emperor's Miniſters.

An Original.

IT may like your Grace be advertiſed, That yeſterday at Afternoon, Monſieur D' Arras, accompanied with two Preſidents of the Council, & Maurice and Viglius, came unto the Lodging of me the Comptroller; and after ſome words of Office paſſed on either part, D' Arras began to ſet forth the Cauſe of their coming, ſaying, That the Emperor having at good length conſidered and debated the Things proponed and communed of between us ſince my coming hither, had ſent them to report unto me his final Anſwer and Reſolution to the ſame. Cotton Libr. Galba. B. 12.

And firſt (quoth he) to your Caſe, That at our being together for the reviſitation of the Treaty, ye put forth upon the ſixth Article for the common Enmity in caſe of Invaſion, his Majeſty muſeth much, what ye ſhould mean thereby, for ſeeing the Caſe is not in ure, he thinketh, that doubting of his Friendſhip, ye go about, by theſe means, to grope and feel his Mind; which ye need not do, he having hitherto ſhewed himſelf ready in all things to ſhew the King, his good Brother, pleaſure, and to obſerve the Treaty in all Points to the uttermoſt; and if this Caſe ſhould happen to come in ure, then will he not fail to do whatſoever the Treaty bindeth him unto, till when he can make no other anſwer therein.

As to your Queſtion, moved upon the ſixth Article of the Treaty, viz. Whether Mony be not meant as well as Men by theſe words, Subſidiis Auxiliaribus? His Majeſty taketh the words to be plain enough, and thinketh they cannot be otherwiſe interpreted, than to be meant, as well for Mony as Men, for ſo doth he underſtand them.

Unto the Order that was communed upon for the Adminiſtration of Juſtice on both ſides, for matter of Spoil or Piracy upon the Sea, his Majeſty having weighed what is beſt to be done therein further, he hath good cauſe firſt to complain of the over many Spoils that your Men have made on his poor Subjects, and the ſmall Juſtice that hath been hitherto miniſtred unto them herein, whereof he hath continual Complaints, and therefore he thinketh it were meeter, e're ever any further Order ſhall be concluded upon, that his Subjects were firſt recompenced of theſe wrongs they have ſuſtained, and the Matter brought to ſome equality, and his People put in as much good caſe as yours are; for I aſſure you (quoth he) the Wrongs our Men have ſuſtained are many; among the reſt, a poor Jeweler, having gotten a ſafe Conduct of the King that dead is, to bring into England certain Jewels, becauſe after he had the King's Hand and Seal to the Licenſe, he had not the ſame ſealed alſo with the Great Seal of England, his Jewels were taken from him; and he, being not preſent (although it were ſo named in the Sentence) condemned to loſe them by the order of your Law, contrary to all Equity and Juſtice: Which ſeemeth ſtrange, that the King's Hand and Seal ſhould not appear to be ſufficient for a greater Matter than this. The Treaties alſo provide, That the Subjects of the one Prince may frankly, without impediment, traffique and occupy into the other Prince's Country; but to ſhadow the Matter with all, one, I cannot tell who, hath been agreed withal, and ſo the poor Man and his Heirs put from their Right, which his Majeſty wiſheth to be conſidered. And albeit he thinketh that the King your Maſter, being under Age, cannot himſelf, by the order of the Law, conclude upon any thing now in his Minority, that ſhall be of due force and ſtrength, able to bind him and his Country when he ſhall come to his perfect Age. Yet taking that his Tutors be authoriſed thereto, by the common Aſſent of your Parliament, may go through and conclude upon theſe, or like things in his Name, his Majeſty thinketh it will do well, when his Subjects ſhall be recompenſed of the Wrongs they have hitherto ſuſtained, that ſome order be deviſed for the adminiſtration of Juſtice hereafter in like Caſes.

As touching the Confirmation of the Treaty, conſidering that the ſame was firſt made between the Emperor and King Henry the Eighth, and not ratified by the King your Maſter ſince his Father's Death, his Majeſty thinketh that he hath moſt cauſe to require the ſame: Wherefore becauſe (as I told you even now) he thinketh that theſe things, the King himſelf ſhould conclude upon during his Minority, cannot be of ſufficient force, if his Tutors ſhall be, by the Authority of your Parliament enabled thereto, his Majeſty is content the Treaty be confirmed by them in the King's Name, and by the Prince of Spain, in ſuch form as ſhall be thought beſt for both Parties.

As to the comprehenſion of Bulloign, ye muſt know, that we have a Treaty with France as well as with you, which the Emperor cannot, without ſome touch of his Honour, break, without juſt Grounds: And albeit his Majeſty would be loth to ſee the King, his good Brother, forgoe either that Peace, or any other Jot of his Right, yet can he not enter this Defence, unleſs he would break with France out of hand; which in reſpect of his other Affairs he cannot yet do, howbeit he will gladly aſſiſt his good Brother in any other thing the beſt he may, and will not fail to ſhew him all the Pleaſure he can with regard to his Honour; but with Bulloign he cannot meddle at this time. And here he ſtaying; Is this the Emperor's reſolute and full Anſwer, Monſieur D' Arras? quoth I. Yea, (quoth he); wherewith he prayeth the King,

King, his good Brother, to reſt ſatisfied, and take it in good part. Albeit (quoth I) I have no Commiſſion to make any Reply thereto, becauſe it was not known to your Grace what the Emperor's Reſolution ſhould be; yet in the way of talk I will be bold to ſay my mind herein, We have, Monſieur D' Arras (quoth I) always eſteemed the Emperor's Friendſhip, and deſire the obſervation of the Treaties, and the entertainment of the Amity, as a thing neceſſary and common to both the Parties: for the better eſtabliſhment whereof, and that now and in this Time ſome good Fruit, to the benefit of both, might appear to the World to follow of the ſame, I was ſent hither, which was the chiefeſt cauſe of my coming: And becauſe that the Amity between both Princes might be the firmer, and that all Doubts being taken away, no cauſe of Quarrel ſhall be left, We thought beſt to put you in mind of the Confirmation and Reviſitation of the Treaty, to the intent, that by the one, the World might ſee an eſtabliſhment of our Friendſhip by our Deed; and that by the other, one of us might underſtand another, and conſider whether any thing were to be added for the Commodity of both Parties, which I ſuppoſe ſtandeth you as much upon to deſire, as it doth us. And whereas ye ſay that the King's Majeſty, becauſe he is under Age, cannot conclude or go through with any thing that ſhall be of ſufficient Force; I muſt needs tell you plainly, That ye touch his Majeſty's Honour over-near herein, for we think that the Majeſty of a King is of ſuch efficacy, that he hath even the ſame Authority, and full Power, at the firſt hour of his Birth, that he hath thirty Years after. And what your Laws are, I know not, but ſure I am, that by our Laws, whatſoever is done by the King in his Minority, or by his Miniſters in his Name, is of no leſs force and ſtrength, than if it had been done in time of his full Age and Years, if once the Great Seal of his Realm have paſſed, there is no Remedy but needs muſt he ſtand thereto. Marry, let the Miniſters take heed what they do, and look that they may be able to diſcharge themſelves towards him of their Doings, if he ſhall require account of them when he cometh to Age, for it is they muſt anſwer him; but he muſt needs ſtand to whatſoever they have counſelled him to agree unto during his Minority. And to prove that our Laws giveth him the ſame Authority now, that he ſhall have when he cometh to his perfect Age; if any Man, either for inſtruction of Learning, or any other Cauſe, ſhould preſume to lay hands on, or touch his Majeſty in way of Correction, he ſhould by Law be taken for a Traitor. And if the Matter were as ye take it, we ſhould then be in a ſtrange and evil caſe, for neither might we conclude Peace, League, or Treaty, nor make Laws or Statutes, during the King's Minority, that ſhould be of ſufficient force to bind him and his to the obſervation of the ſame. But ye miſtake the Matter much; and therefore if the Emperor mind to proceed to this Confirmation he may, or otherwiſe do as it ſhall pleaſe him.

And as touching my Caſe (quoth I) ye muſt underſtand, I did not move it without ſome juſt ground; for remembring that all your Commiſſioners, and all ours being together at Utrecht for the Eſclarciſement of the Treaty, although the words of the Treaty were plain enough, and could receive none other interpretation than was there plainly written, yet would ye needs underſtand the Article for common Enmity, in case of Invasion, after your own minds. And whereas, by the words of the Treaty, no mention is made of any number, and therefore with howsoever few in number the Invasion be made, ought the Invaders to be taken for common Enemies? Your Commissioners did nevertheless interpret the Matter at their pleasure, and would needs prescribe a number of 8000 Men; under which number of Invasion were made, the Treaties in this case should not stand to any force. And like-as ye put a Doubt here, where none was to be found, so thought I, ye might do in other things were they never so plain; and that moved me to put this case, to see whether ye understood this Point as ye ought to do, after the literal sense; and partly to know your minds therein, because perhaps the Matter hath been already in ure. This, I say, was the occasion why I put further this Question, and not for any mistrust of the Emperor's Friendship, whom I must confess we have always found our Well-willer, and so we doubt not he will continue; and therefore I need not grope his Mind herein, neither did I mean any such thing hereby.

As to your Answer to the order of Justice, I see not that the Emperor hath so much cause to complain of lack of Justice in his Subjects Cases, as ye seem to set forth; for hitherto there hath not any Man complained in our Country, and required Justice, unto whom the same hath been denied. And although some Man abiding the order of our Law, or having had some Sentence that pleased him not, hath complained hither of delay or lack of Justice, ye must not therefore, by and by, judg that he saith true, or that there is not uprightness or equity used in our Country, for we have there, as ye have here, and else-where, Ministers that are wise, and well-learned in our Law, and Men of honesty and good Conscience, who deal and proceed justly, as the order of the Law leadeth them, without respect to favour or friendship to any Man.

And as for the Jewellers Case that ye moved, ye must understand, that as ye have Laws here in your Country, for the direction of your Common-Wealth, so have we also in ours; whereby amongst the rest we do forbid, for good respect, the bringing in, or transporting forth of certain Things, without the King's safe Conduct or Licence. And although, as ye alleadged before, the Treaty giveth liberty to the Subjects of either Prince to traffique into the others Country, it is not for all that meant hereby, that they shall not be bound to observe the Law and Order of the Country whereunto they Traffique: for this liberty is only granted for the security of their Persons to go and come without Impeachment, and maketh them not for all that Lawless. And whereas further it is provided by our Law, that in certain things to be granted by the King, the same Grant must pass under the Great Seal; Then if any of those things pass under any other Seal, they be not of due force until they have also passed the Great Seal of England; wherefore if the Jeweller, either by negligence or covetousness, of himself, or of those he put in trust, did not observe this Order; but thereto contrary, for sparing a little Cost, did presume to bring in his Jewels before his License came to the Great Seal, me thinketh neither he, nor any other, can have just cause to say that he was wronged, if according to our Laws he were sentenced to lose the same: and yet, after he was thus thus condemned, more to gratify the Emperor, than for that I took it to be so reasonable, I my self was a Suitor to my Lord Protector's Grace, for some Recompence to be made to the Jeweller's Wife, whom we knew, and none other to be Party: for she followed the Suit, she presented the Petitions, in her Name were they made; and finally she, and none others, was by the Emperor's Ambassador commended unto us.

I have seen the Sentence (quoth he) and do mislike nothing so much therein, as that the Man is condemned, and named to have been present at the time of his Condemnation, when indeed he was dead a good while before.

He was present (quoth I) in the Person of his Wife, who was his Procurator, and represented himself; and I know, that those before whom this Matter passed, are Men both Learned and of good Conscience, and such as would not have done herein any thing against Right and Order of Law.

The Sentences that are given in our Country, by the Justices and Ministers, they are just and true, and therefore neither can we, nor will we revoke them for any Man's pleasure, after they have once passed the Higher Court, from whence there is no further Appellation, no more than you will here call back such final Order, as hath been in any case taken by your High Court of Brabant. And the Cause why we for our part misliked not this Order of Justice, was for the better establishment of the Amity, and to avoid the continual Arrests that are made on our poor Men; to the end also that this sort of Suiters might be the sooner dispatched, without troubling either my Lord Protector in England, or you here, when you are busied in other Affairs of more importance.

And as concerning the Comprehension of Bulloign, in good Faith, because we thought that if the same should happen to be taken from the King's Majesty by force, as I trust it shall not, the loss should be common, and touch the Emperor almost as near as us; We thought good, for the better security thereof, to move this Comprehension, which we take to be as necessary for the Emperor as us. And though we are not so wise and well seen in your things as your selves are, yet do we look towards you, and guess of your Affairs afar off, and perhaps do somewhat understand the state of the same, whereof I could say more than now intend. But ye say this is the Emperor's Resolution herein; We take it as an Answer, and shall do accordingly. Marry, whereas you stick so much upon your Honour, in breaking your Treaties with the French, I remember Mousieur Granvela your Father, at my being with him, did not let to say, That he had his Sleeve full of Quarrels against the French, whensoever the Emperor list to break with them.

Yea, so have we indeed (quoth he) but the Time is not yet come: we must temporize our things in this Case as the rest of our Affairs lead us.

Ye say well (quoth I) ye have reason to regard chiefly the well-guiding of your own things, and yet me thinketh some respect ought to be given to Friends. But seeing this is your Answer, I will reply no more thereto.

Yet

Yet one thing, Monſieur D' Arras, (quoth I) I moved to your Father, which ye make no mention of, and I would gladly know your mind in, which is, the granting of ſafe Conducts to the Common Enemy: which the Treaty, by plain and expreſs words, forbiddeth either Prince to do.

Indeed, Monſieur Ambaſſadeur, (quoth he) the words of the Treaty are as ye ſay, plain enough; and yet the Matter were very ſtrait, if it ſhould be taken in ſuch extremity; for hereafter, in time of War, ye might happen to have need of Wood, Canvas, or Wine, and we of the like, and other Neceſſaries; and if in ſuch Caſes the Princes ſhould not have Prerogative to grant ſafe Conducts, it ſhall be a great inconvenience, and a thing not hereafter ſeen; howbeit the Emperor for his part will not, I think, ſtick much hereupon, but obſerve the plain meaning of the Treaty. Nevertheleſs I cannot ſay any thing expreſly on his behalf herein, becauſe Monſieur Granvela ſpake nothing thereof. And yet did we move him of it (quoth I) and he bad us grant none, and the Emperor for his part would not grant any. No more hath he done, quoth he, ſithence his coming into this Country, nor intendeth not hereafter. He needeth not, quoth I, for thoſe that have been given out before are ſufficient for a great while. Nay, that they are not, quoth he, for the longeſt was granted but for a Year, and now are they expired; and whereas a while ſithence, one preſuming upon his ſafe Conduct, came into this Country to Traffique, becauſe the time thereof was expired, he was taken and impriſoned.

The ſaid D' Arras, after this talk, touched further unto me two Points, which the Emperor, he ſaid, deſireth may be reformed; The firſt was, Our Merchants, contrary to our Entercourſe, do enhaunce the prices of their Woolls, and will not ſell at ſuch prices as they are bound by the Entercourſe; wherewith the Merchants here do find themſelves aggrieved, and therefore the Emperor deſireth ſome order may be taken herein.

Whereunto I anſwered, that I underſtood not the Matters, and yet I ſuppoſed our Men did not this but upon ſome grounds and juſt occaſion, by reaſon of other breach of Order on their parts here. Howbeit I ſhewed him I would inform your Grace thereof, and doubted not, but if any thing were amiſs on our parts, it ſhall be reformed; accordingly looking for the Semblable on their behalf.

The other, he ſaid, was, That our Men have of late begun to build a Bulwark, which ſtandeth half on the King's Majeſty's Ground, and half on the Emperor's Territory. And although Monſieur de Rue have viewed the ſame, and perceiving the Emperor to be wronged thereby, hath required our Folks to proceed no further therein; yet ceaſe they not to build ſtill, which the Emperor marvelleth much at, and thinks we would not take it well that he ſhould attempt the like Fortification upon the King's Territory; and therefore requireth that ſome Redreſs may be given in time therein.

I anſwered, That I knew not of this Thing; howbeit, as I went homeward, I would inform my ſelf of the Caſe, and make report thereof to your Grace, who I doubted not would take ſuch order therein as ſhould ſtand with Reaſon.

An

And here Monſieur D' Arras ſetting forth with many good words the Emperor's Amity towards the King, and his readineſs to ſhew his Majeſty's Pleaſure in all things that he conveniently may; and that in caſe we proceed to any further Treaty with France; he doubted not but we would have regard to them, according to our Treaties: and that alſo, if we grew to any Peace with the Scots, ſeeing that his Majeſty is entred in Enmity chiefly for our ſake, whereby his Subjects have been ſundry ways endangered, he truſteth he will have conſideration to ſee that convenient Recompence be made to them by the Scots, e're ever we go through with any concluſion; the rather, becauſe the Scots have, and ceaſe not ſtill to offer, beſides a large Recompence, very great Conditions, if his Majeſty would fall to any Peace with them, which chiefly for our ſakes he hath, and will refuſe to do. We anſwered hereunto generally, That the King's Majeſty, in ſuch caſe, we doubted not, would have due reſpect to the Emperor's Amity, and proceed therein as appertaineth.

This was the ſubſtance of their cold Anſwer, as your Grace may ſee, of ſmall effect, although interlaced with plenty of good words, which we alſo thought beſt to uſe towards them, and requite them with the like. And thus, after I had required of D' Arras a time to take my leave of the Emperor, and his promiſe to procure the ſame as ſhortly as he might, we departed. And thus we beſeech God to ſend your Grace as well to do as we do wiſh.

MOſt high and mighty Prince, our moſt gracious Soveraign Lord. It may pleaſe your Majeſty to be advertiſed, That having heard ſuch Meſſage as it pleaſed your Majeſty to ſend unto us by your Highneſs Secretary, Sir William Petre; like as it was much to our grief and diſcomfort to underſtand, that upon untrue Informations, your Majeſty ſeemed to have ſome doubt of our Fidelities; ſo do we, upon our knees, moſt humbly beſeech your Majeſty to think, that as we have always ſerved the King's Majeſty, your moſt noble Father, and your Highneſs likewiſe, faithfully and truly, ſo do we mind always to continue your Majeſty's true Servants, to the effuſion of our Blood, and loſs of our Lives. And for the ſecurity of your moſt Royal Perſon's ſafeguard, and preſervation of your Realms and Dominions, have at this time conſulted together, and for none other cauſe, we take God to witneſs. We have heretofore, by all good and gentle means, attempted to have had your Highneſs Uncle, the Duke of Somerſet, to have have governed your Majeſty's Affairs, by the advice of us, and the reſt of your Councellors; but finding him ſo much given to his own Will, that he always refuſed to hear Reaſon; and therewith doing ſundry ſuch things as were, and be moſt dangerous, both to your moſt Royal Perſon, and to your whole Realm, we thought yet again to have gently and quietly ſpoke with him in theſe things, had he not gathered Force about him, in ſuch ſort, as we might eaſily perceive him earneſtly bent to the maintenance of his old wilful and troublous doings. For redreſs whereof, and none other cauſe, we do preſently remain here ready to live and die your true Servants. And the Aſſembly of almoſt all your Council being now here, we have, for the better Service of your Majeſty, cauſed your Secretary to remain here with us, moſt humbly beſeeching your Grace to think in your Heart, that the only preſervation of your Perſon, and your Eſtate, for the diſcharge of our Duties, enforceth us to deviſe how to deliver your Grace from the peril your Highneſs ſtandeth in, and no other reſpect; for whatſoever is, or ſhall be ſaid to your Highneſs, no earthly thing could have moved us to have ſeemed to ſtand as a Party, but your only preſervation, which your Majeſty ſhall hereafter perceive and (we doubt not) repute us for your moſt faithful Servants and Councellors, as our doings ſhall never deſerve the contrary; as God knoweth, to whom we ſhall daily pray for your Majeſty's preſervation; and with our Bodies, defend your Perſon and Eſtate as long as Life ſhall endure.

Articles offered by me the Lord Protector, to the King's Majeſty, in the preſence of his Highneſs Council, and others his Majeſty's Lords and Gentlemen, at Windſor, to be declared on my behalf, to the Lords, and the reſt of his Highneſs Council remaining at London.

Cotton Libr. Caligula B. 7

FIrſt, That I do not, nor did not mean to apprehend any of them, or otherwiſe to diſturb or moleſt them; but hearing tell of their ſuch Meetings and Aſſemblies, and gathering of Horſemen, and other Powers, out of ſeveral Countries, not being privy of the Cauſes thereof, to avoid further inconveniences and danger which might enſue to your Majeſty's Perſon; which by many Rumors, certain Intelligences, and ſundry Meſſages, was declared imminent unto your Highneſs, and to me the Lord

Lord Protector, was forced to seek this Defence, as I at the first beginning declared unto your Highness.

Secondly, That this Force and Power which here is assembled about your Majesty at this present, is to do none of them which be there at London, or else-where, either in Person or Goods, any damage or hurt, but to defend only, if any violence should be attempted against your Highness.

As for any contention and strife betwixt me the Lord Protector, and the Council there, I do not refuse to come to any reasonable end and conclusion, that should be for the preservation of your Majesty, and tranquillity of the Realm, if they will send any two of them with Commission on their behalfs, to conclude and make a good end betwixt us.

And I most humbly beseech your Majesty to appoint any two of such as be here about your Majesty, to join with the same; and whatsoever those four, or three of them shall determine, I do, and shall wholly and fully submit my self thereunto. And that for more confirmation, if it shall be so thought good to the said Persons, their Agreement and Conclusion to be established and ratified by Parliament, or any other Order that shall be devised. And I beseech your Majesty, that at my humble suit, and by the advice of me, and other of your Council here, for the better proceedings herein, and to take away all Doubts and Fears that might arise, to grant to them four, or any such two of them, which they shall send for the purpose above-said, free passage to themselves, and with each of them twenty of their Servants, to safely come, tarry here, and return at their pleasure. And I most humbly beseech your Majesty, that this Bill, signed with your Majesty's Hand, and our Seals, may be a sufficient Warrant therefore. Letters sent from the Lords at London, to the King's Majesty.

MOst high and mighty Prince, our most gracious Soveraign Lord, we have received, by Mr. Hobbey, your Majesty's most gracious Letters, of the 8*th* of this Instant, and heard such further Matter as it pleased your Majesty to will to be declared by him. And sorry we be, that your Majesty should have these occasions to be troubled, especially in this kind of Matter; the beginning and only occasion whereof, as we be well able to prove to your Majesty, hath proceeded of the Duke of Somerset. It is much discomfort to us all, to understand that your Royal Person should be touched with [illegible] of Mind; and most of all it grieveth us, that it should be [illegible] your Majesty, that we have not that care that beseemeth us for the pacifying of these Uproars, and conservation of your Majesty's Common-Wealth and State from Danger; wherein whatsoever [illegible] informed your Highness, we humbly beseech your Majesty to think, we be as careful as any Men living may be; Ex Libro Concilii.

be; and do not, nor (we truſt) ſhall not forget the Benefits received of your Majeſty's moſt noble Father, nor any of our bounden Duties of Allegiance; the conſideration, and the ſpecial care whereof, forced us to conſult ſeriouſly, and to join in this ſort: which thing, if we had not preſently followed, not only your moſt Royal Perſon (whom Almighty God long preſerve) but this your whole Eſtate being already much touched, and in great towardneſs of ruin, was moſt like to come, in ſhort time, to moſt imminent danger and peril; the Cauſes whereof, as we do all well know, and can prove to have proceeded from the ſaid Duke. So if we ſhould not earneſtly provide for the ſame, we ſhould not be able to anſwer to your Majeſty hereafter for not doing our Duties therein; therefore do we nothing doubt, but your Majeſty, of your great Clemency and good Nature, will not think that all and every of us, being the whole State of your Privy-Council, one or two excepted, ſhould be led in theſe things by private Affections, or would preſume to write to your Majeſty, that whereof we were not moſt aſſured; and much more, we truſt that your Highneſs, of your Goodneſs, will, without any jealouſie or ſuſpicion, think that moſt expedient, both for your own moſt Royal Perſon, and all your Subjects, that by the Body of your Council may be thought expedient; to whom, and to no one Man, your Highneſs moſt grave Father, appointed by his laſt Will and Teſtament, the Care of your Majeſty, and all your moſt weighty Affairs. We cannot therefore but think our ſelves much wronged, that your ſaid moſt Royal Perſon is in this ſort by the Duke only detained and ſhut up from us, to all our great heavineſs, and the great fear of all other your Majeſty's true Subjects, and wonder of all the World; ſooner may one Man intend ill, than a multitude of us, who we take God to witneſs to be a thouſand times more careful of Your Highneſs ſurety, than for all our own Lives. We truſt alſo, that of Your Majeſty's good Nature, You will not think that wilfulneſs, which Your whole Council doth, or ſhall agree upon, for Your Majeſty's Surety and Benefit; where the more agreeable we be, the better Opinion we truſt Your Majeſty will conceive of us and our doings. It comforteth us much to ſee the great appearance of Your Majeſty's natural clemency, even in theſe Your young Years; and the aſſured hope which we have thereof, encourageth us to be perſwaded, that You both do, and will conceive good Opinion of us and all our doings; and that Your Majeſty is, and ſo will continue, our gracious good Lord, with whom (as we truſt) we never deſerve willingly to be called in the ſtanding of any Judgment with Your Majeſty.

For the end of this Matter, touching the Duke of Somerſet, if he have that reſpect to Your Majeſty's Surety that he pretendeth; if he have that conſideration of his Duty to God that his Promiſe and Oath requireth; if he have that remembrance of the performance of Your Majeſty's Father's Will, that to the effect of a good Executor appertaineth; if he have the reverence to Your Law that a good Subject ought to have, Let him firſt quietly ſuffer us, Your Majeſty's moſt humble Servants, and true Counſellors, to be reſtored to your Majeſty's preſence; let him, as becometh a true Subject, ſubmit himſelf to Your Majeſty's Council, and the order of Your Highneſs Laws; let the Forces aſſembled be ſent away, and then may we do our Duties, in giving our attendance upon Your Majesty; and after consult there with your Majesty more freely, for such order as may be thought most meet for your Grace's Surety: By these means Your Majesty's Subjects may be at quiet, and all occasions of Stir taken away. And if the said Duke refuse to agree hereunto, we must think him to remain in his naughty and detestable determination. The Protectorship and Governance of your most Royal Person, was not granted him by your Father's Will, but only by agreement, first amongst us the Executors, and after of others. Those Titles and special Trust was committed to him during Your Majesty's Pleasure; and upon condition he should do all things by advice of Your Council. Which condition, because he hath so many times broken, and notwithstanding the often speaking to, without all hope of amendment, we think him most unworthy those Honours or Trust. Other particular things, too many and too long to be written to your Majesty at this time, may at our next access to Your Royal Presence, be more particularly opened, consulted upon, and moderated, for the conservation of Your Majesty's Honour, Surety, and good Quiet of Your Realms and Dominions, as may be thought most expedient.

Letters from the Lords at London, to the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury and Sir William Paget, &c.

MY Lords, after our most hearty Commendations, we have received your Letters by Mr. Hobbey, and heard such Credence as he declared on the King's Majesty's and your behalfs unto us. The Answers whereunto, because they may at more length appear to you both, by our Letters to the King's Majesty, and by report also of the said Mr. Hobbey, we forbear to repeat here again; most heartily praying, and requiring your Lordships, and every of you; and nevertheless charging and commanding you in the King's Majesty's Name, to have a continual earnest watch, respect and care, to the surety of the King's Majesty, our natural and most gracious Soveraign Lord's Person; and that he be not removed from his Majesty's Castle of Windsor, as you tender your Duties to Almighty God and his Majesty, and as you will answer for the contrary at your uttermost perils. We are moved to call earnestly upon you herein, not without great cause, and amongst many others, we cannot but remember unto you, That it appeareth very strange unto us, and a great wonder unto all true Subjects, that you will either assist or suffer his Majesty's most Royal Person to remain in the Guard of the Duke of Somerset's Men, sequestred from his own old sworn Servants. It seemeth strange, that in his Majesty's own House, Strangers should be armed with his Majesty's own Armour, and be nearest about his Highness Person; and those to whom the ordinary Charge is committed, sequestred away, so as they may not attend according to their sworn Duties. If any ill come hereof, you can consider der to whom it muſt be imputed once; the Example is very ſtrange and perilous. And now, my Lords, if you tender the preſervation of his Majeſty, and the State, join with us to that end: we have written to the King's Majeſty, by which way things may ſoon be quietly and moderately compounded. In the doing whereof, we mind to do none otherwiſe than we would be done to, and that with as much moderation and favour as honourably we may. We truſt none of you have juſt cauſe to note any one of us, and much leſs all of ſuch cruelty, as you ſo many times make mention of. One thing in your Letters we marvel much at, which is that you write, that you know more than we know. If the Matters come to your knowledg, and hidden from us, be of ſuch weight as you ſeem to pretend; or if they touch, or may touch his Majeſty or the State, we think you do not as you ought, in that you have not diſcloſed the ſame unto us, being the whole State of the Council. And thus praying God to ſend you the Grace to do that may tend to the ſurety of the King's Majeſty's Perſon, and tranquillity of the Realm, we bid you heartily farewel, &c.

Ex Libro Concilii. IT may like your good Lordſhips, with our moſt hearty Commendations, to underſtand, That this morning Sir Philip Hobbey hath, according to the Charge given him by your Lordſhips, preſented your Letters to the King's Majeſty, in the preſence of us, and all the reſt of his Majeſty's good Servants here, which was there read openly, and alſo the others to them of the Chamber, and of the Houſhold, much to their Comforts, and ours alſo; and according to the Tenours of the ſame, we will not fail to endeavour our ſelves accordingly.

Now touching the marvel of your Lordſhips, both of that we would ſuffer the Duke of Somerſet's Men to guard the King's Majeſty's Perſon; and alſo of our often repeating this word Cruelty; although we doubt not but that your Lordſhips have been throughly informed of our Eſtates here, and upon what occaſion the one hath been ſuffered, and the other proceeded; yet at our convening together, (which may be when and where pleaſeth you) we will, and are able to make your Lordſhips ſuch an account, as wherewith we doubt not you will be ſatisfied, if you think good to require it of us. And for becauſe this Bearer, Maſter Hobbey, can particularly inform your Lordſhips of the whole diſcourſe of all things here, we remit the report of all other things to him, ſaving that we deſire to be advertiſed, with as much ſpeed as you ſhall think good, whether the King's Majeſty ſhall come forthwith thither, or remain ſtill here; and that ſome of your Lordſhips would take pains to come hither forthwith. For the which purpoſe, I the Comptroller, will cauſe three three of the best Chambers in the great Court to be hanged and made ready. Thus thanking God that all things be so well acquieted, we commit your Lordships to his tuition.

Articles Objected to the Duke of Somerset.

1. THat he took upon him the Office of Protector, upon expres condition, That he should do nothing in the King's Affairs, but by assent of the late King's Executors, or the greatest part of them.

2. That contrary to this condition, he did hinder Justice, and subvert Laws, of his own Authority, as well by Letters as by other Command.

3. That he caused divers Persons Arrested and Imprisoned for Treason, Murder, Man-slaughter, and Felony, to be discharged; against the Laws and Statutes of the Realm.

4. That he appointed Lieutenants for Armies, and other Officers for the weighty Affairs of the King, under his own Writing and Seal.

5. That he communed with Ambassadors of other Realms alone, of the weighty Matters of the Realm.

6. That he would taunt and reprove divers of the King's most honourable Councellors, for declaring their Advice in the King's Weighty Affairs against his Opinion; sometimes telling them that they were not worthy to sit in Council; and sometimes, that he need not to open weighty Matters to them; and that if they were not agreeable to his Opinion, he would discharge them.

7. That against Law he held a Court of Request in his House; and did inforce divers to answer there for their Freehold and Goods, and did determine of the same.

8. That being no Officer, without the Advice of the Council, or most part of them, he did dispose Offices of the King's Gift for Mony; grant Leases, and Wards, and Presentations of Benefices pertaining to the King; gave Bishopricks, and made sales of the King's Lands.

9. That he commanded Alchymie, and Multiplication to be practised, thereby to abase the King's Coin.

10. That divers times he openly said, That the Nobility and Gentry were the only cause of Dearth; whereupon the People rose to reform Matters of themselves.

11. That against the mind of the whole Council, he caused Proclamation to be made concerning Inclosures; whereupon the People made divers Insurrections, and destroyed many of the King's Subjects.

12. That he sent forth a Commission, with Articles annexed, concerning Inclosures, Commons, Highways, Cottages, and such-like Matters, giving the Commissioners Authority to hear and determine those causes, whereby the the Laws and Statutes of the Realm were ſubverted, and much Rebellion raiſed.

13. That he ſuffered Rebels to aſſemble and lie armed in Camp, againſt the Nobility and Gentry of the Realm, without ſpeedy repreſſing of them.

14. That he did comfort and encourage divers Rebels, by giving them Mony, and by promiſing them Fees, Rewards, and Services.

15. That he cauſed a Proclamation to be made againſt Law, and in favour of the Rebels, that none of them ſhould be vexed or ſued by any, for their Offences in their Rebellion.

16. That in time of Rebellion, he ſaid, That he liked well the Actions of the Rebels; and that the Avarice of Gentlemen gave occaſion for the People to riſe; and that it was better for them to die, than to periſh for want.

17. That he ſaid, The Lords of the Parliament were loth to reform Incloſures, and other things, therefore the People had a good cauſe to reform them themſelves.

18. That after declaration of the Defaults of Bulloign, and the Pieces there, by ſuch as did ſurvey them, he would never amend the ſame.

19. That he would not ſuffer the King's Pieces of Newhaven, and Blackneſs, to be furniſhed with Men and Proviſion; albeit he was adverti ſed of the Defaults, and adviſed thereto by the King's Council; whereby the French King was emboldned to attempt upon them.

20. That he would neither give Authority, nor ſuffer Noblemen and Gentlemen to ſuppreſs Rebels in time convenient; but wrote to them to ſpeak the Rebels fair, and uſe them gently.

21. That upon the 5th of October the preſent Year, at Hampton-Court, for defence of his own private Cauſes, he procured ſeditious Bills to be written in counterfeit Hands, and ſecretly to be diſperſed into divers parts of the Realm; beginning thus, Good People; intending thereby to raiſe the King's Subjects to Rebellion and open War.

22. That the King's Privy-Council did conſult at London to come to him, and move him to reform his Government; but he hearing of their Aſſembly, declared, by his Letters in divers places, that they were high Traitors to the King.

23. That he declared untruly, as well to the King as to other young Lords attending his Perſon, That the Lords at London intended to deſtroy the King; and deſired the King never to forget, but to revenge it; and deſired the young Lords to put the King in remembrance thereof; with intent to make Sedition and Diſcord between the King and his Nobles.

24. That at divers times and places, he ſaid, The Lords of the Council at London intended to kill me; but if I die, the King ſhall die; and if they famiſh me, they ſhall famiſh him.

25. That of his own head he removed the King ſo ſuddenly from Hampton-Court to Windſor, without any proviſion there made, that he was thereby not only in great fear, but caſt thereby into a dangerous Diſeaſe.

26. That by his Letters, he cauſed the King's People to aſſemble in great numbers in Armour, after the manner of War, to his Aid and Defence.

A Letter written by the Council to the Bishops, to assure them, That the King intended to go forward in the Reformation.

By the KING.

RIght Reverend Father in God, Right trusty and well-beloved, We greet you well. Whereas the Book entituled, the Book of Common Prayers, and Administration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, after the use of the Church of England, was agreed upon, and set forth by Act of Parliament; and by the same Act commanded to be used of all Persons within this our Realm. Yet nevertheless we are informed, that divers unquiet and evil-disposed Persons, sithence the apprehension of the Duke of Somerset, have noised and bruited abroad, That they should have again their old Latin Service, their Conjured Bread and Water, with such-like vain and superfluous Ceremonies, as though the setting forth of the said Book had been the only Act of the said Duke. We therefore, by the Advice of the Body and State of our Privy-Council, not only considering the said Book to be our Act, and the Act of the whole State of our Realm assembled together in Parliament, but also the same to be grounded upon the Holy Scripture, agreeable to the Order of the Primitive Church, and much to the re-edifying of our Subjects, to put away all such vain expectation, of having the Publick Service, the Administration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies again in the Latin Tongue, which were but a preferment of Ignorance to Knowledge, and Darkness to Light, and a preparation to bring in Papistry and Superstition again; have thought good, by the Advice aforesaid, to require, and nevertheless straitly do command and charge you, That immediately upon the receipt hereof, you do command the Dean and Prebendaries of your Cathedral Church; the Parson, Vicar, or Curat, and Church-wardens of every Parish, within your Dioceſs, to bring and deliver unto you, or your Deputy, any of them for their Church or Parish, at such convenient place as you shall appoint, all Antiphonals, Missals, Graylles, Processionals, Manuels, Legends, Pies, Portuises, Journals, and Ordinals, after the use of Sarum, Lincoln, York, or any other private use: And all other Books of Service, the keeping whereof should be a lett to the using of the said Book of Common Prayers; and that you take the same Books into your hands, or into the hands of your Deputy, and them so to deface and abolish, that they never after may serve, either to any such use as they were provided for, or be at any time a lett to that godly and uniform Order, which by by a common Conſent is now ſet forth. And if you ſhall find any Perſon ſtubborn or diſobedient in not bringing in the ſaid Books, according to the tenour of theſe our Letters, that then ye commit the ſaid Perſon to Ward, unto ſuch time as you have certified us of his miſbehaviour. And we will and command you, that you alſo ſearch, or cauſe ſearch to be made, from time to time, whether any Book be withdrawn or hid, contrary to the tenour of theſe our Letters, and the ſame Book to receive into your Hands, and to uſe all in theſe our Letters we have appointed. And further, whereas it is come unto our knowledg, that divers froward and obſtinate Perſons do refuſe to pay towards the finding of Bread and Wine for the Holy Communion, according to the Order preſcribed in the ſaid Book, by reaſon whereof the Holy Communion is many times omitted upon the Sunday. Theſe are to will and command you to convent ſuch obſtinate Perſons before you, and then to admoniſh and command to keep the Order preſcribed in the ſaid Book; and if any ſhall refuſe ſo to do, to puniſh them by Suſpenſion, Excommunication, or other Cenſures of the Church. Fail you not thus to do, as you will avoid our Diſpleaſure.

Cardinal Wolſey's Letters to Rome, for procuring the Popedom to himſelf, upon Pope Adrian's death.

Ex MS. Col. Cor. C. Cant.

MY Lord of Bath, Mr. Secretary, and Mr. Hannibal, I commend me unto you in my right hearty manner; letting you wit, That by Letters lately ſent unto me from you my Lord of Bath, and Mr. Hannibal, dated at Rome the 14*th* day of September. Which Letters I incontinently ſhewed unto the King's Grace his Highneſs. And I have been adverti[ſed], to our great diſcomfort, that the ſaid 14*th* day, it pleaſed Almighty God to call the Pope's Holineſs unto his Infinite Mercy, whoſe Soul Jeſu pardon. News certainly unto the King's Grace and to me right heavy, and for the univerſal weal or quiet of Chriſtendom, (whereunto his Holineſs, like a devout and virtuous Father of Holy Church was very ſtudious) much diſpleaſant and contrarious; Nevertheleſs, conforming our ſelves to the Pleaſure of Almighty God, to whoſe Calling we all muſt be obedient; the Mind and Intention of the King's Highneſs, and of me both, is to put ſome help and furtherances, as much as conveniently may be, that ſuch a Succeſſor unto him may now, by the Holy College of Cardinals, be named and elected, as may, with God's Grace, perform, atchieve, and fulfil the good and vertuous Purpoſes and Intents, concerning the Pacification of Chriſtendom; whereunto our ſaid late Holy Father, as much as the brevity of the time did ſuffer, was, as it ſhould ſeem, minded and inclined; inclined; which thing, how neceſſary it is to the ſtate of Chriſt's Religion, now daily more and more declining, it is facile and eaſy to be conſider'd; and ſurely amongſt other Chriſtian Princes, there is none which as ye heretofore have perfectly underſtood, that to this purpoſe more dedicated themſelves to give Furtherance, Advice, and Counſel, than the Emperor and the King's Grace, who as well before the time of the laſt Vacation, as ſithence, by Mouth and by Letters, with Report of Ambaſſadors and otherwiſe, had many ſundry Conferences, Communications, and Devices, in that behalf. In which it hath pleaſed them, far above my merits, or deſerts, of their Goodneſs, to think, judg, and eſteem me to be meet and able for to aſpire unto that Dignity; perſuading, exhorting, and deſiring me, that whenſoever opportunity ſhould be given, I ſhould hearken to their Advice, Counſel, and Opinion in that behalf; and offering unto me, to interpone their Authorities, Helps, and Furtherances therein to the uttermoſt. In approbation whereof, albeit the Emperor, now being far diſtant from theſe Parts, could not, nor might in ſo brief time, give unto the King's Grace, new or freſh confirmation of his Purpoſe, Deſire, and Intent herein: Yet nevertheleſs my Lady Margaret, knowing the Inclination of his mind in this ſame, hath, by a long Diſcourſe made unto me ſemblable Exhortation; offering, as well on the Emperor's behalf, as on her own, that as much ſhall by them be done, to the furtherance thereof, as may be poſſible. Beſides this, both by your Letters, and alſo by particular moſt loving Letters of the Cardinal's de Medicis, Sanctorum Quatuor & Campegius, with credence ſhow'd unto me on their behalf, by their Folks here reſident, I perceive their good and kind minds, which they, and divers other their Friends owe unto me in that Matter. And finally, the King's Highneſs doth not ceaſe, by all the gracious and comfortable means poſſible to inſiſt, that I, for manifold, notable, urgent, and great reſpects, in any wiſe ſhall conſent that his Grace and the Emperor do ſet forth the thing with their beſt manner. The Circumſtances of whoſe moſt entire, and moſt firm mind thereunto, with their bounteous, godly, and beneficial Offers for the Weal of Chriſtendom, which his Grace maketh to me herein, were too long to rehearſe. For which Cauſes, albeit I know my ſelf far unmeet and unable to ſo high a Dignity, minding rather to live and die with his Grace in this his Realm, doing Honour, Service, Good or Pleaſure to the ſame, than now (mine old days approaching) to enter into new things; yet nevertheleſs, for the great zeal and perfect mind which I bear to the exaltation of the Chriſtian Faith; the Honour, Weal, and Quiet of the King's Grace, and the Emperor, and to do my Duty both to Almighty God and to the World, I referring every thing to God's Diſpoſition and pleaſure, ſhall not pretermit to declare unto you ſuch things, as the King's Highneſs hath ſpecially willed me to ſignify unto you on his Grace's behalf, who moſt effectually willeth and deſireth to ſet forth the ſame, omitting nothing that may be to the furtherance thereof, as his ſpecial truſt is in you.

Firſt, Ye ſhall underſtand, that the mind, and entire deſire of his Highneſs, above all earthly things, is, That I ſhould attain to the ſaid Dignity, having his perfect and firm hope, that of the ſame ſhall enſue; that in brief time, a general and univerſal Repoſe, Tranquillity, and Quietneſs in Chriſtendom; and as great Renown, Honour, Profit, and Reputation to this Realm as ever was; beſides the ſingular comfort and rejoice that the King's Grace, with all his Friends and Subjects ſhould take thereof; who might be well aſſured thereby, to compose and order their great Cauſes and Affairs, to their high Benefit, Commodity, and moſt Advantage. For this, and other great and urgent Cauſes, the Pleaſure of his Highneſs is, That like-as ye my Lord of Bath, and Mr. Hannibal, have right prudently and diſcreetly begun: ſo ye all, or as many of you as be preſent in the Court of Rome, and continue your Practices, Overtures, Motions and Labours, to bring and conduce this the King's inward Deſire to perfect end and effect.

And becauſe it is not to be doubted, but that before the receipt of theſe my Letters, ye having former Inſtructions, ſhall have far entred your Devices in this Matter, wherein the King's Grace truſteth ye do loſe no time or opportunity that poſſibly may be had; I ſhall therefore briefly and compendiouſly touch ſuch this thing, as the King's Highneſs would ye ſhould ſubſtantially note in this behalf.

One is, That albeit ye both before, and alſo now, know the King's mind and deſire herein, as is aforeſaid, taking that for your Foundation; yet nevertheleſs, foraſmuch as it appeareth by your ſaid Letters, and otherwiſe, that the Cardinal de Medicis, whoſe preferment (if this may not be had) both the King's Grace and I tendereth above all other, mindeth to experiment what may be done for himſelf, great policy and dexterity is in your Labours and Communications to be uſed, ſo that ye may firſt, by great enſearch and enquiry, perfectly underſtand, as nigh as may be, the Diſpoſition, Mind, Affection, and Inclination, as well of the ſaid Cardinal de Medicis, as of all the reſidue, if it be poſſible; which thing, well known, well ponder'd and conſider'd, ye ſhall thereby have a great light to the reſidue of your Buſineſs, wherein always ye muſt ſo order your ſelves, that the Matter appearing unto you much doubtful and uncertain, your particular practices (the deſired Intent peradventure failing) ſhall not be cauſe of diſpleaſure or unkindneſs to be noted by any that may be elected; and for your introduction herein, the King's Grace ſendeth unto you at this time two Commiſſions under his great Seal, the one couch'd under general words, without making mention of any particular Perſon; and in the other, his Highneſs hath made mention of me by ſpecial Name: Beſides that, ye ſhall receive herewith two Letters from his Grace to the College of Cardinals, with the Copies of the ſame; the one in ſpecial recommendation of me, and the other in favour of the Cardinal de Medicis; beſide ſuch other particular Letters in my recommendation to certain Cardinals, and other, as by the Copies of them herewith encloſed ye ſhall now perceive. After the receipt thereof, if the Cardinals before that time ſhall not be entred into the Conclave, ye taking your Commodity, as by your Wiſdom ſhall be thought moſt expedient, ſhall deliver unto the Cardinal de Medicis, the King's Letters, and mine to him addreſſed, ſhewing unto him, with as good words and manner as ye can, that for his great Vertue, Wiſdom, Experience, and other commendable Merits, with the entire love and favour which the King's Grace and I bear unto him, thinking and repuing him moſt meet and able to aſpire unto the Papal Dignity before other. Ye have Commandment, Commiſſion, and Inſtruction, ſpecially and moſt tenderly, to recommend him unto the whole College of Cardinals, having alſo the King's and my Letters to them in his favour; upon which Declaration ye ſhall perceive his Anſwer to be made unto you in that behalf; whereupon, and by knowledg of the Diſpoſition of the Reſidue, ye may perceive how to govern your ſelves in the delivery of the reſt of your ſaid Letters; for in caſe it may evidently appear unto you, that any of the Cardinals, to whom the King's Letters be directed, have firmly eſtabliſh'd their minds upon the ſaid Cardinal de Medicis the more circumſpection is to be uſed with any ſuch in the delivery to him of the King's Letters, and Overture of the ſecretneſs of your minds touching me; conſidering, that if the King's Intent might in no wiſe take effect for me, his Grace would, before all other, advance and further the ſaid Cardinal de Medicis. Nevertheleſs, if either by his Anſwer to be made unto you, or by other good knowledg, ye ſhall perceive that he hath ſo many Enemies herein, that of likelihood he cannot attain the ſame, ye may be the more bold to feel his mind how he is inclin'd towards me; ſaying, as indeed the King's Grace hath written unto him, That in caſe he ſhould fail thereof, the King's Highneſs would inſiſt, as much as to his Grace were poſſible, for me; which ye may ſay were in manner one thing, conſidering that both the Cardinal de Medicis and I bear one mind, zeal, and ſtudy, to the Weal and Quiet of Chriſtendom, the Increaſe and Surety of Italy, the Benefit and Advancement of the Emperor's and the King's Majeſty's Cauſes; and I being Pope, he in a manner (whom I above all Men love, truſt, and eſteem) were Pope, being ſure to have every thing according to his mind and deſire, and as much Honour to be put unto him, his Friends and Family, as might be deviſed in ſuch wiſe: That by theſe and other good words and Demonſtrations, ye may make him ſure, as I think he be, that failing for himſelf, he with all his Friends do their beſt for me; and ſeeing no likelihood for him, ye may then right-well proceed to your particular labour and practices for me, delivering the King's Letters, both to the College of Cardinals, and to the other, apart, as ye ſhall ſee the caſe then to require; and ſollicite them, by ſecret labours, alleadging and declaring unto them my poor Qualities, and how I having ſo great experience of the Cauſes of Chriſtendom, with the entire Favour which the Emperor and the King's Grace bear unto me; the knowledg alſo, and deep Acquaintance of other Princes, and of their great Affairs; the ſtudious mind that I have ever been in, both to the Surety and Weal of Italy, and alſo to the Quiet and Tranquility of Chriſtendom; not lacking, thanked be God, either Subſtance or Liberality to look largely upon my Friends; beſides the ſundry great Promotions, which by election of me ſhould be vacant, to be diſpoſed unto ſuch of the ſaid Cardinals, as by their true and faſt Friendſhip had deſerved the ſame; the loving Familiarity alſo which they ſhould find in me; and that of my Nature I am not in great diſpoſed to rigour or auſtereneſs, but can be contented, thanked be God, frankly, pleaſantly, and courteouſly, to participate, diſpoſe, and beſtow, ſuch things as I have, or ſhall come to my diſpoſition, not having any ſuch Faction, Family, or Kinſman, to whom I might ſhew any partiality in beſtowing the Promotions and Goods of the Church; and which is higheſt to be regarded, that is likely and in manner ſure, that by my means, not only Italy ſhall be put in perfect ſurety for ever, but alſo a final reſt, peace, and quiet, now moſt neceſſary eſtabliſhed betwixt all Chriſtian Princes; whereupon the greateſt and moſt notable Expedition might be made againſt the Infidels that hath been heard of many Years. For the King's Highneſs in that caſe would be contented, and hath fully promiſed, God willing, to come in Perſon, when God ſhall ſend time, unto Rome; whither alſo I ſhould not doubt to bring many more of the Chriſtian Princes, being determined, if God ſhould ſend me ſuch Grace, to expone mine own Perſon in God's Quarrel; by mean of which my preſence many things ſhould be ſtated, that for Superiority and otherwiſe, in times paſt, hath been occaſion of diſagreement amongſt Princes; Albeit peradventure the greateſt reſpect ſhall not now be had hereunto, nor this be the beſt Elective to win the Cardinals Favour; wherein you muſt therefore uſe your ſelf by your Wiſdoms, as you ſhall ſee the time, ſeaſon, and care to require; allowing them, for the removing of the Doubt in changing of the See, or ſpeedy repair thither; that after the Election once paſſed and notified to me, I would not fail, by God's Grace, within three months to be in Rome; there, and in the parts thereabout, to remain during my Life, whereof ye may make faithful aſſurance. By theſe, and other good Means and Promiſes on the King's behalf of large Rewards, which his Highneſs referreth to your diſcretion, and is contented to perform that which ye do therein. It is not to be doubted but that you ſhall obtain the Favours of many of them; ſo as if reſpect may be had to the Honour of the See Apoſtolick, and the Surety of Italy, the Tranquillity of Chriſtendom, the Defence of the ſame againſt the Infidels, the Exaltation of the Faith, the Perſecution of Chriſt's Enemies, the Increaſe and Weal of the College of Cardinals, with their Advancement and Promotion; gentle, frank, and liberal entertainment of them, and generally to the benefit of all Holy Church. The King's Grace ſuppoſeth his mind and deſire herein, with your good means, diligence, and ſollicitations, is not unlike to take good effect; wherein, for the more authority, and better conducing of your purpoſe, the pleaſure of his Grace is, That you join with the Emperor's Ambaſſadors, as fit as you may ſee and perceive them to favour this the King's Intent, like as his Grace thinketh, that according to the often Conferences, Communications, Promiſes, and Exhortations made by the Emperor to me in this behalf, and according to my ſaid Lady Margaret's deſire or offer, they have commandment to do. In the politick handling of all which Matters, the King's Highneſs putteth in you his ſpecial truſt and confidence, ſo to order your ſelf in the Premiſes, as you ſhall perceive to accord with the inward deſire of his Grace, and the ſtate and diſpoſition of the thing there; for which purpoſe his Grace hath furniſhed you at this time, jointly or ſeverally, with two ſundry Commiſſions, the one general for me, and in my favour, by the which you have ample Authority to bind and promiſe, on the King's behalf, as well gift of Promotions, as alſo as large ſums of Mony to as many, and ſuch as you ſhall think convenient; and as ſure ye may be, whatſoever ye ſhall promiſe, bind his Grace, and do in that behalf, his Highneſs will inviolably obſerve, keep and perform, the other ſpecial, as afore Letters to the College of two effects, the one for the Cardinal de Medicis, and the other for me, with other particular Letters in my favour; all which his pleasure is, That you shall use in manner and form aforesaid; that is to say, if you shall perceive the Affair of the Cardinal de Medicis to be in such perfect train, that he is like to have the same Dignity, ye then proceed to that which may be his furtherance, using nevertheless your particular labour for me, if you think it may do good, after such sort as ye shall not conceive any ingratitude or unkindness therein. And if you may see that the said Cardinal de Medicis be not in such great likelihood thereof; then considering, that as the King's Grace, and I think verily he will do his best for me, ye shall effectually set forth your practices for attaining and winning as many Friends for me as possible may be, delivering your Letters for the Intent, as you shall see cause. Wherein you being now furnished for both Purposes, and also having one of the Commissions general and indifferent, without any Person therein specially recommended, things be to be done or omitted, as you shall know to stand with the state or commodity of the Affairs there, which the Ground of the King's Mind to you now declared, shall be your best and perfect Instruction; and as you shall do or know herein, so the King's Grace desireth you often and speedily to advertise me, by your Letters, having no doubt but that his Highness will see your travels, diligence, and pains in this behalf, so to be considered, as you shall have cause to think the same well employed and bestowed.

And my Lord of Bath, as you do know well, because Mr. Pace, at the time of the last Vacation, was sent purposely from hence with Commission and Instruction for that Matter; the King, and I, supposing that upon knowledg of this News, he being at Milan, would incontinently repair unto Rome; hath therefore made the foresaid Commissions, and also this Letter to be directed unto you, jointly and severally willing you, in such substantial and discreet wise to proceed in that Matter, not forbearing any thing that may be to the furtherance thereof, as his Grace, and my special Trust, is in you: And thus most heartily fare you well. At my Mannor of Hampton Court, the 4*th* day of October.

The rest is the Cardinal's own Hand.

MY Lord of Bath, the King hath willed me to write unto you, That his Grace hath a marvellous Opinion of you; and you knowing his mind as you do, his Highness doubteth not but this Matter shall be by your Policy set forth in such wise, as that the same may come to the desired effect, not sparing any reasonable Offers, which is a thing, that amongst so many needy Persons is more regarded, than per-case the Qualities of the Person; ye be wise, and ye wot what I mean; trust your self best, and be not seduced by fair words, and specially of those which (say what they will) desire more their own preferment than mine. Howbeit great dexterity is to be used; and the King thinketh that all the Imperials shall be clearly with you, if Faith be in the Emperor. The young Men, which for the most part being needy, will give good ears to fair Offers, which shall be undoub-undoubtedly performed; the King willeth you neither to ſpare his Authority, or his good Mony, or Subſtance. You may be aſſured, whatſoever you promiſe ſhall be performed; and our Lord ſend you good ſpeed.

Your loving Friend,

Cotton Libr. Caligula E. 1

FIrſt, As touching the Place of their Meeting, the ſame to be at Calais or Bulloign, if it may be ſo brought to paſs; otherwiſe to be at ſuch convenient Place, either within our Dominion, or the French; or ſometime in the one, and ſometime the other, as may be beſt agreed upon. In the appointing whereof, we would no Ceremony to be ſo much ſticked upon, as the ſame ſhould be any occaſion of hindrance to the good ſucceſs looked for at this meeting.

Secondly, If the French Commiſſioners ſhall require Bulloign, with the Members; and all ſuch Grounds and Lands as was of late conquered by our late Father, of moſt noble memory, to be reſtored to the French King, we be pleaſed our ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall on our Name agree and aſſent thereunto; ſo as the ſaid French Commiſſioners do, and will likewiſe covenant and agree, in the Name of the ſaid French King, to any of our Requeſts hereafter enſuing.

Firſt, Our ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall demand, in recompence for Bulloign, and the Members and Grounds as aforeſaid, that the Treaties laſt made, between our ſaid Father of famous Memory, and the Realm of Scotland, may in all things be performed; and the Perſon of the young Scotch Queen delivered to us, to the intent the Marriage between us and her may be performed. They ſhall alſo demand, that the Fortifications at Newhaven and Blackneſs may be utterly ruinated, and no Fortifications made from hence-forth at any of thoſe Places. They ſhall alſo require the continuance of paiment of our perpetual Penſion, and all the Debts due unto us, by force of any former Treaties, before before the commencement of these last Wars. And this for the first degree, which if it may not be obtained, then for

The second Degree, we be pleased to accept for a Recompence, if they will covenant for performance of the said Treaties with Scotland, to deliver the Scotch Queen, and continue from henceforth the paiment of the perpetual Pension.

But if that shall also be refused, then for the third Degree, our said Commissioners shall require the continuance of paiment of our Pension, the Arrearages due by any former Treaties, between our said Father and the late French King; and that the Forts of Newhaven, Hammetve, and Blackness, may be utterly ruinated, and no new Fortifications commenced at any of the said Places hereafter.

And if this may not be obtained, then for the fourth and last Degree our Pleasure is, That our said Commissioners shall require the continuance of paiment of our said Pension, and all such Debts as were due unto our said late Father before the commencement of his last War.

In the debating and discoursing whereof, we will that our said Commissioners shall employ themselves to their uttermost, to make as good and honourable a Bargain for us, and to attain all or as much of the Premises as they may; remembring unto the French Commissioners, the great Charges sustained in these last Wars commenced by them, contrary to the former Treaties.

Touching the Place, Day, Time, and other Circumstances to be used, as well in the delivery of Bulloign, the Base Town, the Old Man, the Young Man, with the Ground, Territories, and Members, to the said Pieces, or any of them belonging; as also of paiment of such Sums of Mony as shall be agreed upon for the same; Our said Commissioners shall, by their good discretions, devise with the said French Commissioners, all such ways as they can or may think most for Our Honour and Surety: And such Overtures or Discourses as shall be made by the said French Commissioners, touching the Premises, our said Commissioners shall advertise unto Us or to our Council.

And if any Motion shall be made to have Scotland comprehended in this Peace, our said Commissioners shall say, That forasmuch as the Scots be common Enemies to Us and the Emperor, we may not assent to the comprehension of them, without the Emperor's Consent; or at the least, without such respect to our Treaties with the Emperor, and his Subjects, as the Amity between us requireth. And therefore if the Scots will covenant to stand to our Arbitrement and Judgment for all such Matters as be in difference between the said Emperor and them, we will be pleased that the Scots shall be comprehended; and one such Article, or of like effect, made for comprehension of them, as was made at the conclusion of the last Peace. And if the delivery, or razing of any Pieces, now by us possessed in Scotland, shall be required, we be pleased that our said Commissioners travelling first by all ways and means they may, to induce the other Commissioners to assent, that all the said Pieces, and the Lands by us now possessed, may remain to Us and our Heirs and Successors for ever, shall nevertheless, if that may not be received, assent in the end, that Borthwickcraig, Lauder, and Dunglass, shall be restored upon a convenient Recompence in Mony, Money, ſo as the Forts of Roxburgh and Haymouth, with their Grounds adjoining, may be covenanted to remain to us and our Succeſſors for ever.

If the French Commiſſioners ſhall make any motion of Treaty for Marriage, between us and the Lady Elizabeth, eldeſt Daughter to the French King; our ſaid Commiſſioners excuſing the preſent talk thereof, in reſpect of our young Years, and for ſuch other Cauſes as they may think good, ſhall do all that they may to cut off that Talk: But if they ſhall be much preſſed therein, in reſpect of ſuch Overtures as have been made already, our Pleaſure is, that our ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall, by general words, entertain the Talk of that Matter; and thereof, and of ſuch other Matters as ſhall be proponed touching the ſame, advertiſe Us, or our Council.

In all the Treaty it muſt be remembred, to reſerve and have ſpecial regard to the preſervation of our Treaties with the Emperor, and other our Friends.

And if it ſhall ſeem expedient to our ſaid Commiſſioners, for the better expedition of our Affairs committed to their Charge, that a Surceance or Abſtinence of Wars be granted, as well on our behalf, as on the behalf of the French King, we be pleaſed that our right truſty, and right well-beloved Couſin, the Earl of Huntingdon, our Lieutenant General of that ſide, ſhall, by the advice of our ſaid Commiſſioners, grant a Surceance or Abſtinence for ſuch time, and in ſuch manner and ſort, as by our ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall be thought beſt, ſo as the like be alſo granted on the behalf of the ſaid French King.

Finally, Our ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall advertiſe us, or our Council attendant about our Perſon, from time to time, of their Proceedings; and further do as we or our Council ſhall appoint them, either by our Letters, or the Letters of our ſaid Council accordingly.

EDWARD. R.

FIrſt, If the French Deputies require to have Roxburgh and Aymouth to be rendred unto the Scots, we will that our Commiſſioners ſhall, by all the beſt means they can deviſe, induce them to agree, that the ſaid two places may and ſhall remain to us: And in caſe the French will not ſo be perſuaded, but require ſtill to have them rendred, Our Pleaſure is, That our Commiſſioners ſhall ſtand moſt ſtifly in the denial of it, ſo far forth, that they ſhall come to the breaking of that days Talk, rather than to condeſcend unto it. And in caſe, that move not the French to relent of their Requeſt, our Commiſſioners ſhall afterwards ſend to the French Deputies to meet, or to talk again, and then they ſhall ſay, That rather than ſuch a good Work of Peace ſhould fail, they will grant to the razing and abandoning of both the ſaid Places; with ſpecial Capitulation, that neither the Scots nor the French ſhall re-fortify, nor cauſe to be re-fortified, in neither of thoſe two Places; with the like Covenant for our part, if the French Deputies do require it. Cotton Libr. Caligula E. 1

Item. We are pleaſed, that the Reſervance of our Rights and Titles, mentioned in our former Articles ſent to our ſaid Commiſſioners, be in general words, ſo as ſeverally general reſervance be made, as well for our Rights and Titles as to Scotland, as for our Matters with France.

Item. We are pleaſed, that for ſuch Sums of Mony as ſhall be agreed upon to be paid unto Us for the delivery of Bulloign, Our ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall take Hoſtages of the French, according to Our former Articles ſent unto them in that behalf; the ſaid Hoſtages to remain there, till the whole and laſt Sum ſo agreed upon be fully anſwered unto Us. And likewiſe in caſe the French Deputies will ask Hoſtages for the ſure delivery of the Town of Bulloign, with the Members, Our ſaid Commiſſioners may agree to the aſſigning of ſuch Hoſtages as ſhall be thought ſufficient for the ſame; which Hoſtages nevertheleſs ſhall not be bound to remain or continue there any longer, than till the ſaid Town is delivered; but ſhall thereupon be ſuffered to return home at their Pleaſure.

Item. Upon the Concluſion between our Commiſſioners, and the French Deputies, for the delivery of Bulloign, our pleaſure is, That the term of the delivery of the ſame be appointed, as ſhort as may be conveniently, having conſiderance to a reaſonable reſpite for the removing and ſafe conveyance away of the Artillery, Munition, Armour, and Goods belonging to Us or our Subjects, either by Sea or by Land, as ſhall be thought moſt commodious: and that our Men, departing out of the Town in the Forenoon, the French ſhall abſtain from entry into it till at three or four hours after, for avoiding the inconveniences which may chance upon the coupling of our Men with the French.

Item. Foraſmuch as Our ſaid Commiſſioners being upon the Place, can better conſider any other thing not touched in the Premiſes, concerning the manner and faſhion of the delivery of Bulloign, or retire of our Men, Artillery, and other things, other than we can do here, we are pleaſed to remit that to their Wiſdoms and Diſcretions.

Item. As for Alderney and Sark, foraſmuch as both thoſe Places are Ours, reaſon would that the French ſhould raze their Fortifications at Sark, and the Fortifications at Alderney, being lawfully done by Us upon our own Ground, to remain at our Arbitrement. That in caſe the French Deputies ſhall make no mention, neither of the one, nor of the other, We are pleaſed that our Commiſſioners ſhall alſo paſs it over in ſilence; but if the French Deputies ſhall mention the ſame, and without the razing the Fortifications at Alderney, will not condeſcend to a Peace, We are pleaſed, our Commiſſioners ſhall conclude with them upon the razing and abandoning of the one and the other of the aforeſaid Fortifications; ſtanding firſt as much in denial of the French Deputies Demands herein, as they may.

Injunctions given in the Viſitation of the Reverend Father in God, Nicholas Biſhop of London, for an Uniformity in his Dioceſs of London, in the 4th Year of our Sovereign Lord King Edward the Sixth, by the Grace of God, King of England, &c.

London, Anno Dom. 1550.

Firſt, That there be no reading of ſuch Injunctions as extolleth and ſetteth forth the Popiſh Maſs, Candles, Images, Chauntries: Regiſt. Ridl. Fol. 305. ther that there be uſed any Superaltaries, or Trentals of Com-nions.

Item. That no Miniſter do counterfeit the Popiſh Maſs, in kiſſing e Lord's Board; waſhing his Hands or Fingers after the Goſpel, or receipt of the Holy Communion; ſhifting the Book from one place another; laying down and licking the Chalice after the Commu-on; bleſſing his Eyes with the Sudarie thereof, or Patten, or croſ-ing his Head with the ſame, holding his Fore-fingers and Thumbs oined together toward the Temples of his Head, after the receiving the Sacrament, breathing on the Bread, or Chalice; ſaying the Agnus before the Communion; ſhewing the Sacrament openly before e diſtribution, or making any elevation thereof; ringing of the Sa-ring Bell, or ſetting any Light upon the Lord's Board. And finally, That the Miniſter, in the time of the Holy Communion, do uſe only e Ceremonies and Geſtures appointed by the Book of Common Prayer, and none other, ſo that there do not appear in them any coun-rfeiting of the Popiſh Maſs.

Item. That none be admitted to receive the Holy Communion, but ſuch as will, upon requeſt of the Curat, be ready, with meekneſs and reverence to confeſs the Articles of the Creed.

Item. That none make a Mart of the Holy Communion, by buying and ſelling the Receipt thereof for Mony, as the Popiſh Maſs in times paſt was wont to be.

Item. Whereas in divers places, ſome uſe the Lord's Board after the form of a Table. and ſome of an Altar, whereby Diſſention is per-ceived to ariſe among the unlearned; therefore wiſhing a godly Unity to be obſerved in all our Dioceſs; and for that the form of a Table may more move and turn the ſimple from the old ſuperſtitious Opi-nions of the Popiſh Maſs, and to the right uſe of the Lord's Supper,

We

We exhort the Curats, Church-wardens, and Queſtmen here preſent, to erect and ſet up the Lord's Board, after the form of an honeſt Table, decently covered, in ſuch place of the Quire or Chancel, as ſhall be thought moſt meet by their diſcretion and agreement, ſo that the Miniſters, with the Communicants, may have their place ſeparated from the reſt of the People: and to take down and aboliſh all other by-Altars or Tables.

Item. That the Miniſter, in the time of the Communion, immediately after the Offertory, ſhall moniſh the Communicants, ſaying theſe words, or ſuch-like, Now is the time, if it pleaſe you to remember the poor Mens Cheſt with your charitable Almes.

Item. That the Homilies be read orderly, without omiſſion of any part thereof.

Item. The Common Prayer be had in every Church upon Wedneſdays and Fridays, according to the King's Grace's Ordinance; and that all ſuch as conveniently may, ſhall diligently reſort to the ſame.

Item. That every Curat be diligent to teach the Catechiſm, whenſoever juſt occaſion is offered, upon the Sunday or Holy-day, and at leaſt every ſix weeks, once ſhall call upon his Pariſhioners, and preſent himſelf ready to inſtruct and examine the Youth of the ſame Pariſh, according to the Book of Service touching the ſame.

Item. That none maintain Purgatory, Invocation of Saints, the Six Articles, Bedrowls, Images, Reliques, Rubrick Primars, with Invocation of Saints, Juſtification of Man by his own Works, Holy Bread, Palms, Aſhes, Candles, Sepulchre Paſchal, creeping to the Croſs, hallowing of the Fire or Altar, or any other ſuch-like abuſes, and ſuperſtitions, now taken away by the King's Grace's moſt Godly Proceedings.

Item. That all Miniſters do move the People to often and worthy receiving of the Holy Communion.

Item. That every Miniſter do move his Pariſhioners to come diligently to the Church; and when they come, not to talk, or walk, in the Sermon, Communion, or Divine Service-time, but rather at the ſame to behave themſelves reverently, godly, and devoutly in the Church; and that they alſo moniſh the Church-wardens to be diligent Overſeers in that behalf.

Item. That the Church-wardens do not permit any buying, ſelling, gaming, outragious noiſe or tumult, or any other idle occupying of Youth in the Church, Church-porch, or Church-yard, during the time of Common Prayer, Sermon, or reading of the Homily.

Item. That no Perſons uſe to miniſter the Sacraments, or in open audience of the Congregation, preſume to expound the Holy Scriptures, or to preach, before they be firſt lawfully called and authoriſed in that behalf.

God ſave the King.

Dr. Oglethorp's Submiſſion and Profeſſion of his Faith.

I Did never Preach or Teach openly any thing contrary to the Doctrine and Religion ſet forth by the King's Majeſty, and authoriſed by his Grace's Laws, ſince the making and publiſhing of the ſame.

I ſuppoſe, and think his Grace's Proceedings (concerning Religion) to be good and godly, if they be uſed accordingly, as his Grace hath will'd they ſhould, by his Laws and Inſtructions.

And further, I ſuppoſe the Order and Form of Doctrine, and Religion now ſet forth by his Grace, and uſed, in many things to be better and much nearer the uſage of the Apoſtolick and Primitive Church, than it was before-times: if it be uſed godly and reverently, accordingly as I think it to be meant by his Grace's Highneſs, and his moſt Honourable Council.

Namely, in theſe things, in prohibiting that none ſhould commune alone, in making the People whole Communers, or in ſuffering them to Commune under both kinds, in the Catechiſation of young Chappies in the Rudiments of our Faith, in having the Common Prayer in Engliſh, in ſetting forth the Homilies, and many other things; which I think very good and Godly, if they be uſed as is aforeſaid.

The lately received Doctrine, concerning the Sacrament, and namely the Attribute of Tranſubſtantiation, I do not like, and I think it not conſonant to the Scriptures, and Ancient Writers; although I ſuppoſe that there is a certain and an ineffable preſence of Chriſt's Body there, which I can neither comprehend nor expreſs, becauſe it ſo far paſſes the compaſs and reach of my Wit and Reaſon; wherefore I think it ought to be both miniſtred and received with a godly and reverent fear, and not without great premeditation and examination aforeſaid, as well of the Miniſter, as of the Receiver. 1550.

Your Grace's poor well-willer, with his Prayer and Service, as he is bound,

Owing Oglethorp.

A Letter from Dr. Smith to Arch-biſhop Cranmer.

An Original.

Right honourable, and my ſpecial good Lord;

Ex MS. Col. Cor. C. Cant. I Commend me to your Grace moſt humbly, giving to the ſame thanks as I am bound, for your Grace's kindneſs toward my Sureties; for the which you have (and ſhall whiles I live) my good Word and Prayer. Ignatii Epiſtolæ adhuc extant in Gymnaſio Magdalenæ. If it might pleaſe your Lordſhip, I would very gladly ſee ſome part of your Collection againſt my Book, De Cælibatu Sacerdotum; which I wrote then to try the Truth out, not to the intent it ſhould be printed, as it was, againſt my Will. Would God I had never made it, becauſe I took then for my chief Ground, That the Prieſts of England made a Vow when they were made, which now I perceive is not true.

My Lord, I received my Cap-Caſe, &c. Sed tribus nummorum meorum partibus ſublatis; Quod damnum æquo animo eſt ferendum, quod furti revinci non poſſit, qui abſtulit. My Lord, I am glad that your Grace is reported both gentle and merciful, of all ſuch which have had to do with you for Religion of this Univerſity. For my part, if ever I may do your Grace's baſeſt Servant any pleaſure, I will do it indeed. Sed aliter, atqui ſentio, loquor, diſpeream. Ignoſcat hæc Honorandæ Dominationi tam diutinum ſilentium mihi, quippe quod crebrioribus literis poſthac penſabo. Deus optimus maximus tuam amplitudinem diu ſervet incolumem Chriſtianæ Pietati propagandæ ac provehendæ. Oxonii 28.

Articles agreed upon by the Biſhops and other Learned Men, in the Convocation held at London, in the Year 1552. for the avoiding diverſities of Opinions, and ſtabliſhing Conſent touching True Religion.

Publiſhed by the King's Authority.

With Marginal Notes of the Differences between theſe and thoſe ſet out by Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1562.

I. Of Faith in the Holy Trinity.

THere is but one living and true God everlaſting, without Body, Parts, or Paſſions; of infinite Power, Wiſdom, and Goodneſs; the Maker and Preſerver of all Things both viſible and inviſible. And in the unity of this Godhead, there are three Perſons, of one Subſtance, Power, and Eternity, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt.

II. The Word of God made very Man.

The Son, which is the Word of the Father, took Man's Nature in the Womb of the bleſſed Virgin, of her Subſtance: So that two whole and perfect Natures, that is to ſay, the God-head and Manhood were join'd together in one Perſon, never to be divided, whereof is one Chriſt, very God and very Man; who truly ſuffered, was crucified, dead, and buried, to reconcile his Father to us, and to be a Sacrifice, not only for Original Guilt, but alſo for Actual Sins of Men.

The Son, which is the Word of the Father, begotten from everlaſting of the Father, the very and eternal God, of one Subſtance with the Father: took Man's Nature in the Womb of the bleſſed Virgin, &c.

III. Of the going down of Chriſt into Hell.

As Chriſt died for us, and was buried; ſo alſo is it to be believed that he went down into Hell: * For his Body lay in the Grave till his Reſurrection, but his Soul being ſeparate from his Body, remained with the Spirits which were detained in Priſon, that is to ſay, in Hell, and there preached unto them; as witneſſeth that place of Peter.

* Theſe words were left out.

IV. The Reſurrection of Chriſt.

Chriſt did truly riſe again from Death, and took again his Body, with Fleſh, Bones, and all things appertaining to the perfection of Man's Nature, wherewith he aſcended into Heaven, and there ſitteth till he return to judg all Men at the laſt day.

Of the Holy Ghoſt.

The Holy Ghoſt, proceeding from the Father and the Son, is of one Subſtance, Majeſty, and Glory, with the Father, and the Son, very and eternal God.

V. The Doctrine of the Holy Scripture is ſufficient to Salvation.

Holy Scripture containeth all things neceſſary to Salvation, ſo that whatſoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any Man that it ſhould be believed as an Article of the Faith, or be thought neceſſary or requiſite to Salvation.

Holy Scripture containeth all things neceſſary to Salvation; So that whatſoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, although ſometimes it may be admitted by God's faithful People as pious, and conducing unto Order and Decency; yet is not to be required of any Man that it ſhould be believed as an Article of the Faith, or be thought requiſite or neceſſary to Salvation.

In the Name of the Holy Scripture we do underſtand thoſe Canonical Books of the Old and New Teſtament, of whoſe Authority was never any doubt in the Church; that is to ſay, Geneſis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joſhua, Judges, Ruth, 1*ſt of* Samuel, 2*d of* Samuel, &c. And the other Books (as Hierom ſaith) the Church doth read for example of Life, and inſtruction of Manners, but yet doth it not apply them to eſtabliſh any Doctrine; ſuch are theſe following, The 3*d of Eſdras,* the 4*th of Eſdras,* the Book of Tobias, the Book of Judeth, the reſt of the Book of Heſter, the Book of Wiſdom, &c. All the Books of the New Teſtament, as they are commonly received, we do receive and account them Canonical.

VI. The Old Teſtament is not to be rejected.

The Old Teſtament is not to be rejected, as if it were contrary to the New, but to be retained. Foraſmuch as in the Old Teſtament, as in the New, everlaſting Life is offered to Mankind by Chriſt, who is the only Mediator betwixt God and Man, being both God and Man. Wherefore they are not to be heard, who feign, that the old Fathers did look only for tranſitory Promiſes.

Although the Law given from God by Moſes, as touching Ceremonies and Rites, do not bind Chriſtian Men, nor the Civil Precepts thereof ought of neceſſity to be received in any Commonwealth; yet notwithſtanding no Chriſtian Man whatſoever is free from the Obedience of the Commandments, which are called Moral.

VII. The three Creeds.

The three Creeds, Nice Creed, Athanaſius Creed, and that which is commonly called the Apoſtles Creed, ought throughly to be received *; for they may be proved by moſt certain Warrants of the Holy Scripture.

* And believed.

* Left out.

Original Sin ſtandeth not in the following of Adam, (as the Pelagians do vainly talk, * and at this day is affirmed by ſome Anabaptiſts) but it is the Fault and Corruption of every Man, that naturally is ingendred of the Off-ſpring of Adam, whereby Man is very far gone from from Original Righteousness, and is of his own nature inclined to evil; so that the Flesh lusteth always contrary to the Spirit; and therefore in every Person born into this World it deserveth God's Wrath and Damnation. And this Infection of Nature doth remain, yea in them that are regenerated, whereby the Lust of the Flesh, called in Greek φρόνημα σαρκός, which some do expound the Wisdom, some Sensuality, some the Affection, some the desire of the Flesh, is not subject to the Law of God. And although there is no condemnation for them that believe and are baptized, yet the Apostle doth confess, that Concupiscense and Lust hath of it self the nature of Sin.

IX. Of Free-Will.

We have no power to do good Works, pleasant and acceptable to God, without the Grace of God by Christ preventing us, that we may have a good will and working with us, when we have that good Will.

The condition of Man after the Fall of Adam is such, that he cannot turn and prepare himself, by his own natural strength and good Works, to Faith and calling upon God. Wherefore we have no power to do good Works, pleasant and acceptable unto God, &c.

X. Of Grace.

The Grace of Christ, or the Holy Ghost which is given by him, doth take from Man the Heart of Stone, and giveth him a Heart of Flesh. And though it rendereth us willing to do those good Works, which before we were unwilling to do, and unwilling to do those evil Works, which before we did, yet is no violence offered by it to the Will of Man; so that no Man when he hath sinned can excuse himself, as if he had sinned against his Will, or upon constraint; and therefore that he ought not to be accused or condemned upon that account.

XI. Of the Justification of Man.

Justification by Faith only in Jesus Christ, in that sense wherein it is set forth in the Homily of Justification, is the most certain and most wholsome Doctrine for a Christian Man.

We are accounted Righteous before God only, for the merit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ by Faith, and not for our own Works or Deservings. Wherefore that we are justified by Faith, is a most wholesome Doctrine, and very full of comfort, as more largely is expressed in the Homily of Justification.

Of good Works.

Albeit the Good Works, which are the Fruits of Faith, and follow after Justification, cannot put away our Sins, and endure the severity of God's Judgment, yet are they pleasing and acceptable unto God in Christ, and do spring out necessarily of a true and lively Faith, insomuch that by them, a lively Faith may be as evidently known, as a Tree discerned by the Fruit.

XII. Works before Juſtification.

Works done before the Grace of Chriſt, and the inſpiration of his Spirit, are not pleaſant to God, foraſmuch as they ſpring not of Faith in Jeſus Chriſt; neither do they make Men meet to receive Grace, or (as the School-Authors ſay) deſerve Grace of Congruity; yea rather for that they are not done as God hath willed and commanded them to be done, we doubt not but they have the nature of Sin.

XIII. Works of Supererrogation.

Voluntary Works beſides, over and above God's Commandments, which they call Works of Supererrogation, cannot be taught without arrogancy and impiety; for by them Men do declare, that they do not only render unto God as much as they are bound to do, but that they do more for his ſake, than of bounden Duty is required; Whereas Chriſt ſaith plainly, When you have done all that are commanded to you, ſay, We are unprofitable Servants.

XIV. None but Chriſt without Sin.

Chriſt in the truth of our Nature, was made like unto us in all things, (Sin only excepted) from which he was clearly void, both in his Fleſh and in his Spirit: He came to be a Lamb without Spot, who by Sacrifice of himſelf once made, ſhould take away the Sins of the World; and Sin (as St. John ſaith) was not in him: But all we the reſt (although baptized and born in Chriſt) yet offend in many things; and if we ſay we have no Sin, we deceive our ſelves, and the Truth is not in us.

XV. Of the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

Not every deadly Sin, willingly committed after Baptiſm, is Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, and unpardonable. Wherefore the grant of Repentance is not to be denied to ſuch as fall into Sin after Baptiſm. After we have received the Holy Ghoſt, we may depart from Grace given, and fall into ſin, and by the Grace of God (we may) arife again and amend our Lives. And therefore they are to be condemned which ſay, They can no more ſin as long as they live here, or deny the place of Penance* to ſuch as truly repent.

* Place of Forgiveneſs.

XVI. The Blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

The Blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt is then committed, when a Man out of malice and hardneſs of Heart, doth wilfully reproach and perſecute in an hoſtile manner, the Truth of God's Word, manifeſtly made known unto him. Which ſort of Men, being made obnoxious to the Curſe, ſubject themſelves to the moſt grievous of all wickedneſſes; from whence this kind of Sin is called unpardonable and ſo affirmed to be by our Lord and Saviour.

XVII.

XVII. Of Predeſtination and Election.

Predeſtination unto Life, is the everlaſting Purpoſe of God, whereby (before the Foundations of the World were laid) he hath conſtantly decreed by his Counſel, ſecret unto us, to deliver from Curſe and Damnation, thoſe whom he hath choſen * out of Mankind, and to bring them by Chriſt to everlaſting Salvation, as Veſſels made to Honour. Wherefore they which be endued with ſo excellent a benefit of God, be called according to God's Purpoſe, by his Spirit working in due ſeaſon, they through Grace obey the Calling, they be juſtified freely, they are made Sons of || Adoption, they are made like the Image of * the only begotten Jeſus Chriſt; they walk religiouſly in good Works, and at length, by God's Mercy, they attain to everlaſting Felicity.

|| God by.
* His.

As the godly conſideration of Predeſtination and Election in Chriſt, is full of ſweet, pleaſant, and unſpeakable comfort to godly Perſons, and ſuch as feel in themſelves the working of the Spirit of Chriſt, mortifying the Works of the Fleſh, and their Earthly Members, and lifting up their Mind to high and heavenly Things, as well becauſe it doth greatly eſtabliſh and confirm their Faith of eternal Salvation, to be enjoyed through Chriſt, as becauſe it doth fervently kindle their Love towards God: So for curious and carnal Perſons, lacking the Spirit of Chriſt, to have continually before their Eyes the Sentence of God's Predeſtination, is a moſt dangerous downfal, whereby the Devil doth thruſt them either into deſperation, or into wretchleſneſs of moſt unclean living, no leſs perilous than deſparation.

Furthermore, * though the Decrees of Predeſtination be unknown to us, yet muſt we receive God's Promiſes in ſuch wiſe as they be generally ſet forth to us in Holy Scripture; and in our doings, that Will of God is to be followed, which we have expreſly declared unto us in the Word of God.

XVIII. Everlaſting Salvation to be obtained only in the Name of Chriſt.

They alſo are to be had accurſed, that preſume to ſay, That every Man ſhall be ſaved by the Law or Sect which he profeſſeth, ſo that he be diligent to frame his Life according to that Law, and the Light of Nature: For Holy Scripture doth ſet out unto us only the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, whereby Men muſt be ſaved.

XIX. All Men are bound to keep the Precepts of the Moral Law.

Although the Law given from God by Moſes, as touching Ceremonies and Rites, do not bind Chriſtian Men, nor the Civil Precepts thereof ought of neceſſity to be received in any Common-Wealth; yet notwithſtanding no Chriſtian Man whatſoever is free from the obedience of the Commandments which are called Moral. Wherefore they they are not to be heard which teach, that the Holy Scriptures were given to none but to the Weak, and brag continually of the Spirit, by which they do pretend, that all whatſoever they preach is ſuggeſted to them, though manifeſtly contrary to the Holy Scripture.

XX. Of the Church.

The Viſible Church of Chriſt, is a Congregation of faithful Men, in which the pure Word of God is preached, and the Sacraments be duly miniſtred, according to Chriſt's Ordinance, in all thoſe things that of neceſſity are requiſite to the ſame.

As the Church of Jeruſalem, Alexandria, and Antioch have erred, ſo alſo the Church of Rome hath erred, not only in their Livings, and manner of Ceremonies, but alſo in Matters of Faith.

XXI. Of the Authority of the Church.

The Church hath power to decree Rites and Ceremonies, and Authority in Controverſies of Faith. It is not lawful for the Church, &c.

It is not lawful for the Church to ordain any thing that is contrary to God's Word written, neither may it ſo expound one place of Scripture, that it be repugnant to another: Wherefore although the Church be a Witneſs and Keeper of Holy Writ, yet as it ought not to decree any thing againſt the ſame, ſo beſides the ſame ought it not to enforce any thing to be believed for neceſſity of Salvation.

XXII. Of the Authority of General Councils.

General Councils may not be gathered together without the Commandment and Will of Princes. And when they are gathered together, foraſmuch as they be an Aſſembly of Men, (whereof all be not governed with the Spirit and Word of God) they may err, and ſometimes have erred, even in things pertaining unto God. Wherefore things ordained by them, as neceſſary to Salvation, have neither ſtrength nor authority, unleſs it may be declared, that they be taken out of Holy Scripture.

XXIII. Of Purgatory.

The Doctrine of the School-men concerning Purgatory, Pardons, Worſhipping, and Adoration, as well of Images as of Reliques, and alſo Invocation of Saints, is a fond thing vainly invented, and grounded upon no warranty of Scripture, but rather perniciouſly repugnant to the Word of God.

XXIV. No Man to miniſter in the Church except he be called.

It is not lawful for any Man to take upon him the Office of publick Preaching, or miniſtring the Sacraments in the Congregation, before he be lawfully called and ſent to execute the ſame. And thoſe we ought to judg lawfully called and ſent, which be choſen and called to this this Work by Men, who have publick Authority given unto them in the Congregation, to call and ſend Miniſters into the Lord's Vineyard.

XXV. All things to be done in the Congregation in ſuch a Tongue as is underſtood by the People.

It is moſt fit, and moſt agreeable to the Word of God, that nothing be read or rehearſed in the Congregation, in a Tongue not known unto the People; which Paul hath forbidden to be done, unleſs there be preſent to interpret.

It is a thing plainly repugnant to the Word of God, and the cuſtom of the Primitive Church, to have publick Prayers in the Church, or to miniſter the Sacraments in a Tongue not underſtood by the People.

XXVI. Of the Sacraments.

Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt gathered his People into a Society, by Sacraments very few in number, moſt eaſy to be kept, and of moſt excellent ſignification; that is to ſay, Baptiſm, and the Supper of the Lord.

The Sacraments were not ordained of Chriſt to be gazed upon, or to be carried about, but that we ſhould duly uſe them: And in ſuch only as worthily receive the ſame, they have a wholeſome effect or operation; not as ſome ſay, Ex opera operato, which terms, as they are ſtrange and utterly unknown to the Holy Scripture, ſo do they yield a ſenſe which ſavoureth of little Piety, but of much Superſtition: but they that receive them unworthily, receive to themſelves damnation.

The Sacraments ordained by the Word of God, be not only Badges or Tokens of Chriſtian Mens Profeſſion; but rather they be certain ſure Witneſſes, effectual ſigns of Grace, and God's good Will towards us, by the which he doth work inviſibly in us; and doth not only quicken, but alſo ſtrengthen and confirm our Faith in him.

Sacraments ordained of Chriſt, be not only Badges and Tokens of Chriſtian Mens Profeſſion, but rather they be certain ſure Witneſſes, and effectual ſigns of Grace, and God's good Will towards us, by the which he doth work inviſibly in us, and doth not only quicken, but alſo ſtrengthen and confirm our Faith in him.

There are two Sacraments ordained of Chriſt our Lord in the Goſpel, that is to ſay, Baptiſm, and the Supper of the Lord.

Thoſe five commonly called Sacraments, That is to ſay, Confirmation, Penance, Orders, Matrimony, and Extream Unction, are not to be counted for Sacraments of the Goſpel, being ſuch as have grown partly of the corrupt following of the Apoſtles, partly are ſtates of Life allowed in the Scriptures, but yet have not like nature of Sacraments, with Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper, for that they have not any viſible Sign or Ceremony ordained of God.

The Sacraments were not ordained of Chriſt to be gazed on, or to be carried about, but that we ſhould duly uſe them. And in ſuch only as worthily receive the ſame, they have a wholeſome effect or operation; but they that receive them unworthily, purchaſe to themſelves damnation, as St. Paul ſaith.

Although in the Viſible Church, the Evil be ever mingled with the Good, and ſometimes the Evil have chief Authority in the miniſtration of the Word and Sacraments; yet foraſmuch as they do not the ſame in in their own Name, but in Christ's, and do minister by his Commission and Authority, we may use their Ministry both in hearing the Word of God, and in reciving of the Sacraments: Neither is the effect of Christ's Ordinance taken away by their wickedness, nor the Grace of God's Gifts diminished from such as by Faith rightly do receive the Sacrament, ministred unto them, which be effectual because of Christ's Institution and Promise, although they be ministred by evil Men.

Nevertheless it appertaineth to the Discipline of the Church, that inquiry be made after * them, and that they be accused by those that have knowledg of their Offences; and finally, being found guilty, by just Judgment be deposed.

XXVIII. Of Baptism.

Baptism is not only a sign of Profession, and mark of Difference, whereby Christian Men are discerned from others that be not Christned; but it is also a sign of Regeneration, or New Birth, whereby, as by an Instrument, they that receive Baptism rightly, are grafted into the Church; the Promises of forgiveness of sin, and of our Adoption to be the Sons of God by the Holy Ghost, are visibly signed and sealed; Faith is confirmed, and Grace increased, by virtue of Prayer unto God. * The Custom of the Church for baptising young Children, is both to be commended, and by all means to be retained in the Church.

*--The Baptism of young Children is in any wise to be retained in the Church, as most agreeable to the Institution of Christ.

XXIX. Of the Lord's Supper.

The Supper of the Lord, is not only a sign of the Love that Christians ought to have amongst themselves one to another; but rather it is a Sacrament of our Redemption by Christ's Death: Insomuch that to such as rightly, worthily, and with Faith receive the same, the Bread which we break, is a partaking of the Body of Christ, and likewise the Cup of Blessing, is a partaking of the Blood of Christ.

Transubstantiation (or the change of the Substance of Bread and Wine) in the Supper of the Lord, cannot be proved by Holy Writ; * but it is repugnant to the plain words of Scripture, and hath given occasion to many Superstitions.

*--but it is repugnant to the plain words of Scripture, overthroweth the nature of a Sacrament, and hath given occasion to many Superstitions.

Since the very Being of Humane Nature doth require, that the Body of one and the same Man, cannot be at one and the same time in many places, but of necessity must be in some certain and determinate place; therefore the Body of Christ cannot be present in many different places at the same time. And since (as the Holy Scriptures testify) Christ hath been taken up into Heaven, and there is to abide till the end of the World; it becometh not any of the Faithful to believe or profess, that there is a Real or Corporeal presence (as they phrase it) of the Body and Blood of Christ in the Holy Eucharist.

The Body of Christ is given, taken, and eaten in the Supper, only after an Heavenly and Spiritual Manner. And the mean whereby the Body of Christ is received and eaten in the Supper, is Faith.

The

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, was not by Christ's Ordinance reserved, carried about, lifted up, or worshipped.

XXIX. Of the Wicked which eat not the Body of Christ in the Lord's Supper.

The Wicked, and such as be void of a lively Faith, altho they do carnally and visibly press with their Teeth (as St. Austin saith) the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ; yet in no wise are they partakers of Christ, but rather to their condemnation do eat and drink the Sign or Sacrament of so great a thing.

XXX. Of both kinds.] The Cup of the Lord is not to be denied to the Lay-people: For both the parts of the Lord's Sacrament (by Christ's Ordinance and Commandment) ought to be ministred to all Christian People alike.

XXX. Of the one Oblation of Christ finished upon the Cross.

The Offering of Christ once made, is a perfect Redemption, Propitiation, and Satisfaction for all the Sins of the whole World, both Original and Actual, and there is none other Satisfaction for Sin but that alone: Wherefore the Sacrifices of Masses, in which it was commonly said, That the Priests did offer Christ for the Quick and the Dead, to have remission of Pain or Guilt, were * Fables, and dangerous Deceits.

* Blasphemous.

XXXI. A single Life is imposed on none by the Word of God.

Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, are not commanded by God's Law, either to vow the estate of a single Life, or to abstain from Marriage.

Therefore it is lawful for them, as for all other Christian Men, to Marry at their own discretion, as they shall judg the same to serve better to Godliness.

XXXII. Excommunicated Persons are to be avoided.

That Person which by open Denunciation of the Church, is rightly cut off from the Unity of the Church, and Excommunicated, ought to be taken of the whole Multitude of the Faithful, as an Heathen and Publican, until he be openly reconciled by Pennance, and received into the Church, by a Judg that hath Authority thereunto.

XXXIII. Of the Tradition of the Church.

It is not necessary that Traditions and Ceremonies be in all places one and utterly alike; for at all times they have been divers, and may be changed according to the diversities of Countries, Times, and Mens Manners, so that nothing be ordained against God's Word. Whosoever through his private judgment willingly and purposely doth openly break the Traditions and Ceremonies of the Church, which be not repugnant to the Word of God, and be ordained and approved by common Authority, ought to be rebuked openly, (that others may fear to do the like) as he that offendeth againſt the common Order of the Church, and hurteth the Authority of the Magiſtrate, and woundeth the Conſciences of the weak Brethren.

Every Particular or National Church, hath Authority to ordain, change or aboliſh Ceremonies or Rites of the Church, ordained only by Man's Authority, ſo that all things be done to edifying.

XXXIV. Of the Homilies.

The ſecond Book of Homilies, the ſeveral Titles whereof we have joined under this Article, doth contain a godly and wholeſome Doctrine, and neceſſary for the Times; as doth the former Book of Homilies, which were ſet forth in the time of Edward the 6*th*: and therefore we judg them to be read in Churches by the Miniſters, diligently and diſtinctly, that they may be underſtood of the People.

The Homilies lately delivered and commended to the Church of England by the King's Injunctions, do contain a godly and wholeſome Doctrine, and fit to be embraced by all Men; and for that cauſe they are diligently, plainly, and diſtinctly to be read to the People.

The Names of the Homilies.

XXXV. Of the Book of Common Prayer, and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church of England.

The Book of Conſecration of Arch-biſhops and Biſhops, and ordering of Prieſts and Deacons, lately ſet forth in the time of K. Edward the Sixth, and confirmed at the ſame time by Authority of Parliament, doth contain all things neceſſary to ſuch Conſecration and Ordering. Neither hath it any thing that of it ſelf is ſuperſtitious and ungodly; And therefore whoſoever are Conſecrated and Ordered according to the Rites of that Book, ſince the ſecond Year of the afore-named King Edward, unto this time, or hereafter ſhall be Conſecrated or Ordered, according to the ſame Rites, we decree all ſuch to be rightly, orderly, and lawfully Conſecrated and Ordered.

The Book lately delivered to the Church of England by the Authority of the King and Parliament, containing the manner and form of publick Prayer, and the Miniſtration of the Sacraments, in the ſaid Church of England; as alſo the Book publiſhed by the ſame Authority for ordering Miniſters in the Church, are both of them very pious, as to truth of Doctrine, in nothing contrary, but agreeable to the wholeſome Doctrine of the Goſpel, which they do very much promote and illuſtrate. And for that cauſe they are by all faithful Members of the Church of England, but chiefly of the Miniſters of the Word, with all thankfulneſs and readineſs of mind, to be received, approved, and commended to the People of God.

XXXVI. Of the Civil Magiſtrates.

The King of England is after Chriſt, the Supream Head on Earth of the Church of England and Ireland.

The Biſhop of Rome hath no Juriſdiction in this Realm of England.

The Civil Magiſtrate is ordained and approved by God, and therefore is to be obeyed, not only for fear of Wrath, but for Conſcience-ſake.

Civil or Temporal Laws may puniſh Chriſtian Men with Death for heinous and grievous Offences.

It is lawful for Chriſtian Men, at the Commandment of the Magiſtrate, to wear Weapons, and to ſerve in the Wars.

The Queens Majeſty hath the chief Power in this Realm of England, and other her Dominions, unto whom the chief Government of all Eſtates of this Realm, whether they be Eccleſiaſtical or Civil, in all Caſes doth appertain, and is not, nor ought to be ſubject to any Forreign Juriſdiction.

Where we attribute to the Queens Majeſty the chief Government by which Titles we underſtand the minds of ſome ſlanderous Folks to be offended: We give not to our Princes the Miniſtry, either of God's Word, or of the Sacraments; the which thing the Injunctions lately ſet forth by Elizabeth our Queen, do moſt plainly teſtify; but that only Prerogative, which we ſee to have been given always to all Godly Princes in holy Scriptures by God himſelf; that is, that they ſhould rule all Eſtates committed to their Charge by God, whether they be Eccleſiaſtical or Temporal, and reſtrain with the Civil Sword the ſtubborn and evil Doers.

The Laws of this Realm may puniſh Chriſtian Men with Death, &c.

XXXVII. The Goods of Chriſtians are not common.

The Riches and Goods of Chriſtians are not common, as touching the Right, Title, and Poſſeſſion of the ſame, as certain Anabaptiſts do falſly boaſt. Notwithſtanding every Man ought, of ſuch things as he poſſeſſeth, liberally to give Alms to the Poor, according to his Ability.

XXXVIII. It is lawful for a Chriſtian to take an Oath.

As we confeſs that vain and raſh Swearing is forbidden Chriſtian Men, by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and James his Apoſtle; ſo we judg that Chriſtian Religion doth not prohibit, but that a Man may ſwear when the Magiſtrate requireth, in a Cauſe of Faith and Charity, ſo it be done according to the Prophet's teaching, in Juſtice, Judgment, and Truth.

XXXIX. The Resurrection of the Dead is not past already.

The Resurrection of the Dead is not past already, as if it belonged only to the Soul, which by the Grace of Christ is raised from the Death of Sin, but is to be expected by all Men in the last Day: for at that time (as the Scripture doth most apparently testify) the Dead shall be restored to their own Bodies, Flesh and Bones; to the end that Man, according as either righteously or wickedly he hath passed this Life, may, according to his Works, receive Rewards or Punishments.

XL. The Souls of Men deceased, do neither perish with their Bodies, nor sleep idely.

They who maintain that the Souls of Men deceased, do either sleep, without any manner of sense, to the Day of Judgment, or affirm that they die together with the Body, and shall be raised therewith at the last Day, do wholly differ from the Right Faith, and Orthodox Belief, which is delivered to us in the Holy Scriptures.

XLI. Of the Millenarians.

They who endeavour to revive the Fable of the Millenarians, are therein contrary to the Holy Scriptures, and cast themselves down headlong into Jewish Dotages.

XLII. All Men not to be saved at last.

They also deserve to be condemned, who endeavour to restore that pernicious Opinion, That all Men (though never so ungodly) shall at last be saved; when for a certain time, appointed by the Divine Justice, they have endured punishment for their Sins committed.

Instructions given by the King's Highneſs, to his right truſty and right well-beloved Couſin and Counſellor, Francis Earl of Salop, and Lord Preſident of his Grace's Council, reſident in the North Parts; and to all others hereafter named and appointed by his Highneſs to be of his ſaid Council, to be obſerved by the ſaid Counſellors, and every of them, according as the ſame hereafter is declared.

FIrſt, His Majeſty much deſiring the Quietneſs and good Governance of the People and Inhabitants in the North Parts of this Realm of England, and for the good, ſpeedy, and indifferent adminiſtration of Juſtice to be there had, betwixt Party and Party, intending to continue in the ſaid North Parts, his Right Honourable Counſel, called, The King's Majeſty's Council in the North Parts. And his Highneſs knowing the approved Wiſdom and Experience of his ſaid Couſin, with his aſſured diſcretion and dexterity in the Execution of Juſtice, hath appointed him to be Lord Preſident of the ſaid Council; and by theſe Preſents doth give unto him the Name of Lord Preſident of the ſaid Council, with Power and Authority to call together all ſuch as be, or hereafter ſhall be, named and appointed to be of the ſaid Council at all times, when he ſhall think expedient: And otherwiſe by his Letters, to appoint them, and every of them, to do ſuch things for the Advancement of Juſtice, and for the repreſſion and puniſhment of Malefactors, as by the Advice of ſuch of the ſaid Council as then ſhall be preſent with him, he ſhall think meet, for the furtherance of his Grace's Affairs, and for the due Adminiſtration of Juſtice between his Highneſs Subjects. Ex MS. Dr. Johnſon.

And further, his Majeſty giveth unto the ſaid Lord Preſident, by theſe Preſents, a Voice Negative in all Councils, where things ſhall be debated at length for the bringing forth of a moſt perfect Truth or Sentence, which his Highneſs would have obſerved in all Caſes that may abide Adviſement and Conſultation, to the intent that doubtful Matters ſhould as well be maturely conſulted upon, as alſo that the ſame ſhould not paſs without the conſent and order of the ſaid Lord Preſident.

And his Highneſs willeth and commandeth, that all and every of the ſaid Councellors, named and to be named hereafter, ſhall exhibit and uſe to the ſaid Lord Preſident, all ſuch Honour, Reverend Behaviour, and Obedience, as to their Duty appertaineth; and ſhall receive and execute in like ſort, all the Precepts and Commandments to them, or any of them, for any Matter touching his Majeſty, to be addreſſed, or any Proceſs to be done or ſerved in his Grace's Name.

And his Highneſs Pleaſure is, That the ſaid Lord Preſident ſhall have the keeping of his Grace's Signet, therewith to Seal Letters, Proceſſes, and all ſuch other things as ſhall be thought convenient by the ſaid Lord

Lord Preſident, or by two of the Council, being bound by thoſe Articles, to daily attendance upon the ſaid Lord Preſident, with his aſſent thereunto.

And to the intent the ſaid Lord Preſident thus eſtabliſhed, for the above-ſaid Purpoſes, may be furniſhed with ſuch Numbers and Aſſiſtants, as be of Wiſdom, Experience, Gravity, and Truth, meet to have the Name of his Grace's Councellors; his Majeſty, upon good adviſement and deliberation, hath elected thoſe Perſons, whoſe Names enſue hereafter, to be his Counſellors, joined in the ſaid Council in the North Parts, with the ſaid Lord Preſident; that is to ſay, The right Truſty and well-beloved Couſins, Henry Earl of Weſtmoreland, Henry Earl of Cumberland; his right Truſty and well-beloved Cuthbert Biſhop of Dureſm; William Lord Dacres of the North; John Lord Conyers; Thomas Lord Wharton; John Hind Kt. one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Common-Pleas; Edmond Moleneux Kt. Serjeant at Law; Henry Savel Kt. Robert Bowes Kt. Nicholas Fairfax Kt. George Conyers Kt. Leonard Becquith Kt. William Babthorp Kt. Anthony Nevill Kt. Thomas Gargrave Kt. Robert Mennel Serjeant at Law; Anthony Bellaſis Eſquire; John Rockely Doctor of Law; Robert Chaloner, Richard Morton, and Thomas Eymis, Eſquires.

And his Highneſs, by theſe Preſents, doth appoint the ſaid Thomas Eymis to be Secretary to the ſaid Council, diligently and obediently to exerciſe the ſame Room as he ſhall be appointed by the ſaid Lord Preſident, or by two of the Council, whereof the one to be of the Quorum, with the aſſent of the Lord Preſident. And his Highneſs Pleaſure is, That the ſaid Lord Preſident, and two others of the ſaid Council, being of the Quorum, ſhall be ſworn Maſters of the Chancery, to the intent that every of them may take recogniſance in ſuch Caſes, as by the ſaid Lord Preſident, or by two of the ſaid Council, being of the Quorum, ſhall be thought convenient, and the Caſe ſo requiring. All which number of Councellors before ſpecified, as his Majeſty doubteth not but that they, and every of them, according to his Grace's expectation and truſt repoſed in them, will be, at all times, diligent and willing towards, and ready to do unto his Grace ſuch Service as they can deviſe or imagine may be beſt to his contentation, and to the diſcharge of their Duties towards his Highneſs, leaving apart all Reſpects and Affections in all Matters that may touch their higheſt Kinſman, Friend, Servant, Tenant, or others, when the ſame ſhall come in queſtion before the ſame Lord Preſident or Council. So his Grace truſteth that every of the ſame will have ſuch regard to Malefactors as appertaineth, and to bring all ſuch unto the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council, when they ſhall be thereunto appointed, or may otherwiſe do it of themſelves; informing the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council of their Offences, as the ſame ſhall happen, in place where they have Rule and Authority, within the limits of their Commiſſion.

And forſomuch as it ſhould be very chargeable to many of the ſaid Councellors, if they ſhould continually attend upon the ſaid Lord Preſident & Council, therfore his Highneſs, of his Grace's Goodneſs, minding to eaſe that Charge, and to inſtruct every of the ſaid Councellors how to demean themſelves for their Attendance; that is, to wit, who ſhall be be bound to continual Attendance upon the ſame Council, and who ſhall attend but at times moſt requiſite, at their pleaſures, unleſs the ſame Lord Preſident ſhall require them to remain for a time, for ſome weighty Affairs or Purpoſes; the which Requeſts in ſuch Caſes, every of them ſhall accompliſh. His Majeſty therefore ordaineth that his Couſins, the Earls of Weſtmoreland and Cumberland, the Biſhop of Dureſme, the Lord Dacres, the Lord Conyers, the Lord Wharton, Sir John Bland, Sir Edmond Molineux, Sir Henry Savell, Sir Nicholas Fairfax, George Conyers, Anthony Nevil, Knights; Robert Mennel Serjeant at Law; Anthony Bellaſis, John Rockbey Doctor of Law, and Richard Norton, ſhall not be bound to continual Attendance, but to go and come at their pleaſures, unleſs they be required by the ſaid Lord Preſident to remain with him for a time, for ſome weighty and great Cauſes which then they ſhall accompliſh.

And further, his Grace's Pleaſure is, that they ſhall be preſent at ſuch of the general Sittings as ſhall be kept near unto their dwelling Places, and at other Sittings and Places, where they ſhall be commanded by the ſaid L. Preſident, all Excuſes ſet apart as appetaineth. And becauſe it ſhall be convenient that a Number ſhall be continully abiding with the ſaid L. Preſident, with whom he may conſult and commit the Charge and Hearing of ſuch Matters as ſhall be exhibited unto him for the more expedition of the ſame, his Highneſs, by theſe Preſents, doth ordain, that Sir Robert Bowes, Sir William Babthorp, Sir Leonard Beckwith, Sir Thomas Gargrave, Knights; Robert Chaloner, and Thomas Eyre Secretary, Eſquires, ſhall give their continual attendance on the ſaid Lord Preſident, or at the leaſt two of them; and that none of them, appointed to continual Attendance on the ſaid Lord Preſident, ſhall depart at any time from him, without his ſpecial Licence, and the ſame not to exceed above ſix weeks at one ſeaſon.

And his Highneſs, by theſe Preſents, for the better entertainment of the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council of both ſorts, when they are, or any of them ſhall be preſent, doth give a yearly Stipend of 1000 l. by the Year to the ſaid Lord Preſident, towards the Furniture of the Diet of himſelf and the reſt of the ſaid Councellors, with ſuch number of Servants as hereafter ſhall be appointed and allowed to every of them; that is, to wit, every Knight, being bound to continual Attendance, four Servants; and every Eſquire, being bound to like Attendance, three Servants. And his Highneſs ordaineth every of the ſaid Counſellors, to ſit with the ſaid Lord Preſident at his Table, or in ſome other place in his Houſe, to be by him conveniently prepared for their Degrees and Behaviours; and their Servants allowed, as is before ſaid, to have Sitting and Diet in the ſaid Lord Preſident's Hall, or in ſome other convenient place in his Houſe.

And further, his Highneſs, of his meer Goodneſs, and great Benignity, for the better entreatment, as well of ſuch of the ſaid Council as be not well able to forbear their own Affairs, and attend upon the ſaid Council, without further help for the charge of the Horſemeat and Lodgings, when they ſhall attend in Council to ſerve his Highneſs. As for ſuch others that might better themſelves with their Learning and Policies, if they were not detained there about his Grace's Affairs, doth by theſe Preſents limit and appoint, to divers of the the aforesaid Councellors hereafter named, certain particular Fees, as ensueth; that is to say, To Sir Robert Bowes Kt. in respect of his Attendance, and towards his Horse-meat and other Charges, an hundred Merks yearly; to Sir William Babthorp Kt. for the like, 50 l. yearly; to Sir Leonard Becquith, for the like causes, an 100 Merks yearly; to Sir Thomas Gargrave Kt. for the like, 50 l. yearly; to Robert Chaloner Esquire, for the like, 50 l. yearly; to Richard Norton Esq; for his Fee, 40 l. to Thomas Eymis Secretary, for the like yearly Fee, 33 l. 6 s. 8 d. And further, his Grace doth appoint one Messenger to serve the said Council, who shall give continual attendance upon the said Lord President, and have his Meat, Drink, and Lodging, in the said Lord Presidents House, and to have yearly for his Fee, 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. And further, his Grace's pleasure is, That the said 1000 l. for the Lord President, and all the said other Fees, shall be paid yearly at the Feasts of the Annunciation of our Lady, and St. Michael the Arch-Angel, by even Portions, of the Revenues of his Grace's Lands in those parts; and that for that purpose an Assignment and Warrant to be made to the Receiver General of his Grace's Revenues there.

And to furnish the said Lord President and Council in all things with Authority sufficient to execute Justice, as well in Causes Criminal, as in Matters of Controversy between Party and Party, his Majesty hath commanded and appointed two Commissions to be made out, under his Grace's Great Seal of England, by virtue whereof they shall have full Power and Authority in either Case, to proceed as the Matter occurrent shall require.

And for the more speedy expedition to be used in all Causes of Justice, his Majesty's Pleasure is, That the said Lord President and Council, shall cause every Complainant and Defendant that shall have to do before them, to put and declare their whole Matter in their Bill of Complaint and Answer, without Replication, Rejoinder, or other Plea or Delay to be had or used therein; which Order the said L. President and Council shall manifest unto all such as shall be Counsellors in any Matter to be intreated and defined before them; charging and commanding the said Councellors and Pleaders to observe this Order, upon such Penalties as they shall think convenient, as they will eschew the danger of the same; and not in any ways to break it, without the special License of the said Lord President, and that only in some special Causes.

And further, his Highness, by these Presents, doth give full Power and Authority to the said Lord President and Council, as well to punish such Persons as in any thing shall neglect, contemn, or disobey their Commandments, or the Process of the Council, as all other that shall speak seditious Words, invent Rumors, or commit such-like Offences, (not being Treason) whereof any Inconvenience might grow, by Pillory, cutting their Ears, wearing of Papers, Imprisonment, or otherwise at their Discretions. And the said L. President and Council, at their discretions, shall appoint Counsellors, and other Requisites, to poor Suitors having no Mony, without paying Fees or other things for the same. And his Highness giveth full Power and Authority to the said L. President & Council being with him, or four of them at the least; whereof the said L. President, Sir John Hind, Sir Edmond Molineux, Sir Robert Bowes,

Sir

Sir Leonard Becquith, Sir Anthony Nevill, Sir Thomas Gargrave, Knights; Robert Mennell, and Robert Chaloner, to be two with the Lord Preſident, to aſſeſs Fines of all Perſons that ſhall be convict or indicted of any Riot, how many ſoever they be in number, unleſs the Matter of ſuch Riot ſhall be thought unto them of ſuch importance, as the ſame ſhall be meet to be ſignified unto his Majeſty, to be puniſhed in ſuch ſort, by the Order of his Council attending upon his Grace's Perſon, as the ſame may be noted for an example to others. And his Grace giveth full Power and Authority to the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council, or four of them at the leaſt, whereof the Lord Preſident and two others bound to continual Attendance, to be three, to Award and Aſſeſs Coſts and Dammages, as well to the Plaintiffs as to the Defendants, by their diſcretions, and to award execution of their Decrees and Orders; and to puniſh the breakers of the ſame, being Parties thereunto, by their diſcretions: All which Decrees and Orders, the Secretary ſhall be bound incontinently, upon the promulgation of the ſame, to write, or cauſe to be written, in one fair Book, which ſhall remain in the Hands and Cuſtody of the ſaid Lord Preſident.

And to the intent it may appear to all Perſons there, what Fees ſhall be paid and taken for all Proceſſes and Writings to be uſed by the ſaid Council, his Majeſty therefore appointeth, that there ſhall be a Table affixed in every place where the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council ſhall ſit, at any Seſſions; and a like Table to hang openly, that all Men may ſee it, in the Office where the ſaid Secretary and the Clerks ſhall commonly ſit and expedite the ſaid Writings; wherein ſhall be declared what ſhall be paid for the ſame. That is to ſay, For every Recogniſance, wherein one alone or more ſtandeth bounden, 12 d. For the cancelling of every like Recogniſance, 12 d. For the entring of every Decree, 6 d. for the Copy of the ſame, if it be asked, 6 d. For every Letter, Commiſſion, Attachment, or other Precept or Proceſs ſent to any Perſon, 4 d. For every Diſmiſſion before the ſaid Council (if it be asked) 4 d. For the Copies of Bills, and Anſwers, and other Pleas, for every ten lines, reaſonably writ, 1 d. For the Examination of every Witneſs, 4 d. And his Grace's Pleaſure is, That the Examination of Witneſſes, produced in Matters before the ſaid Council, ſhall be examined by ſuch diſcreet Perſon and Perſons, as ſhall be thought convenient and meet by the ſaid Lord Preſident, and two of the ſaid Council, bound to continual Attendance; and that the ſaid Lord Preſident, with ſuch-like two of the ſaid Council, ſhall reform, appoint, and allow ſuch Perſons to write Bills, Anſwers, Copies, or other Proceſs in that Court, as they ſhall think convenient, over and beſide the ſaid Secretary and his two Clerks; which Clerks alſo, the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council ſhall reform and correct, as they ſhall have cauſe and occaſion. In which Reformation and Appointments, the ſaid Lord Preſident ſhall have a Voice Negative.

And for the more certain and brief determination of Matters in thoſe parts, his Majeſty, by theſe Preſents, ordaineth, that the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council ſhall keep four general Sittings or Seſſions in the Year, every of them to continue by the ſpace of one whole Month; whereof one to be at York; another at Kingſton upon Hull; one at New-Caſtle; and another at Dureſme; within the limits whereof, the Matters rising there shall be ordeted and decreed, if they conveniently so may be. And they shall, in every of the same Places, keep one Goal Delivery; before their departure from thence, his Grace nevertheless referring it to their Discretions, to take and appoint such other Place and Places for their said four general Sittings, as they, or the said Lord President, with three of the Council, bounden to continual Attendance, shall think most convenient for the time and purpose; so that they keep the full term of one Month in every such place, if they may in any wise conveniently so do.

And forsomuch as a great number of his Majesty's Tenants and Farmers have been heretofore retained with sundry Persons by Wages, Livery, Badg, or Connysance; by reason whereof, when his Grace should have had service of them, they were rather at Commandment of other Men, than (according to their Duties of Allegiance) of his Highness of whom they have their Livings; his Majesty's Pleasure, and express Commandment is, That none of his said Council, nor others, shall by any means retain or entertain any of his Grace's Tenants, or Farmers in such sort, as they, or any of them, should account themselves bounden to do him or them any other Service, than as to his Highness Officers, having Office, or being appointed in Service there: unless the same Farmers and Tenants be continually attendant in the House of him that shall retain them. And the said Lord President and Council, shall, in every their General Sittings, give special notice and charge, That no Nobleman, nor other, shall retain any of the said Tenants and Farmers, otherwise than is aforesaid. Charging also the said Farmers and Tenants, upon pain of the forfeiture of their Farms and Holds, and incurring of his Majesty's further Displeasure and Indignation, in no wise to agree to any such Retainers, other than is beforesaid, but wholly to depend upon his Highness, and upon such as his Highness hath, or shall appoint to be Officers, Rulers, or Directors over them.

And his Grace's Pleasure further is, That in every such Sitting, and in all other Places where the said Lord President and Council shall have any notable Assemblies before them, they shall give strait Charge and Commandment to the People, to conform themselves in all things to the observation of such Laws, Ordinances, and Determinations, as be made, passed, and agreed upon by his Grace's Parliament touching Religion, and the most Godly Service, set forth in their own Mother Tongue, for their Comforts: And likewise to the Laws touching the abolishing of the usurped and pretended Power of the Bishop of Rome, whose Abuses they shall so beat into their Heads, by continual inculcation, as they may smell and understand the same; and may perceive the same to be declared with their Hearts, and not with their Tongues only for a Form.

And likewise they shall declare the Order and Determination taken and agreed upon, for the abrogation of certain vain Holy Days, being appointed by the Bishop of Rome to blind the World; and to persuade the same, that they might make Saints at their pleasures; and thereby, through idleness, do give occasion of the increase of many and great Vices and Inconveniences: which Points his Majesty doth earnestly require, and straitly command, the said Lord President and Council, to set forth with with all dexterity, and to puniſh extreamly, for example, all Offenders in the ſame.

And his Majeſty willeth the ſaid Council, as he doubteth not but they will moſt earneſtly ſet forth all ſuch other Things and Matters, as for the confirmation of the People in thoſe Matters, and other the King's Majeſty's Proceedings, and things convenient to be remembred, be, or ſhall be ſet forth or deviſed, and ſent unto them for that purpoſe.

Further, his Highneſs Pleaſure is, That the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council ſhall, from time to time, make diligent inquiſition of the wrongful taking in and incloſing of Commons, and other Grounds, and who be extream therein; and in taking and exacting of unreaſonable Fines and Greſſomes, and overing or raiſing of Rents; and to call the Parties that have ſo evil uſed themſelves therein before them; and leaving all Reſpects and Affections apart, they ſhall take ſuch order for the Redreſſes of Enormities uſed in the ſame, as the poor People be not oppreſſed; but that they may live after their Sorts and Qualities.

And if it ſhall chance that the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council ſhall vary in Opinion, either in the Law, or for any Order to be taken in any Matter or Fact before them, if the caſe be of very great Weight and Importance, then the Opinion of the greater, or more part of the number of Counſellors appointed to give continual attendance, ſhall take place, and determine the Doubt; and if they be of like number of Counſellors, bounden to continual attendance, then that Party whereunto the Lord Preſident ſhall give his Aſſent, ſhall be followed and take place. And if the Caſe and Matter be of great Importance, and the Queſtion of the Law, then the Lord Preſident and Council ſhall ſignify the Caſe and Matter to the Judges at Weſtminſter, who ſhall, with diligence, advertiſe them again of their Opinions therein. And if the Matter be of great Importance, and an Order to be taken upon the Fact, then the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council, attendant upon his Perſon upon the ſame, whereupon they ſhall have knowledg again how to uſe themſelves in that behalf.

And the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council ſhall take ſpecial regard, upon complaint of Spoil, Extortions, or Oppreſſions, to examine the ſame ſpeedily, that the Party grieved may have due and undelayed Remedy and Reſtitution. And for want of Ability in the Offenders thereunto, they to be puniſhed to the Example of others. And if any Man, of what degree ſoever he be, ſhall, upon a good, lawful, and reaſonable Cauſe or Matter, and ſo appearing to the Lord Preſident and Council, by Information, or otherwiſe, demand Surety of Peace or Juſtice againſt any great Lord or Nobleman of that Country, the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council ſhall, in that caſe, grant the Petition of the pooreſt Man, againſt the richeſt or greateſt Lord, being of the Council or no, as they ſhould grant the ſame (being lawfully asked) againſt Men of the meaneſt ſort, degree, and behaviour.

And foraſmuch as it may chance, the ſaid Lord Preſident to be ſometime diſeaſed, that he ſhall not be able to travel, for the direction of ſuch Matters as then ſhall occur; or to be called to the Parliament, or otherwiſe wiſe to be imployed in the King's Majeſty's Affairs, or about other Buſineſs, for good Reformation or Order within his Rule, or for other reaſonable cauſe by his diſcretion; To the intent therefore that the ſaid Council may be and remain ever full and perfect, and that they may be at all times in the ſame, one Perſon to direct and uſe all things in ſuch and the ſame order, ſort, and form, as the ſaid Lord Preſident ſhould and might do, by virtue of the afore-ſaid's Commiſſions, and theſe Injunctions, his Majeſty's Pleaſure is, That when the ſaid Lord Preſident ſhall be ſo diſeaſed, abſent, or letted, as is before-ſaid, that he cannot conveniently ſupply his room himſelf, that then he ſhall name and appoint one of the ſaid Commiſſioners, being appointed, to give continual attendance, to ſupply his Room for that ſeaſon, during his ſaid Diſeaſe, Abſence, or Lett; and ſhall deliver the Signet to the Perſon ſo appointed to keep, during the ſame time. And the King's Highneſs, during the ſame time, giveth unto the ſaid Perſon ſo appointed, the Name of Vice-Preſident; which Name nevertheleſs he ſhall no longer continue, than during the time that the ſaid Lord Preſident ſhall ſo be ſick, abſent, or letted, as is before-ſaid. And his Majeſty's Pleaſure is, That for the time only, that any of the ſaid Council, as is before-ſaid, ſhall occupy the ſaid Room and Place as a Vice-Preſident, that all the reſt of the Council ſhall in all things uſe him in like ſort, and with like reverence, as they be bound by thoſe Injunctions to uſe the Lord Preſident himſelf; whereunto his Grace doubteth not but every of them will conform themſelves accordingly.

And further, his Majeſty by theſe Preſents giveth full Power and Authority to the ſaid Lord Preſident and Council, That when the Condition of any Recogniſance taken before them ſhall be fulfilled, they ſhall, in open Court, cauſe the ſame to be cancelled for the diſcharge of the Parties: Provided that no Recogniſance be in any wiſe cancelled but before the Lord Preſident, or Vice-Preſident, and three others at the leaſt, ſitting in open Court with him.

The reſt are wanting.

The Memorial of the Charge committed by the King's Majeſty to Sir Richard Moriſon Kt. his Majeſty's Ambaſſador with the Emperor, the 24th of September.

An Original.

FIrſt, You Sir Richard Moriſon ſhall, with all diligence, procure Audience of our good Brother the Emperor; and at your acceſs to him, deliver our Letters of Credence herewith ſent to you, with our moſt hearty Commendations, and earneſt Declaration, That we be moſt glad to have underſtanding of his good Eſtate and Health. After the ſame Delivery and Salutation, you ſhall further ſay, That we underſtanding his good and honourable Advancement towards his Low Countries, to the great comfort of the ſame. And having alſo the ſame love and good-will towards the proſperous ſucceſs of his ſaid Countries, that our late Father, and our other Progenitors have had theſe many Years paſſed, have willed you expreſly in our Names, to congratulate this his coming thitherward, and to ſhew him, that the good Succeſs which We wiſh to him, and his Affairs and Enterpriſes, as much as We would to our Selves, and our own Countries and Patrimonies. Galba. B. 12.

Item. When you ſhall have opened thus much, with as good words as you may deviſe, ye ſhall begin to deſcend to this that followeth, uſing therein your earneſtneſs and frankneſs, as ye ſhall ſee by the former ſayings, occaſion given to you by our ſaid Brother's Acceptation thereof, either by his good Words, or other behaviour in his Geſture. Ye ſhall ſay, that where we have lately underſtood of the great Murders, Spoils, and Cruelties done and committed, both in Hungary, and upon the Coaſts of Naples, and in other parts of Italy, by the Turks, the old common Enemy to the Name and Religion of all Chriſtianity. Likeas We cannot but from our very Heart lament the ſame, ſo We will, for our part, as may be thought expedient for the Weal-publick of Chriſtendom, ſhew our ſelf willing to accord with our ſaid good Brother, and other Chriſtian Princes and States, for the repulſe of the ſaid Turk. And if any ſuch good means may, by the great Wiſdom and Policy of our ſaid good Brother the Emperor, be thought good and deviſed, to bring the ſame to ſome good purpoſe and effect; We for our part will ſhew our Self ſo ready and well-willing thereto, as our ſaid good Brother ſhall well percieve, that We have not only that Zeal to the Conſervation and Surety of Chriſtendom, which in a Chriſtian Prince is duly required; but alſo ſuch conſideration and regard to our ſaid good Brother, and our ancient Amity with the Houſe of Burgundy, as to Honour and Reaſon appertaineth.

Thus much being declared in ſuch good ſort, as you ſhall ſee occaſion doth require; We would that you ſhould ſtay and pauſe awhile, as it were, looking for ſome anſwer to be made hereto by our ſaid good Brother;

Brother; and if you ſhall perceive he taketh it in thankful part, then may you entertain the Talk modeſtly, with ſuch good words as may ſeem to your Wiſdom beſt to confirm our good Affection to the continuance of the Amity, and our great Offence and Grief, with the entry of the Turks in Chriſtendom.

And if you ſhall perceive that the Emperor doth in ſo good part receive this our Overture, that he ſhall ſhew himſelf willing to enter any further Talk, or deviſe for the further proceeding in the ſame, you may, as of your ſelf, ſhew your readineſs and good-will to do all that you any ways well may, as a good Miniſter, for the bringing this purpoſe to ſome profitable effect; which you may ſay, in your own Opinion, ſhall the better take good entry and ſucceſs, if by ſome ſpecial Man to be ſent hither, We might underſtand more fully Our ſaid good Brother's Mind in this Matter.

Item. If ye ſhall perceive that the Emperor doth not regard this Overture, either in not liking the Matter it ſelf, or not ſo regarding our Amity as Reaſon would, and as it is on our part offered, then may you uſe your ſelf more coldly, and diminiſh the declaration of Our earneſtneſs, in like ſort as Our ſaid Brother ſheweth himſelf; and conclude, that thus having done the Meſſage committed to your Charge, you will leave the conſideration hereof to him as he ſhall think good.

And if in the opening of the Premiſes, Our ſaid Brother ſhall make any mention or interpretation againſt the French King, referring the Turks Invaſions to the ſaid French King as ſome occaſion thereof; and ſo ſhall demand, directly or indirectly, whether this our Overture be meant to extend againſt the French King, or any others of Chriſtian Name that ſhall join in League or Amity with the ſaid Turks. You may thereto ſay, That you had no more in charge preſently than ye have ſaid; and therefore for further opening of our Mind therein, you think the ſame might be beſt had here.

And if at any time of this your Talk, our ſaid Brother ſhall gather occaſion to ask you, What We will do for giving Aid againſt theſe Invaſions made by the French King upon the Low Countries? You may anſwer, you have nothing to ſay therein, but that you think the Anſwer that was declared to his Ambaſſador here reſident upon the Letters ſent to Us from our good Siſter the Queen of Hungary, hath both been ſignified to him long before his time; and alſo as ye truſt in reaſon contented Her. And in this Point, although ye know what was anſwered, yet would we not ye ſhould enter into the diſpute thereof, meaning in this and the reſt of things to be treated with Our ſaid Brother, that ye would rather procure the ſending of ſome ſpecial Man hither, than to treat any thing by his Ambaſſador here, who hitherto hath not appeared the fitteſt Man to encreaſe or enlarge the Amity betwixt Us and Our ſaid Brother.

Finally, Our Pleaſure is, That you ſhall, in the execution of this preſent Charge, wholly extend your good Policy and Wiſdom, to mark and well-adviſe all ſuch words of moment, as the Emperor ſhall utter to you in this Talk, by what Order, Behaviour, Geſture, or other paſſion of Joy or Grief the ſame ſhall be ſpoken, ſo as We may ſimply ſimply, plainly, and very orderly have the true Declaration thereof from you; wherein We deſire ſo expreſs and ſpecial a Report of this Matter, as upon the ſame We may better conceive what ſhall be expedient to be further done in this, and other our weighty Affairs.

A Letter written by B. Ridley, ſetting out the Sins of that Time.

To his Well-beloved, the Preachers within the Dioceſs of London.

After hearty Commendations, having regard, eſpecially at this time, to the Wrath of God, who hath plagued us diverſly, and now with extream puniſhment of ſudden Death poured upon us, for Cauſes certain, known unto his high and ſecret Judgment, and as may ſeem unto Man for our wicked living; daily encreaſing unto ſuch ſort, that not only in our Converſations the Fear of God is, alas, far gone from before our Eyes, but alſo the World is grown into that uncharitableneſs, that one, as it appeareth plainly, goeth about to devour another; moved with inſatiable Covetouſneſs, both contrary to God's Word and Will, and to the extream peril and damnation of Chriſt's Flock, bought ſo dearly with his precious Blood, and to the utter deſtruction of this whole Common-Wealth, except God's Anger be ſhortly appeaſed: wherein, as according to my bounden Duty I ſhall, God willing, in my own Perſon be diligent and labour; ſo I exhort and require you, firſt in God's Name, and by authority of him committed unto me in that behalf, and alſo in the King's Majeſty's Name, from whom I have Authority and ſpecial Commandment thus to do, That as you are called to be ſetters forth of God's Word, and to expreſs in your livings the ſame, ſo now in your Exhortations and Sermons, you do moſt wholeſomely and earneſtly tell unto Men their Sins, Juxta illud annuncia populo meo ſcelera eorum, with God's Puniſhments lately poured upon us for the ſame, now before our Eyes; and ſpecially to beat down and deſtroy, with all your Power and Wit, that greedy and devouring Serpent of Covetouſneſs, that doth ſo now univerſally reign: calling upon God for Repentance, and provoking to Common Prayer, and Amendment of life, with moſt earneſt Petitions, that hereby God's Hands may be ſtaied, the World amended, and Obedience of Subjects, and Faithfulneſs of Miniſters declared accordingly. Thus I bid you heartily well to fare. From London, July 25. 1551. Regiſt. Ridl. Fol. 239.

Bishop Ridley's Letter to the Protector, concerning the Visitation of the University of Cambridg.

Right Honourable,

I Wish your Grace the holy and wholesome Fear of God, because I am persuaded your Grace's Goodness to be such unfeignedly, that even wherein your Grace's Letters doth sore blame me, yet in the same the advertisement of the Truth shall not displease you Grace; and also perceiving that the cause of your Grace's discontentation was wrong Information, therefore I shall beseech your Grace to give me leave to shew your Grace, wherein it appeareth to me that your Grace is wrong informed.

Your Grace's Letters blameth me, because I did not (at the first, before the Visitation began, having knowledg of the Matter) shew my Mind; the Truth is, Before God, I never had, nor could get any fore-knowledg of the Matter, of the uniting of the two Colleges, before we had begun, and had entred two days in the Visitation, and that your Grace may plainly thus well perceive.

A little before Easter, I being at Rochester, received Letters from Mr. Secretary Smith, and the Dean of Pauls, to come to the Visitation of the University, and to make a Sermon at the beginning thereof; whereupon I sent immediately a Servant up to London, to the Dean of Pauls, desiring of him to have had some knowledg of things there to be done, because I thought it meet that my Sermon should somewhat have savoured of the same.

From Mr. Dean I received a Letter, instructing me only, That the cause of the Visitation was, to abolish Statutes and Ordinances, which maintained Papistry, Superstition, Blindness and Ignorance; and to establish and set forth, such as might further God's Word and good Learning; and else, the Truth is, he would shew me nothing, but bad me be careless, and said, There was Informations how all things was for to be done; the which, I take God to Witness, I did never see, nor could get knowledg what they were, before we were entred in the Visitation two days, although I desired to have seen them in the beginning.

Now, when I had seen the Instructions, the Truth is, I thought peradventure, the Master and Company would have surrendred up their College; but when their consent, after labour and travel taken therein two days, could not be obtained, and then we began secretly to consult (all the Commissioners thinking it best that every Man should say his Mind plainly, that in execution there might appear but one way to be taken of all) there when it was seen to some, that without the consent of the present Incumbents, by the King's absolute Power, we might proceed to the uniting of the two Colleges, I did, in my course simply and plainly declare my Conscience, and that there only secretly, among our selves alone, with all kind of softness, so that no Man could be juſtly offended. Alſo, I perceive, by your Grace's Letters, I have been noted of ſome for my barking there; and yet to bark, leſt God ſhould be offended, I cannot deny, but indeed it is a part of my Profeſſion, for God's Word condemneth the dumb Dogs that will not bark and give warning of God's Diſpleaſure.

As for that that was ſuggeſted to your Grace, that by my aforeſaid barking, I ſhould diſhonour the King's Majeſty, and diſſuade others from the Execution of the King's Commiſſion, God is my Judg, I intended, according to my Duty to God and the King, the maintenance and defence of his Highneſs Royal Honour and Dignity. If that be true, that I believe is true, which the Prophet ſaith, Honor Regis Judicium diligit; and as the Commiſſioners muſt needs, and I am ſure will all teſtify, that I diſſuaded no Man, but contrariwiſe, exhorted every Man (with the quiet of other) to ſatisfy their own Conſcience; deſiring only, that if it ſhould otherwiſe be ſeen unto them, that I might, either by my abſenſe or ſilence, ſatisfy mine. The which my plainneſs, when ſome, otherwiſe than according to my expectation did take, I was moved thereupon (both for the good Opinion I had, and yet have, in your Grace's Goodneſs; and alſo ſpecially, becauſe your Grace had commanded me ſo to do) to open my mind, by my private Letters, freely unto your Grace.

And thus I truſt your Grace perceiveth now, both that anon, after knowledg had, I did utter my Conſcience; and alſo that the Matter was not opened unto me before the Viſitation was two days begun.

If in this I did amiſs, that before the knowledg of the Inſtructions, I was ready to grant to the Execution of the Commiſſion; Truly, I had rather herein acknowledg my Fault, and ſubmit my ſelf to your Grace's Correction, then after knowledg had, then wittingly and willingly commit that thing whereunto my Conſcience doth not agree, for fear of God's diſpleaſure.

It is a Godly Wiſh that is wiſhed in your Grace's Letters, that Fleſh, and Blood, and Country, might not more weigh with ſome Men than Godlineſs and Reaſon; but the truth is, Country in this Matter (whatſoever ſome Men do ſuggeſt unto your Grace) ſhall not move me; and that your Grace ſhall well perceive, for I ſhall be as ready, as any other, firſt thence to expel ſome of my own Country, if the Report which is made of them can be tried true.

And as for that your Grace ſaith of Fleſh and Blood, that is, the favour or fear of Mortal Man. Yea, marry Sir, that is a Matter of weight indeed, and the truth is, (alas my own feebleneſs) of that I am afraid; but I beſeech your Grace, yet once again, give me good leave, wherein here I fear my own frailty, to confeſs the Truth.

Before God, there is no Man this day, (leaving the King's Majeſty for the Honour only excepted) whoſe favour or diſpleaſure I do either ſeek or fear, as your Grace's favour or diſpleaſure; for of God, both your Grace's Authority, and my bound Duty for your Grace's Benefits bind me ſo to do. So that if the deſire of any Man's favour, or fear of diſpleaſure, ſhould weigh more with me than Godlineſs and Reaſon.

Truly, if I may be bold to ſay the Truth, I muſt needs ſay, that I am moſt in danger to offend herein, either for deſire of your Grace's favour, or for fear of your Grace's diſpleaſure. And yet I ſhall not ceaſe (God willing) daily to pray God ſo to ſtay and ſtrengthen my frailty with holy Fear, that I do not commit the thing for favour or fear of any mortal Man, whereby my Conſcience may threaten me with the loſs of the favour of the Living God, but that it may pleaſe him, of his gracious Goodneſs, (howſoever the World goes) to blow this in the Ears of my Heart, Deus diſſipavit oſſa eorum qui Hominibus placuerint. And this, Horrendum eſt incidere in manus Dei viventis. And again, Nolite timere eos qui occidunt corpus.

Wherefore I moſt humbly beſeech your Grace, for God's Love, not to be offended with me, for renewing of this my Suit unto your Grace, which is that whereunto my Conſcience cannot well agree; if any ſuch thing chance in this Viſitation, I may, with your Grace's Favour, have licenſe, either by mine abſence or ſilence, or other-like means, to keep my Conſcience quiet. I wiſh your Grace, in God, honour, and endleſs felicity. From Pembrook-hall in Cambridg, June 1. 1549.

The Protector's Anſwer to the former Letter.

Ex Chartophylac. Regio.

AFter our right hearty Commendations to your Lordſhip, we have received your Letters of the firſt of June, again replying to thoſe which we laſt ſent unto you. And as it appeareth, ye yet remaining in your former Requeſt, deſires, if things do occur ſo, that, according to your Conſcience, ye cannot do them, that you might abſent your ſelf, or otherwiſe keep ſilence. We would be loth any thing ſhould be done by the King's Majeſty's Viſitors, otherwiſe than Right and Conſcience might allow and approve: And Viſitation is to direct things to the better, not to the worſe; to eaſe Conſciences, not to clog them. Marry, we would wiſh that Executors thereof ſhould not be ſcrupulous in Conſcience, otherwiſe than Reaſon would. Againſt your Conſcience, it is not our Will to move you, as we would not gladly do, or move any Man to that which is againſt Right and Conſcience; and we truſt the King's Majeſty hath not in this Matter. And we think in this ye do much wrong, and much diſcredit the other Viſitors, that ye ſhould ſeem to think and ſuppoſe, that they would do things againſt Conſcience. We take them to be Men of that Honour and Honeſty, that they will not. My Lord of Canterbury hath declared unto us, that this maketh partly a Conſcience unto you, that Divines ſhould be diminiſhed. That can be no cauſe; for, firſt, the ſame was met before in the late King's Time, to unite the two Colleges together; as we are ſure ye have heard, and Sir Edward North can tell: And

And for that cauſe, all ſuch as were Students of the Law, out of the new-erected Cathedral Church, were diſappointed of their Livings, only reſerved to have been in that Civil College. The King's Hall being in manner all Lawyers, Canoniſts were turned and joined to Michael-Houſe, and made a College of Divines, wherewith the number of Divines was much augmented, Civillians diminiſhed. Now at this preſent alſo, if in all other Colleges, where Lawyers be by the Statutes, or the King's Injunctions, ye do convert them, or the more part of them, to Divines, ye ſhall rather have more Divines upon this change than ye had before. The King's College ſhould have ſix Lawyers; Jeſus College ſome; the Queen's College, and other, one or two apiece. And as we are informed, by the late King's Injunctions, every College in Cambridg one at the leaſt; all theſe together do make a greater in number, than the Fellows of Clare-Hall be, and they now made Divines, and the Statutes in that Reformed Divinity ſhall not be diminiſhed in number of Students, but encreaſed, as appeareth, although theſe two Colleges be ſo united. And we are ſure ye are not ignorant, how neceſſary a Study that Study of Civil Law is to all Treaties with Forreign Princes and Strangers, and how few there be at this preſent to do the King's Majeſty's Service therein. For we would the encreaſe of Divines, as well as you. Marry, Neceſſity compelleth us alſo to maintain the Science; and we require you, my Lord, to have conſideration how much you do hinder the King's Majeſty's Proceedings in that Viſitation, if now you, who are one of the Viſitors, ſhould thus draw back and diſcourage the other, ye ſhould much hinder the whole Doings; and peradventure that thing known, maketh the Maſter and Fellows of Clare-Hall to ſtand the more obſtinate; wherefore we require you to have regard of the King's Majeſty's Honour, and the quiet performings of that Viſitation, moſt to the Glory of God, and Benefit of that Univerſity; the which thing is only meant in your Inſtructions. To the performing of that, and in that manner, we can be content you uſe your Doings as ye think beſt, for the quieting of your Conſcience. Thus we bid you right-heartily farewel. From Richmond, the 10*th* of June, 1549.

Your loving Friend,

E. Somerſet.

A Letter of Cranmer's to King Henry the 8th, concerning a further Reformation, and againſt Sacrilege.

Ex Chartophylac. Regio.

IT may pleaſe your Highneſs to be advertiſed; that foraſmuch as I might not tarry my ſelf at London, becauſe I had appointed, the next day after that I departed from your Majeſty, to be at Rocheſter, to meet the next Morning all the Commiſſioners of Kent at Sittingbourn; therefore the ſame Night that I returned from Hampton-Court to Lambeth, I ſent for the Biſhop of Worceſter incontinently, and declared unto him all your Majeſty's Pleaſure, in ſuch things as your Majeſty willed me to be done. And firſt, where your Majeſty's Pleaſure was, to have the Names of ſuch Perſons as your Highneſs, in times paſt, appointed to make Laws Eccleſiaſtical for your Grace's Realm. The Biſhop of Worceſter promiſed me, with all ſpeed, to enquire out their Names, and the Book which they made, and to bring the Names, and alſo the Book, unto your Majeſty; which I truſt he hath done before this time.

And as concerning the ringing of Bells upon Allhallow-day at Night, and covering of Images in Lent, and creeping to the Croſs, he thought it neceſſary that a Letter of your Majeſty's Pleaſure therein, ſhould be ſent by your Grace unto the two Arch-Biſhops; and we to ſend the ſame to all other Prelats within your Grace's Realm. And if it be your Majeſty's Pleaſure ſo to do, I have for more ſpeed herein drawn a Minute of a Letter, which your Majeſty may alter at your Pleaſure. Nevertheleſs, in my Opinion, when ſuch things be altered or taken away, there would be ſet forth ſome Doctrine therewith, which ſhould declare the Cauſe of the Aboliſhing or Alteration, for to ſatisfy the Conſcience of the People: For if the Honouring of the Croſs, as creeping and kneeling thereunto, be taken away, it ſhall ſeem to many that be ignorant, that the Honour of Chriſt is taken away, unleſs ſome good teaching be ſet forth withal to inſtruct them ſufficiently therein; which if your Majeſty command the Biſhops of Worceſter and Chicheſter, with other your Grace's Chaplains to make, the People ſhall obey your Majeſty's Commandment willingly; giving thanks to your Majeſty that they know the Truth, which elſe they would obey with murmuration and grutching. And it ſhall be a ſatisfaction unto all other Nations, when they ſhall ſee your Majeſty do nothing but by the Authority of God's Word, and to the ſetting forth of God's Honour, and not diminiſhing thereof. And thus Almighty God keep your Majeſty in his Preſervation and Governance. From my Manor at Beckisbourn, the 24*th* of January, 45.

Your Graces moſt bounden Chaplain

POSTSCRIPT.

I Beſeech your Majeſty, that I may be a Suitor unto the ſame, for your Cathedral Church of Canterbury; who to their great unquietneſs, and alſo great Charges, do alienate their Lands daily, and as it is ſaid, by your Majeſty's Commandment. But this I am ſure, that other Men have gotten their beſt Lands, and not your Majeſty. Wherefore this is mine only Suit, That when your Majeſty's Pleaſure ſhall be to have any of their Lands, that they may have ſome Letter from your Majeſty, to declare your Majeſty's Pleaſure, without the which they be ſworn, that they ſhall make no Alienation. And that the ſame Alienation be not made at other Mens pleaſures, but only to your Majeſty's Uſe. For now every Man that liſt to have any of their Lands, makes ſuit to get it into your Majeſty's Hands; not that your Majeſty ſhould keep the ſame, but by Sale, or Gift from your Majeſty, to tranſlate it from your Grace's Cathedral Church unto themſelves.

The Draught of a Letter which the King was to ſend to Cranmer, againſt ſome ſuperſtitious Practices.

To the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury.

FOraſmuch as you, as well in your own Name, as in the Name of the Biſhops of Worceſter and Chicheſter, and other our Chaplains and Learned Men, whom We appointed with you to peruſe certain Books of Service, which We delivered unto you, moved Us, that the Vigil, and ringing of Bells all the Night long upon Alhallow-day at Night, and the covering of Images in the Church in the time of Lent, with the lifting up the Veil that covereth the Croſs upon Palm-Sunday, with the kneeling to the Croſs at the ſame time, might be aboliſhed and put away, for the Superſtition, and other Enormities and Abuſes of the ſame. Firſt, Foraſmuch as all the Vigils of our Lady, and the Apoſtles, and all other Vigils, which in the beginning of the Church were Godly uſed; yet for the manifold Superſtition and Abuſes which after did grow, by means of the ſame, they be many Years paſt taken away throughout all Chriſtendom, and there remaineth nothing but the name of the Vigil in the Calendar, the thing clearly aboliſhed and put away, ſaving only upon Alhallows-day at Night; upon which Night is kept Vigil, Watching, and ringing of Bells all the Night long. Foraſmuch as that Vigil is abuſed as other Vigils were, Our pleaſure is, as you require, That the ſaid Vigil ſhall be aboliſhed as the other be, and that there ſhall be no watching, nor ringing, but as be commonly uſed upon other Holy-days at Night. We be contented and pleaſed alſo, That the Images in Churches ſhall not be covered, as hath been accuſtomed in times paſt; nor no Veil upon the Croſs; nor no kneeling thereto upon Palm-Sunday, nor any other time.

time. And foraſmuch as you make no mention of creeping to the Croſs, which is a greater abuſe than any of the other; for there you ſay, Crucem tuam adoramus Domine; and the Ordinal ſaith, Procedant Clerici ad crucem adorandum nudis pedibus: And after followeth in the ſame Ordinal, Ponatur Crux ante aliquod Altare, ubi a populo adoretur; which by your own Book, called, A Neceſſary Doctrine, is againſt the Second Commandment. Therefore Our Pleaſure is, That the ſaid creeping to the Croſs ſhall likewiſe ceaſe from hence-forth, and be aboliſhed, with the other Abuſes before rehearſed. And this We will, and ſtraitly command you, to ſignify unto all the Prelats and Biſhops of your Province of Canterbury, charging them, in Our Name, to ſee the ſame executed, every one in his Dioceſs, accordingly.

JANE by the Grace of God, Queen of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and of the Church of England, and alſo of Ireland, under Chriſt in Earth the Supream Head. To all our moſt Loving, Faithful, and Obedient Subjects, and to every of them, Greeting. Whereas our moſt dear Couſin Edward the 6*th*, late King of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith; and in Earth, Supream Head, under Chriſt, of the Church of England, and Ireland; by his Letters Patents, ſigned with his own Hand, and ſealed with his Great Seal of England, bearing date the 21*ſt* day of June, in the ſeventh Year of his Reign; in the preſence of the moſt part of his Nobles, his Councellors, Judges, and divers other grave and ſage Perſonages, for the profit and ſurety of the whole Realm, thereto aſſenting and ſubſcribing their Names to the ſame, hath, by the ſame his Letters Patents, recited, That foraſmuch as the Imperial Crown of this Realm, by an Act made in the 35*th* Year of the Reign of the late King, of worthy memory, King Henry the 8*th*, our Progenitor, and great Uncle, was, for lack of Iſſue of his Body lawfully begotten; and for lack of Iſſue of the Body of our ſaid late Couſin King Edward the 6*th*, by the ſame Act, limited and appointed to remain to the Lady Mary his eldeſt Daughter, and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten: And for default of ſuch Iſſue, the Remainer thereof to the Lady Elizabeth, by the Name of the Lady Elizabeth his ſecond Daughter, and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten; with ſuch Conditions as ſhould be limited and appointed by the ſaid late King of worthy memory, King Henry

Henry the 8*th*, our Progenitor, our Great Uncle, by his Letters Patents under his Great Seal, or by his laſt Will in writing, ſigned with his Hand. And foraſmuch as the ſaid Limitation of the Imperial Crown of this Realm being limited, as is afore-ſaid, to the ſaid Lady Mary, and Lady Elizabeth, being illegitimate, and not lawfully begotten, for that the Marriage had, between the ſaid late King, King Henry the 8*th*, our Progenitor, and Great Uncle, and the Lady Katherine, Mother to the ſaid Lady Mary; and alſo the Marriage had between the ſaid late King, King Henry the 8*th*, our Progenitor, and Great Uncle, and the Lady Ann, Mother to the ſaid Lady Elizabeth, were clearly and lawfully undone, by Sentences of Divorce, according to the Word of God, and the Eccleſiaſtical Laws; and which ſaid ſeveral Divorcements, have been ſeverally ratified and confirmed by Authority of Parliament, and eſpecially in the 28*th* Year of the Reign of King Henry the 8*th*, our ſaid Progenitor, and Great Uncle, remaining in force, ſtrength, and effect, whereby, as well the ſaid Lady Mary, as alſo the ſaid Lady Elizabeth, to all Intents and Purpoſes, are, and been clearly diſabled, to ask, claim, or challenge the ſaid Imperial Crown, or any other of the Honours, Caſtles, Manours, Lordſhips, Lands, Tenements, or other Hereditaments, as Heir or Heirs to our ſaid late Couſin King Edward the 6*th*, or as Heir or Heirs to any other Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, as well for the Cauſe before rehearſed, as alſo for that the ſaid Lady Mary, and Lady Elizabeth, were unto our ſaid late Couſin but of the half Blood, and therefore by the Ancient Laws, Statutes, and Cuſtoms of this Realm, be not inheritable unto our ſaid late Couſin, although they had been born in lawful Matrimony; as indeed they were not, as by the ſaid Sentences of Divorce, and the ſaid Statute of the 28*th* Year of the Reign of King Henry the 8*th*, our ſaid Progenitor, and Great Uncle, plainly appeareth. And foraſmuch alſo, as it is to be thought, or at the leaſt much to be doubted, that if the ſaid Lady Mary, or Lady Elizabeth, ſhould hereafter have, or enjoy the ſaid Imperial Crown of this Real, and ſhould then happen to marry with any Stranger born out of this Realm, that then the ſaid Stranger, having the Government and Imperial Crown in his Hands, would adhere and practiſe, not only to bring this Noble, Free Realm into the Tyranny and Servitude of the Biſhops of Rome, but alſo to have the Laws and Cuſtoms of his or their own Native Country or Countries, to be practiſed and put in ure within this Realm, rather than the Laws, Statutes, and Cuſtoms here of long time uſed; whereupon the Title of Inheritance, of all and ſingular the Subjects of this Realm do depend, to the peril of Conſcience, and the utter ſubverſion of the Common-Weal of this Realm: Whereupon our ſaid late dear Couſin, weighing and conſidering within himſelf, which ways and means were moſt convenient to be had for the ſtay of the ſaid Succeſſion, in the ſaid Imperial Crown, if it ſhould pleaſe God to call our ſaid late Couſin out of this tranſitory Life, having no Iſſue of his Body. And calling to his remembrance, that We, and the Lady Katherine, and the Lady Mary, our Siſters (being the Daughters of the Lady Frances, our natural Mother, and then, and yet, Wife to our natural and moſt loving Father, Henry Duke of Suffolk; and the Lady Margaret, Daughter of the Lady Elianor, then deceaſed, Siſter to the ſaid Lady Frances, and the late Wife of our Couſin Henry Earl of Cumberland) were very nigh of his Grace's Blood, of the part of his Fathers ſide, our ſaid Progenitor, and Great Uncle; and being naturally born here, within the Realm. And for the very good Opinion our ſaid late Couſin had of our ſaid Siſters and Couſin Margarets good Education, did therefore, upon good deliberation and advice herein had, and taken, by his ſaid Letters Patents, declare, order, aſſign, limit, and appoint, that if it ſhould fortune himſelf, our ſaid late Couſin King Edward the Sixth, to deceaſe, having no Iſſue of his Body lawfully begotten, that then the ſaid Imperial Crown of England and Ireland, and the Confines of the ſame, and his Title to the Crown of the Realm of France; and all and ſingular Honours, Caſtles, Prerogatives, Privileges, Preheminencies, and Authorities, Juriſdictions, Dominions, Poſſeſſions, and Hereditaments, to our ſaid late Couſin K. Edward the Sixth, or to the ſaid Imperial Crown belonging, or in any wiſe appertaining, ſhould, for lack of ſuch Iſſue of his Body, remain, come, and be to the eldeſt Son of the Body of the ſaid Lady Frances, lawfully begotten, being born into the World in his Life-time, and to the Heirs Males of the Body of ſuch eldeſt Son lawfully begotten; and ſo from Son to Son, as he ſhould be of vicinity of Birth of the Body of the ſaid Lady Frances, lawfully begotten, being born into the World in our ſaid late Couſin's Life-time, and to the Heirs Male of the Body of every ſuch Son lawfully begotten. And for default of ſuch Son born into the World in his life-time, of the Body of the ſaid Lady Frances, lawfully begotten; and for lack of Heirs Males of every ſuch Son lawfully begotten, that then the ſaid Imperial Crown, and all and ſingular other the Premiſes, ſhould remain, come, and be to us, by the Name of the Lady Jane, eldeſt Daughter of the ſaid Lady Frances, and to the Heirs Males of our Body lawfully begotten, and for lack of ſuch Iſſue, then to the Lady Katherine aforeſaid, our ſaid ſecond Siſter, and the Heirs Male of her Body lawfully begotten, with divers other Remainders, as by the ſame Letters Patents more plainly and at large it may and doth appear. Sithence the making of our Letters Patents, that is to ſay, on Thurſday, which was the 6th day of this inſtant Month of July, it hath pleaſed God to call unto his infinite Mercy, our ſaid moſt dear and entirely beloved Couſin, Edward the Sixth, whoſe Soul God pardon; and foraſmuch as he is now deceaſed, having no Heirs of his Body begotten; and that alſo there remaineth at this preſent time no Heirs lawfully begotten, of the Body of our ſaid Progenitor, and great Uncle, King Henry the Eighth; And foraſmuch alſo as the ſaid Lady Frances, our ſaid Mother, had no Iſſue Male begotten of her Body, and born into the World, in the life-time of our ſaid Couſin King Edward the Sixth, ſo as the ſaid Imperial Crown, and other the Premiſes to the ſame belonging, or in any wiſe appertaining, now be, and remain to us, in our Actual and Royal Poſſeſſion, by Authority of the ſaid Letters Patents: We do therefore by theſe Preſents ſignify, unto all our moſt loving, faithful, and obedient Subjects, That like-as we for our part ſhall, by God's Grace, ſhew our Self a moſt gracious and benign Sovereign Queen and Lady to all our good Subjects, in all their juſt and lawful Suits and Cauſes; and to the uttermoſt of our Power, ſhall preſerve and maintain God's moſt Holy Word, Chriſtian Policy, and the good Laws, Cuſtoms, and Liberties of theſe our Realms and Dominions: ſo we miſtruſt not, but they, and every of them, will again, for their parts, at all Times, and in all Caſes, ſhew themſelves unto Us, their natural Liege Queen and Lady, moſt faithful, loving, and obedient Subjects, according to their bounden Duties and Allegiance, whereby they ſhall pleaſe God, and do the things that ſhall tend to their own preſervation and ſureties; willing and commanding all Men, of all Eſtates, Degrees, and Conditions, to ſee our Peace and accord kept, and to be obedient to our Laws, as they tender our Favour, and will anſwer for the contrary at their extream Perils. In witneſs whereof, we have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patents. Witneſs our Self, at our Tower of London, the tenth day of July, in the firſt Year of our Reign.

God ſave the Queen.

Ex MS. Norfolcianis in Col. Creſham.

DAughter, I heard ſuch tidings this day, that I do perceive (if it be true) the time is near that Almighty God will provide for you, and I am very glad of it, for I truſt that he doth handle you with a good Love; I beſeech you agree to his Pleaſure with a merry Heart, and be you ſure, that without fail he will not ſuffer you to periſh, if you beware to offend him. I pray God, you good Daughter, to offer your ſelf to him; if any pangs come to you, ſhrive your ſelf, firſt make your ſelf clean; take heed of his Commandments, and keep them as near as he will give you Grace to do, for then are you ſure armed. And if this Lady do come to you, as it is ſpoken, if ſhe do bring you a Ketter from the King, I am ſure, in the ſelf-ſame Letter, you ſhall be commanded what you ſhall do. Anſwer you with few words, obeying the King your Father in every thing, ſave only that you will not offend God, and loſe your Soul, and go no further with Learning and Diſputation in the Matter; and whereſoever, and in whatſoever Company you ſhall come, obey the King's Commandments, ſpeak few words, and meddle nothing. I will ſend you two Books in Latin, one ſhall be, de Vita Chriſti, with the Declaration of the Goſpels; and the other, the Epiſtles of St. Hierome, that he did write always to Paula and Euſtochium, and in them truſt you ſhall ſee good things. And ſometimes, for your Recreation, uſe your Virginals, or Lute, if you have any. But one thing ſpecially I deſire you, for the Love that you owe unto God and unto me, to keep your Heart with a chaſte Mind, and your Body from all ill and wanton Company, not thinking or deſiring any Huſband, for Chriſt's Paſſion; neither determine your ſelf to any manner of living, until this troubleſome time be paſt, for I dare make you ſure, that you ſhall ſee a very good end, and better than you can deſire. I would God, good Daughter, that you you did know with how good a Heart I do write this Letter unto you: I never did one with a better, for I perceive very well, that God loveth you, I beſeech him of his goodneſs to continue it: And if it ſhall fortune that you ſhall have no Body to be with you of your Acquaintance, I think it beſt you keep your Keys your ſelf, for whoſoever it is, ſo ſhall be done as ſhall pleaſe them. And now you ſhall begin, and by likelihood I ſhall follow, I ſet not a ruſh by it, for when they have done the uttermoſt they can, then I am ſure of the amendment, I pray you recommend me unto my good Lady of Salisbury, and pray her to have a good Heart, for we never come to the Kingdom of Heaven, but by Troubles. Daughter, whereſoever you become, take no pain to ſend to me, for if I may I will ſend to you.

By your loving Mother,

Katherine the Queen.

A humble Submiſſion made by Queen Mary to her Father. Anno 1536.

An Original.

MOſt humbly proſtrate before the Feet of your moſt excellent Majeſty, your moſt humble, faithful, and obedient Subject, which hath ſo extreamly offended your moſt gracious Highneſs, that mine heavy and fearful Heart dare not preſume to call you Father, nor your Majeſty hath any cauſe by my deſerts, ſaving the benignity of your moſt bleſſed Nature, doth ſurmount all Evils, Offences, and Treſpaſſes, and is ever merciful and ready to accept the Penitent, calling for Grace in any convenient time. Having received, this Thurſday at Night, certain Letters from Mr. Secretary, as well adviſing me to make my humble ſubmiſſion immediately to your Self; which becauſe I durſt not, without your gracious Licenſe, preſume to do before, I lately ſent unto him; as ſignifying that your moſt merciful Heart, and fatherly Pity, had granted me your Bleſſing, with condition, that I ſhould perſevere in that I had commenced and begun, and that I ſhould not eſt-ſoons offend your Majeſty by the denial or refuſal of any ſuch Articles and Commandments, as it may pleaſe your Highneſs to addreſs unto me, for the perfect trial of my Heart and inward Affection. For the perfect declaration of the bottom of my Heart and Stomach. Cotton Libr. Otho. C. 20.

Firſt, I acknowledg my ſelf to have moſt unkindly and unnaturally offended your moſt excellent Highneſs, in that I have not ſubmitted my ſelf to your moſt juſt and vertuous Law. And for mine Offences therein, which I muſt confeſs were in me a thouſand fold more grievous than they could be in any other living Creature, I put my ſelf wholly and entirely to your gracious Mercy, at whoſe hand I cannot receive that puniſhment for the ſame that I have deſerved.

Secondly, To open mine Heart to your Grace, in theſe things which I have heretofore refuſed to condeſcend unto, and have now written with mine own hand, ſending the ſame to your Highneſs herewith, I ſhall never beſeech your Grace to have pity and compaſſion of me, if ever you ſhall perceive that I ſhall privily or apertly vary or alter from one piece of that I have written and ſubſcribed, or refuſe to confirm, ratify, or declare the ſame, where your Majeſty ſhall appoint me.

Thirdly, As I have, and ſhall, knowing your excellent Learning, Vertue, Wiſdom, and Knowledg, put my Soul into your direction; and by the ſame hath, and will in all things from henceforth direct my Conſcience, ſo my Body I do wholly commit to your Mercy, and Fatherly Pity, deſiring no State, no Condition, nor no meaner degree of living, but ſuch as your Grace ſhall appoint me: knowledging and confeſſing, That my State cannot be ſo vile, as either the extremity of Juſtice would appoint unto me, or as mine Offences have required or deſerved.

And whatſoever your Grace ſhall command me to do, touching any of theſe Points, either for things paſt, preſent, or to come, I ſhall as gladly do the ſame, as your Majeſty ſhall command me. Moſt humbly therefore beſeeching your Mercy, moſt gracious Soveraign Lord and Benign Father, to have pity and compaſſion of your miſerable and ſorrowful Child, and with the abundance of your ineſtimable Goodneſs, ſo to overcome mine Iniquity towards God, Your Grace, and Your whole Realm, as I may feel ſome ſenſible Token of Reconciliation, which, God is my Judg, I only deſire, without other reſpect. To whom I ſhall daily pray for the preſervation of Your Highneſs, with the Queen's Grace, and that it may pleaſe him to ſend You Iſſue.

MOſt humbly, obediently, and gladly, lying at the Feet of Your moſt Excellent Majeſty, my moſt dear and benign Father, and Soveraign Lord, I have this day perceived Your gracious Clemency, and merciful Pity, to have overcome my moſt unkind and unnatural Proceedings towards You, and Your moſt Juſt and Vertuous Laws. The great and ineſtimable Joy whereof, I cannot expreſs, nor have any thing worthy to be again preſented to Your Majeſty for the ſame Your fatherly Pity extended towards me, moſt ingrately on my part abandoned, as much as in me lies, but my poor Heart, which I ſend unto Your Highneſs to remain in Your Hand, to be for ever uſed, directed, and framed, whiles God ſhall ſuffer Life to remain in it at Your only pleaſure, moſt humbly beſeeching Your Grace to accept and receive the ſame; being all that I have to offer, which ſhall never alter, vary, or change, from that Confeſſion and Submiſſion which I have made unto Your Highneſs, in the preſence of Your Council, and other attending upon the ſame; for whoſe preſervation, with my moſt gracious Mother the Queen, I ſhall daily pray to God; whom eſt-ſoons I beſeech to ſend You Iſſue, to his Honour, and the Comfort of Your whole Realm. Cotton. Libr: Otho. C. 20:

MY bounden Duty moſt humbly remembred to Your moſt Excellent Majeſty: Whereas I am unable and inſufficient to render and expreſs to Your Highneſs thoſe moſt hearty and humble thanks for Your gracious Mercy and fatherly Pity, ſurmounting mine Offences at this time extended towards me, I ſhall proſtrate at Your moſt noble Feet, humbly and with the very bottom of my Stomach, beſeech Your Grace to repute that in me, which in my poor Heart remaining in Your moſt noble Hand, I have conceived and profeſſed towards Your Grace, whiles the Breath ſhall remain in my Body; that is, that as I am now in ſuch merciful ſort recovered, being more than almoſt loſt with mine own Folly, that Your Majeſty may as well accept me juſtly Your bounden Slave by Redemption, as Your moſt humble, faithful, and obedient Child and Subject, by the courſe of Nature planted in this Your moſt Noble Realm; ſo ſhall I for ever perſevere and continue towards Your Highneſs, in ſuch uniformity and due obedience, as I doubt not, but with the help of God, Your Grace ſhall ſee and perceive a will and intent in me, to redouble again that hath been amiſs on my behalf, conformably to ſuch Words and Writings as I have ſpoken and ſent unto Your Highneſs, from the which I will nevery vary during my Life, truſting that Your Grace hath conceived that Opinion of me, which to remember is mine only comfort. And thus I beſeech our Lord to preſerve Your Grace in Health, with my very natural Mother the Queen, and to ſend You ſhortly Iſſue, which I ſhall as gladly and willingly ſerve with my Hands under their Feet, as ever did poor Subject their moſt Gracious Soveraign.

A Letter written by Her to Cromwell, containing a full Submiſſion to the King's Pleaſure, in all the Points of Religion.

GOod Mr. Secretary, how much am I bound unto you, which have not only travelled, when I was almoſt drowned in folly, to recover me, before I ſunk, and was utterly paſt recovery, and ſo to preſent me to the Face of Grace and Mercy; but alſo deſiſteth not ſithence, with your good and wholeſome Counſels, ſo to arm me from any Relapſe, that I cannot, unleſs I were too wilful and obſtinate, (whereof now there is no ſpark in me) fall again into any danger. But leaving the recital of your Goodneſs apart, which I cannot recount; For anſwer to the Particularities of your Credence, ſent by my Friend Mr. Wriothſley. Firſt, Concerning the Princeſs, (ſo I think I muſt call her yet, for I would be loth to offend) I offered, at her entry to that Name and Honour, to call her Siſter; but it was refuſed, unleſs I would alſo add the other Title unto it; which I denied not then more obſtinately, than I am now ſorry for it, for that I did therein offend my moſt gracious Father, and his juſt Laws. And now that you think it meet, I ſhall never call her by other Name than Siſter. Touching the nomination of ſuch Women as I would have about me; ſurely, Mr. Secretary, what Men or Women ſoever the King's Highneſs ſhall appoint to wait on me, without exception, ſhall be to me right-heartily, and without reſpect, welcome; albeit, to expreſs my mind to you, whom I think worthy to be accepted for their faithful Service done to the King's Majeſty, and to me, ſithence they came into my Company, I promiſe you, on my Faith, Margaret Baynton, and Suſanna Clarencieux, have, in every condition, uſed themſelves as faithfully, painfully, and diligently, as ever did Women in ſuch a caſe; as ſorry when I was not ſo conformable as became me, as glad when I enclined any thing to my Duty as could be deviſed. One other there is that was ſometime my Maid, whom, for her Vertue, I love, and could be glad to have in my Company, that is, Mary Brown, and here be all that I will recommend; and yet my eſtimation of this ſhall be meaſured at the King's Highneſs, my moſt merciful Father's pleaſure and appointment, as Reaſon is.

Cotton. Libr. Otho. C. 10.

For mine Opinion touching Pilgrimages, Purgatory, Reliques, and ſuch-like, I aſſure you I have none at all, but ſuch as I ſhall receive from him that hath mine whole Heart in keeping, that is, the King's moſt gracious Highneſs, my moſt benign Father, who ſhall imprint in the ſame touching theſe Matters, and all other, what his ineſtimable Vertue, high Wiſdom, and excellent Learning, ſhall think convenient, and limit unto me; to whoſe preſence I pray God I may once come e're I die, for every Day is a Year till I may have the fruition of it. Beſeeching you, good Mr. Secretary, to continue mine humble ſuit for the ſame, and for all other things whatſoever they be, to repute my

my Heart ſo firmly knit to his pleaſure, that I can by no means vary from the direction and appointment of the ſame. And thus moſt heartily fare you well. From Hunſdon, this Friday, at ten of the Clock at Night.

An Original.

To my moſt loving and dearly beloved Friends, my Couſin Thomas Shirley, the Worſhipful Richard Leechmore, and Roger Leechmore his Brother.

IN moſt hearty wiſe I commend me unto you, aſcertaining, that Yeſterday I was, by Sentence, reſtored again to my Biſhoprick, and repoſed in the ſame, even as fully as I was at any time before I was deprived; and by the ſaid Sentence, my Uſurper, Dr. Ridley, is utterly repulſed; ſo that I would ye did order all things at Kidmerly and Buſſley at your pleaſures, not ſuffering Sheeps-head, or Ships-ſide, to be any medler there, or to ſell or carry away any thing from thence; and I truſt, at your coming up now at the Parliament, I ſhall ſo handle both the ſaid Sheeps-heads, and the other Calves-heads, that they ſhall perceive their ſweet ſhall not be without ſour Sauce. This day is looked that Mr. Canterbury muſt be placed where is meet for him; He is become very humble and ready to ſubmit himſelf in all things, but that will not ſerve; in the ſame predicament is Dr. Smith, my Friend, and the Dean of Pauls, with others. Commend me to your Bed-fellows moſt heartily, and remember the Liquor that I wrote to you for; this Bearer ſhall declare the reſt, and alſo put you in remembrance for Beeves and Muttons for my Houſe-fare. And thus our bleſſed Lord long and well keep you all. Written in haſte, this 6th of September.

The Concluſion of Cardinal Pool's Inſtructions to Mr. Goldwell, ſent by him to the Queen.

An Original.

Cotton Libr. Titus B. 2.

FOr the concluſion of all that is compriſed in your Inſtruction, as that the which containeth the whole ſum of my poor Advice and Counſel, it pleaſeth her Grace to ask of me, you ſhall ſay, That my moſt humble deſire is, that in all deliberation her Grace ſhall make touching the maintenance of her State, the ſame will ever well ponder and conſider, what the Providence of God hath ſhewed therein, above that which hath been ſhewed in her Predeceſſors, Kings of this Realm, in this one Point; which is to have the Crown, not only as a King's Daughter and Heir, but hath ordered, that this Point of right Inheritance ſhall depend as it doth, of the Authority he hath given to his Church, and of the See of Rome, which is the See Apoſtolick, approving her Mother to be Legitimate Wife of King Henry the Eighth; whereby ſhe is bound, afore God and Man, as ſhe will ſhow her ſelf the very Daughter of the ſaid King Henry the Eighth, right Heir of the Crown; ſo alſo to ſhew her ſelf right Daughter of the Church, and of them that be reſident in the See Apoſtolick, who be the right Heirs to Peter; to whom, and his Succeſſors, Chriſt chief Head of the Church in Heaven,

Heaven, and in Earth, hath given in Earth to bear his Place, touching the Rule of the ſame Church, and to have the Crown thereof; which well conſidered and pondered, her Grace ſhall ſoon ſee how in her Perſon, the Providence of God hath joined the Right ſhe hath by her Father in the Realm, with the Right of the Church, that ſhe cannot prevail by the one, except ſhe join the other withal; and they that will ſeparate theſe two, take away not only half her Right, but her whole Right, being not ſo much Heir, becauſe ſhe is King Henry's only Daughter, without Iſſue Male, as ſhe is his lawful Daughter, which ſhe hath by the Authority of the Church.

Which thing, prudently and godly conſidered, ſhe cannot but ſee what faithful Counſel this is, That above all Acts that in this Parliament ſhall be made, doth advertiſe her Grace to eſtabliſh that, the which pertaineth to the eſtabliſhing of the Authority of the Church, and the See of the ſame; what rendring to him that is right Succeſſor to Peter therein, his right Title of Head in the Church in Earth, without the which ſhe cannot be right Head in the Realm; and this eſtabliſhed, all Controverſy is taken away; and who will repine unto this, he doth repine unto her right of the Crown.

Wherefore this is my firſt Advice, That this Point, above all other, ſhould be entreated and enacted in the Parliament; and ſo, I know her Graces full mind was, and is, that it ſhould be: But ſhe feareth Difficulties, and hereupon dependeth, that her Grace asketh my poor Advice, how theſe Difficulties may be taken away.

Unto this you may ſay, That they muſt be taken away by the help of him, that by his High Providence, above Man's expectance, hath given her already the Crown. Which will have as well this ſecond Act known, of the maintenance thereof to depend of him, as the firſt in attaining thereto. And to have his help, the mean is by humble Prayer, wherein I would advertiſe her Highneſs, not only to give her ſelf to Prayer, but alſo, by Alms to the needy, excitate the Minds of others to Prayer; theſe be the means of moſt efficacy; and with this to take that ardent Mind, to eſtabliſh the Authority of the Church, caſting away all fear of Man, that ſhe took to have her Crown; and not ſo much for her own ſake, as for the Honour of God which gave her the Crown. And if any Difficulty ſhould be feared in the Parliament herein, leave the honour, to take away the difficulty thereof to none other, but aſſume that Perſon to her ſelf, as moſt bound thereto; and to propone that her ſelf, which I would truſt to be of that efficacy, that if inwardly any Man will repugn; outwardly the Reaſons be ſo evident for this part, that joined with the Authority of her Perſon, being proponent, none will be ſo hardy, temerarious, nor impious, that will reſiſt. And if in this deliberation it ſhould ſeem ſtrange to put forth theſe Matters in the Parliament, as I have ſaid in the Inſtructions, without communicating the ſame with any of her Council, I would think it well her Grace might confer it with two of the chiefeſt that be counted of the People moſt near her favour, one Spiritual, and another Temporal; with declaring to them, firſt, how touching her Conſcience afore God, and her Right afore the World, ſhe can never be quiet until this Matter be ſtabliſhed touching the Authority of the Church, requiring their uttermoſt help in that, as if ſhe ſhould fight for the Crown, her Ma-jeſty may be ſure, ſhe putting the ſame forth with that earneſt manner, they will not lack to ſerve her; and they may ſerve quietly in the Parliament, after her Grace hath ſpoken to proſecute and juſtify the ſame, with efficacy of words, to give all others example to follow her Grace; leaving this part unto them, That if the Name of Obedience to the Pope ſhould ſeem to bring, as it were, a Yoke to the Realm, or any other kind of Servitude beſide, that it ſhould be profitable to the Realm, both afore God and Man, that her Grace that bringeth it in again, will never ſuffer it, nor the Pope himſelf requireth no ſuch thing, And herein alſo, that they ſay, That my Perſon being the Mean to bring it in, would never agree to be an Inſtrument thereof, if I thought any Thraldom ſhould come thereby, they ſhall never be deceived of me. And if they would ſay beſide, I would never have taken this Enterprize upon me, except I thought by the ſame to bring great Comfort to the Country; wherein the Pope's Authority being accepted, I would truſt, ſhould be ſo uſed, that it might be an Example of Comfort, not only to that Country, but to all other that have rejected it afore, and for that cauſe hath been ever ſince in great miſery.

This is the ſum of all my poor Advice at this time in this Caſe; whereof I beſeech Almighty God ſo much may take effect, as ſhall be to his Honour, and Wealth to her Grace, and the whole Realm beſides. Amen.

A Copy of a Letter, with Articles ſent from the Queen's Majeſty unto the Biſhop of London; and by him and his Officers, at Her gracious Commandment, to be put in ſpeedy execution with effect in the whole Dioceſs, as well in places exempt, as not exempt whatſoever, according to the Tenour and Form of the ſame.

Sent by the Queen's Majeſty's Commandment, in the Month of March, Anno Dom. 1553.

By the QUEEN.

RIght Reverend Father in God, right truſty and well-beloved, We greet you well. And whereas heretofore, in the time of the late Reign of Our moſt deareſt Brother, King Edward the Sixth, (whoſe Soul God pardon) divers notable Crimes, Exceſſes, and Faults, with divers kinds of Hereſies, Simony, Advoutry, and other Enormities, have been committed within this our Realm, and other our Dominions; the ſame continuing yet hitherto in like diſorder, ſince the beginning of our Reign, without any correction or reformation at all; and the People, both of the Laity and Clergy, and chiefly of the Clergy, have been given to much inſolence and ungodlineſs, greatly greatly to the displeasure of Almighty God, and very much to Our regret and evil contentation, and to the slander of other Christian Realms, and in a manner, to the subversion and clear defaceing of this our Realm. And remembring our Duty to Almighty God, to be to foresee, as much as in Us may be, that all Vertue and Godly Living should be embraced, flourish, and encrease. And therewith also, that all vice and ungodly behaviour should be utterly banished and put away; or at the least wise, so nigh as might be, so bridled and kept under, that Godliness and Honesty might have the over-hand: understanding, by very credible Report, and publick Fame, to Our no small heaviness and discomfort, that within your Dioces, as well in not exempted as in exempted Places, the like disorder and evil behaviour hath been done and used; like also to continue and encrease, unless due provision be had and made to reform the same, (which earnestly in very deed We do mind and intend) to the uttermost all the ways We can possible, trusting of God's furtherance and help in that behalf. For these Causes, and other most just Considerations us moving, We send unto you certain Articles of such special Matter, as among other things be most special and necessary to be now put in execution by you and your Officers, extending to them by Us desired, and the Reformation aforesaid; wherein ye shall be charg'd with Our special Commandments, by these Our Letters, to the intent you and your Officers may the more earnestly and boldly proceed thereunto, without fear of any presumption to be noted on your part, or danger to be incurred of any such our Laws, as by your doings, of that is in the said Articles contain'd, might any wise grieve you, whatsoever be threatned in any such Case; and therefore We straitly charge and command you, and your said Officers, to proceed to the execution of the said Articles, without all tract and delay, as ye will answer to the contrary. Given under our Hand, at our Palace of Westminster, the 4*th* day of March, the first Year of our Reign.

ARTICLES.

1. THat every Bishop, and his Officers, with all other having Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, shall, with all speed and diligence, and all manner and ways to them possible, put in execution all such Canons and Ecclesiastical Laws, heretofore in the time of King Henry the 8*th* used, within this Realm of England, and the Dominions of the same, not being direct and expresly contrary to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

2. Item. That no Bishop, or any his Officer, or other Person aforesaid hereafter, in any of their Ecclesiastical Writings, in Process, or other extra-judicial Acts, do use to put in this Clause or Sentence, Regia Auctoritate fulcitus.

3. Item. That no Bishop, or any his Officers, or other Person aforesaid, do hereafter exact or demand in the admission of any Person to any Ecclesiastical Promotion, Orders, or Office, any Oath touching the Primacy, or Succession, as of late in few Years passed hath been accustomed and used.

4. Item.

4. Item. That every Biſhop, and his Officers, with all other Perſons aforeſaid, have a vigilant eye, and uſe ſpecial diligence and foreſight, that no Perſon be admitted or received to any Eccleſiaſtical Function, Benefit, or Office, being a Sacramentary, infected or defamed with any notable kind of Hereſy, or other great Crime; and that the ſaid Biſhop do ſtay, and cauſe to be ſtaied, as much as lieth in him, that Benefices, and Eccleſiaſtical Promotions, do not notably decay, or take hinderance, by paſſing or confirming of unreaſonable Leaſes.

5. Item. That every Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, do diligently travel for the repreſſing of Hereſies, and notable Crimes, eſpecially in the Clergy, duly correcting and puniſhing the ſame.

6. Item. That every Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, do likewiſe travel for the condemning and repreſſing of corrupt and naughty Opinions, unlawful Books, Ballads, and other pernicious and hurtful devices, engendring hatred among the People, and diſcord amongſt the ſame: And that School-maſters, Preachers, and Teachers, do exerciſe and uſe their Offices and Duties, without Teaching, Preaching, or ſetting forth any evil corrupt Doctrine; and that doing the contrary, they may be, by the Biſhop and his ſaid Officers, puniſh'd and remov'd.

7. Item. That every Biſhop, and all the other Perſons aforeſaid, proceeding ſummarily, and with all celerity and ſpeed, may and ſhall deprive, or declare depriv'd, and amove, according to their learning and diſcretion, all ſuch Perſons from their Benefices and Eccleſiaſtical Promotions, who contrary to the ſtate of their Order, and the laudable Cuſtom of the Church, have married, and uſed Women as their Wives, or otherwiſe, notably and ſlanderouſly diſordered or abuſed themſelves; ſequeſtring alſo, during the ſaid Proceſs, the Fruits and Profits of the ſaid Benefits, and Eccleſiaſtical Promotions.

8. Item. That the ſaid Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, do uſe more lenity and clemency with ſuch as have married, whoſe Wives be dead, than with other, whoſe Women do yet remain in Life. And likewiſe ſuch Prieſts, as with the conſents of their Wives, or Women, openly, in the preſence of the Biſhop, do profeſs to abſtain, to be uſed the more favourably; in which Caſe, after Penance effectually done, the Biſhop, according to his diſcretion and wiſdom, may, upon juſt conſideration, receive, and admit them again to their former Adminiſtration, ſo it be not in the ſame Place, appointing them ſuch a Portion to live upon, to be paid out of their Benefice, whereof they be depriv'd, by diſcretion of the ſaid Biſhop, or his Officers, ſhall think may be ſpared of the ſaid Benefice.

9. Item. That every Biſhop, and all Perſons aforeſaid, do foreſee, That they ſuffer not any Religious Man, having ſolemnly profeſt Chaſtity, to continue with his Woman, or Wife: but that all ſuch Perſons, after deprivation of their Benefice, or Eccleſiaſtical Promotion, be alſo divorced, every one from his ſaid Woman, and due puniſhment otherwiſe taken for the Offence therein.

10. Item. That every Biſhop, and all other Perſons aforeſaid, do take Order and Direction, with the Pariſhioners of every Benefice, where Prieſts do want, to repair to the next Pariſh for Divine Service; or to appoint, for a convenient time, till other better proviſion may be made, one Curat to ſerve Alternis Vicibus, in divers Pariſhes; and to to allot to the ſaid Curat, for his Labour, ſome portion of the Benefice that he ſo ſerveth.

11. Item. That all and all manner of Proceſſions of the Church, be uſed, frequented, and continued, after the old Order of the Church, in the Latin Tongue.

12. Item. That all ſuch Holy-days and Faſting-days, be obſerved and kept, as was obſerved and kept in the late time of King Henry the Eighth.

13. Item. That the laudable and honeſt Ceremonies which were wont to be uſed, frequented, and obſerved in the Church, be alſo hereafter frequented, uſed, and obſerved.

14. Item. That Children be Chriſtened by the Prieſt, and confirmed by the Biſhops, as heretofore hath been accuſtomed and uſed.

15. Item. Touching ſuch Perſons as were heretofore promoted to any Orders, after the new ſort and faſhion of Orders, conſidering they were not ordered in very deed, the Biſhop of the Dioceſs finding otherwiſe ſufficiency and ability in thoſe Men, may ſupply that thing which wanted in them before, and then, according to his diſcretion, admit them to miniſter.

16. Item. That by the Biſhop of the Dioceſs, an Uniform Doctrine be ſet forth by Homilies, or otherwiſe, for the good inſtruction and teaching of all People; and that the ſaid Biſhop, and other Perſons aforeſaid, do compel the Pariſhioners to come to their ſeveral Churches, and there devoutly to hear Divine Service, as of reaſon they ought.

17. Item. That they examine all School-maſters and Teachers of Children, and finding them ſuſpect in any ways to remove them, and place Catholick Men in their Rooms, with a ſpecial Commandment to inſtruct their Children, ſo as they may be able to anſwer the Prieſt at the Maſs, and ſo help the Prieſt to Maſs as hath been accuſtomed.

18. Item. That the ſaid Biſhop, and all Perſons aforeſaid, have ſuch regard, reſpect, and conſideration of and for the ſetting forth of the Premiſes, with all kind of Vertue, godly Living, and good Example, with repreſſing alſo, and keeping under of Vice and Unthriftineſs, as they, and every each of them may be ſeen to favour the Reſtitution of true Religion; and alſo to make an honeſt account and reckoning of their Office and Cure, to the Honour of God, our good contentation, and the profit of this Realm, and Dominions of the ſame.

A Letter of the Queen's, to the Juſtices of the Peace in Norfolk.

MARY the Queen.

TRuſty and well-beloved, We greet you well. And whereas We have heretofore ſignified our Pleaſure, both by our Proclamation general, and by our Letters to many of you, particularly for the good Order and Stay of that our County of Norfolk, from Rebellions, Tumults, and Uproars; and to have a ſpecial regard to Vagabonds, and to ſuch as did ſpread any vain Propheſies, ſeditious, falſe, or untrue Rumors, and to puniſh them accordingly; We have nevertheleſs, to Our no ſmall grief, ſundry Intelligences, of divers and ſundry lewd and ſeditious Tales, forged and ſpread by certain malicious Perſons, touching the Eſtate of our Perſon; with many other vain and ſlanderous Reports, tending to the moving of Sedition and Rebellion, whoſe fault, and paſſing unpuniſhed, ſeemeth either to be winked at, or at leaſt little conſidered, which is to Us very ſtrange. We have therefore thought good, eſtſoons, to require and command you, to be not only more circumſpect in the good ordering of that our County, according to our Truſt conceived of you, but alſo to uſe all the beſt means and ways ye can, in the diligent examining and ſearching out, from Man to Man, the Authors and Publiſhers of theſe vain Propheſies, and untrue Bruits, the very foundation of all Rebellions: and the ſame being found, to puniſh them as the quality of their Offence ſhall appear to you to deſerve; whereby the malicious ſort may be the more feared to attempt the like, and Our good loving Subjects live in more quiet. And for Our better ſervice in this behalf, We think good that ye divide your ſelves unto ſeveral parts of that our County, ſo that every of you have ſome part in charge, whereby ye may the better butt out the malacious; and yet nevertheleſs to meet often together for the better conferring herein. And that ye ſignify your Doings, and the State of that Shire, by your general Letters, once every month at leaſt, to our Privy Council. And like-as We ſhall conſider ſuch of you to your advancements, whoſe diligence ſhall ſet forwards our Service in this Part, ſo ſhall We have good cauſe to note great negligence and fault in them that ſhall omit their Duty in this behalf.

An Addreſs made by the Lower Houſe of Convocation, to the Upper Houſe.

Ex MS. Col. Cor. C. Cant.

RIght Reverend Fathers in God, We the Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, of the Lower Houſe, do moſt humbly pray your good Lordſhips, That touching the Submiſſion and Order of the Lands and Poſſeſſions which ſometimes did appertain to divers Biſhops, Cathedral Churches, and to the late ſuppreſſed Monaſteries, Priories, Colleges, Chauntries, and free Chappels, and other Churches within this Realm, and be now in the poſſeſſion of the Temporality, that it may pleaſe your good Lordſhips, by your diſcreet Wiſdoms, to foreſee and provide, that by this our Grant, nothing paſs, which may be prejudicial or hurtful to any Biſhop, or other Eccleſiaſtical Perſon, or their Succeſſors, for or concerning any Action, Right, Title, or Intereſt, which by the Laws of this Realm are already grown, or may hereafter grow or riſe to them, or any of them, and their Succeſſors, for any Lands, Tenements, Penſions, Portions, Tithes, Rents, Reverſions, Service, or other Hereditaments, which ſometime appertained to the ſaid Biſhops, or other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, in the Right of their Churches, or otherwiſe, but that the ſame Right, Title, and Intereſt, be ſafe and reſerved to them, and every of them and their Succeſſors, according to the ſaid Laws.

And further, whereas in the Statute paſſed in the firſt Year of Edward the Sixth, for the ſuppreſſing of all Colleges, &c. Proviſo was made by the ſaid Statute, in reſpect of the ſame Surrender, that Schools and Hoſpitals ſhould have been erected and founded in divers parts of this Realm, for the good education of Youth in Vertue and Learning, and the better ſuſtentation of the Poor; and that other Works, beneficial for the Common-Weal, ſhould have been executed, which hitherto be not performed, according to the meaning of the ſaid Statute, it may pleaſe your good Lordſhips to move the King's and the Queen's moſt Royal Majeſty, and the Lord Cardinal, to have ſome ſpecial conſideration for the due performance of the Premiſes; and that as well the ſame may the rather come to paſs, as the Church of England, which heretofore hath been honourably endowed with Lands and Poſſeſſions, may have ſome recovery of ſo notable Damages and Loſſes which ſhe hath ſuſtained.

It may pleaſe their Highneſs, with the aſſent of the Lords and Commons in this Parliament aſſembled, and by Authority of the ſame, to repeal, make fruſtrate and void, the Statute of Mortmayn, made in the ſeventh Year of Edward the Firſt, otherwiſe intituled, de Religioſis, and the Statute concerning the ſame, made the 15*th* Year of King Richard the Second. And all and every other Statute and Statutes, at any time heretofore made concerning the ſame. And foraſmuch as Tythes and Oblations have been at all times aſſigned and appointed for the ſuſtentation of Eccleſiaſtical Miniſters; and in conſideration of the the ſame, their Miniſtry and Office, which as yet cannot be executed by any Lay Perſon, ſo it is not meet that any of them ſhould perceive, poſſeſs, or enjoy the ſame: That all Impropriations, now being in the hands of any Lay Perſon, or Perſons, and Impropriations made to any ſecular uſe, other than for the maintenance of Eccleſiaſtical Miniſters, Univerſities, and Schools, may be, by like Authority of Parliament, diſſolved, and the Churches reduced to ſuch State as they were in, before the ſame Impropriations were made. And in this behalf we ſhall moſt humbly pray your good Lordſhips to have in ſpecial Conſideration, how lately the Lands and Poſſeſſions of Prebends, in certain Cathedral Churches within this Realm, have been taken away from the ſame Prebends, to the uſe of certain private Perſons; and in the lieu thereof, Benefices of notable value, impropriated to the Cathedral Churches in which the ſaid Prebends were founded, to the no little decay of the ſaid Cathedral Churches and Benefices, and the Hoſpitality kept in the ſame.

Farther, Right Reverend Fathers, we perceiving the godly forwardneſs in your good Lorſhips, in the reſtitution of this noble Church of England, to the priſtine State and Unity of Chriſt's Church, which now of late Years have been grievouſly infected with Hereſies, perverſe and ſchiſmatical Doctrine, ſown abroad in this Realm by evil Preachers, to the great loſs and danger of many Souls, accounting our ſelves to be called hither by your Lordſhips, out of all parts of the Province of Canterbury, to treat with your Lordſhips concerning, as well the ſame, as of other things touching the State and Quietneſs of the ſame Church, in Doctrine and in Manners, have, for the furtherance of your godly doing therein, deviſed theſe Articles following to be further conſidered and enlarged, as to your Lordſhips Wiſdoms ſhall be thought expedient. Wherein, as you do earneſtly think many things meet and neceſſary to be reform'd; ſo we doubt not but your Lordſhips, having reſpect to God's Glory, and the good Reformation of things amiſs, will no leſs travel to bring the ſame to paſs. And we, for our part, ſhall be at all times ready to do every thing, as by your Lordſhips Wiſdoms ſhall be thought expedient.

1. We deſign to be reſolved, Whether that all ſuch as have preach'd in any part within this Realm, or other the King and Queen's Dominions, any Heretical, Erroneous, or Seditious Doctrine, ſhall be called before the Ordinaries of ſuch Places where they now dwell, or be Benefic'd, and upon examination, to be driven to recant openly ſuch their Doctrine in all Places where they have preach'd the ſame? And otherwiſe, Whether any Order ſhall be made, and Proceſs to be made herein againſt them, according to the Canons and Conſtitutions of the Church in ſuch Caſe uſed?

2. That the peſtilent Book of Thomas Cranmer, late Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, made againſt the moſt Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, and the Schiſmatical Book, called, The Communion Book, and the Book of Ordering of Eccleſiaſtical Miniſters; all ſuſpect Tranſlations of the Old and New Teſtament, the Authors whereof are recited in a Statute made the Year of King Henry the Eighth, and all other Books, as well in Latin as in Engliſh, concerning any Heretical, Erroneous, or Slanderous Doctrine, may be deſtroyed and burnt throughout this Realm. And that publick Commandment be given in all Places to every Man having any ſuch Books, to bring in the ſame to the Ordinary, by a certain day, or otherwiſe to be taken and reputed as a favourer of ſuch Doctrine. And that it may be lawful to every Biſhop, and other Ordinary, to make enquiry and due ſearch, from time to time, for the ſaid Books, and to take them from the Owners and Poſſeſſors of them, for the purpoſe aboveſaid.

3. And for the better repreſs of all ſuch peſtilent Books, That Order may be taken with all ſpeed, that no ſuch Books may be printed, uttered, or ſold, within this Realm, or brought from beyond the Seas, or other parts, into the ſame, upon grievous pains to all ſuch as ſhall preſume to attempt the contrary.

4. And that the Biſhops, and other Ordinaries, may, with better ſpeed, root up all ſuch pernicious Doctrine, and the Authors thereof; We deſire that the Statutes made, Anno quinto of Richard the Second, Anno ſecundo of Henry the Fourth, and Anno ſecundo of Henry the Fifth, againſt Hereticks, Lollards, and falſe Preachers, may be by your Induſtrious Suit reviv'd and put in force, as ſhall be thought convenient. And generally, that all Biſhops, and other Eccleſiaſtical Ordinaries, may be reſtored to their Priſtine Juriſdiction againſt Hereticks, Schiſmaticks, and their Fautors, in as large and ample manner as they were, in the firſt Year of King Henry the Eighth.

5. And that the Premiſes may be the better executed by the preſence of Beneficed Men in their Cures, the Statutes made Anno 21. of Henry the Eighth, concerning Pluralities of Benefices, and Non-reſidence of Beneficed Men; by reaſon whereof, a larger Liberty or Licenſe is given to a great multitude of Prieſts and Chaplains to be abſent from their Benefices with Cure, than was ever permitted by the Canon Laws, and all other Statutes touching the ſame, may be repealed, void, and aboliſhed; and that the Biſhops, and other Ordinaries, may call all Beneficed Men to be reſident upon their Cures, as before the making of that Act they might have done.

6. Item. That the Ordinaries do, from time to time, make Proceſs for puniſhment of all Simoniacal Perſons, of whom it is thought there were never ſo many within this Realm. And that not only the Clerks, but alſo the Patrons, and all the Mediators of ſuch Factions may be puniſh'd. Wherein we think good that Order were taken, that the Patrons ſhould loſe their Patronage during their natural Lives, according to the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions of this Realm.

7. Item. That the ancient Liberty, Authority, and Juriſdiction, be reſtored to the Church of England, according to the Article of the Great Charter, called Magna Charta; at the leaſt wiſe, in ſuch ſort as it was in the firſt Year of Henry the Eighth; and touching this Article, we ſhall deſire your Lordſhips to be with us moſt humble Suitors to the King's and Queen's Majeſty, and to the Lord Legat, for the remiſſion of the importable Burdens of the Firſt-Fruits, Tenths, and Subſidies. In which Suit, whatſoever advancement your Lordſhips ſhall think good to be offered unto their Majeſties for the ſame, we ſhall therein be always glad to do as ſhall be thought good.

8. Item,

8. Item. That no Attachment of Premunire be awarded againſt any Biſhop, or other Ordinary Eccleſiaſtical from henceforth in any Matter, but that a Prohibition be firſt brought to the ſame; and that it may pleaſe the King's and Queen's Majeſty, to command the Temporal Judges of this Realm, to explicate and declare plainly, all and ſingular Articles of the Premunire, and to make a certain Doctrine thereof.

9. Item. That the Statutes of the Proviſors be not drawn by unjuſt Interpretation out of their proper Caſes, nor from the proper ſenſe of the words of the ſame Statutes.

10. Item. That the Statute of Submiſſion of the Clergy, made Anno 25. of Henry the Eighth, and all other Statutes made during the time of the late Schiſm, in derogation of the Liberties and Juriſdictions of the Church, from the firſt Year of King Henry the Eighth, may be repealed, and the Church reſtored in integrum.

11. Item. That the Statute made for finding of great Horſes by Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, may likewiſe be repealed.

12. Item. That Uſurers may be puniſh'd by the Common Laws, as in times paſt hath been uſed.

13. Item. That thoſe which lay violent Hands upon any Prieſt, or other Eccleſiaſtical Miniſter, being in Orders, may be puniſh'd by the Canon Laws, as in times paſt hath been uſed.

14. Item. That all Prieſts, Deacons, and Sub-Deacons, and all other having Prebends, or other Eccleſiaſtical Promotions or Benefices, from henceforth uſe ſuch Prieſt-like Habit, as the quality of his State and Benefice requireth.

15. Item. That Married Prieſts may be compelled to forſake their Women, whom they took as their Wives.

16. Item. That an Order may be taken for the bringing up of Youth in good Learning and Vertue; and that the School-maſters of this Realm may be Catholick Men, and all other to be removed that are either Sacramentaries, or Hereticks, or otherwiſe notable Criminous Perſons.

17. Item. That all exempt and peculiar Places may, from henceforth be immediately under the Juriſdiction of that Arch-biſhop, or Biſhop, and Arch-deacon, within whoſe ſeveral Dioceſs and Arch-deaconry, the ſame are preſently conſtitute and ſcituate. And whereas divers Temporal Men, by reaſon of late Purchaſes of certain Abbies, and exempt Places, have, by their Letters Patents, or otherwiſe, granted unto them Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction in the ſaid Places; That from henceforth the ſaid Juriſdiction be devolv'd to the Arch-Biſhop, or Biſhop, and Arch-deacon, within whoſe Dioceſs, and Arch-deaconry the ſame now be.

18. Item. Where the Mayor of London, by force of a Decree made, Anno of Henry the Eighth, hath attributed unto him the Cognition of Cauſes of Tythes in London; that from henceforth the ſame Cognition, and Juriſdiction, may utterly ceaſe, and be reduced immediately to the Biſhop of London Ordinary there.

19. Item. That Tythes may be henceforth paid according to the Canon Laws.

20. Item. That Lands and Places impropriated to Monaſteries, which at the time of Diſſolution and Suppreſſion thereof, were exempt from payment of Tythes, may be now allotted to certain Pariſhes, and there chageable to pay like Tythes as other Pariſhioners do.

21. Item. That there be a ſtreight Law made, whereby the reparations of Chancels, which are notoriouſly decay'd through the Realm, may be duly repaired, from time to time, by ſuch as by the Law ought to do the ſame; and namely, ſuch as be in the King's and Queen's Hands; and that the Ordinaries maw lawfully proceed in Cauſes of Dilapidations, as well of them as of all other Parſonages, Vicarages, and other Eccleſiaſtical Benefices and Promotions.

22. Item. That Order be taken for, the more ſpeedy paiment of Penſions to all Prieſts, Penſionaries; and that they may have the ſame, without long Suits or Charges.

23. Item. That an Order be taken for paiment of Perſonal Tythes, in Cities, and Towns, and elſewhere, as was uſed in Anno 21. of Henry the Eighth.

24. Item. That ſuch Prieſts as were lately married, and refuſe to reconcile themſelves to their Order, and to be reſtored to Miniſtration, may have ſome ſpecial Animadverſion, whereby, as Apoſtates, they may be diſcern'd from other.

25. Item. That Religious Women, which be married, may be divorced.

26. Item. That in Divorces, which are made from Bed and Board, Proviſion may be made, that the Innocent Woman may enjoy ſuch Lands and Goods as were hers before the Marriage, or that happened to come to her uſe at any time during the Marriage; and that it may not be lawful for the Huſband, being for his Offence divorced from the ſaid Woman, to intermeddle himſelf with the ſaid Lands or Goods, unleſs his Wife be to him reconciled.

27. Item. That the Wardens of Churches and Chappels, may render their Accounts before the Ordinaries, and may be by them compell'd to do the ſame.

28. Item. That all ſuch Eccleſiaſtal Perſons as lately have ſpoiled Cathedral, Collegiat, and other Churches, of their own heads and temerity, may be compelled to reſtore all and ſingular things ſo by them taken away, or the true value thereof; and farther, to re-edify ſuch things, as by them are deſtroy'd and defac'd.

RIght Reverend Father in God, right truſty and right well-beloved; and right truſty and right well-beloved Couſin and Counſellors, and right truſty and well-beloved Counſellors, We greet you well. And where We do conſider that Chriſt's Catholick Church, and the whole State of Chriſtendom, having been of late ſo ſundry ways vexed, it ſhould greatly help to further ſome quiet ſtay and redreſs of that is amiſs, if at this time, of the Pope's Holineſs Election, ſome ſuch godly, learned, and well-diſpoſed Perſon may be choſen to that Place, as ſhall be given to ſee good Order maintained, and all Abuſes in the Church reformed; and known beſides, to the World, to be of godly Life and Diſpoſition. And remembring, on the other ſide, the great Inconveniency that were like to ariſe to the State of the Church, if (worldly reſpects being only weighed in this choice) any ſuch ſhould be preferred to that Room, as wanting thoſe godly Qualities before remembred, might give any occaſion of the decay of the Catholick Faith; We cannot, for the diſcharge of our Duty to God and the World, but both earneſtly wiſh, and carefully travel, that ſuch a one may be choſen, and that without long delay or contention, as for all reſpects may be moſt fitteſt to occupy that Place, to the furtherance of God's Glory, and quietneſs of Chriſtendom. And knowing no Perſon in our mind more fit for that purpoſe, than our deareſt Couſin the Lord Cardinal Pool, whom the greateſt part of Chriſtendom hath heretofore for his long Experience, integrity of Life, and great Learning, thought meet for that Place, We have thought good to pray you, that taking ſome good occaſion for that purpoſe, you do, in our Name, ſpeak with the Cardinal of Lorrain, and the Conſtable, and the reſt of the Commiſſioners of our good Brother, the French King, praying them to recommend unto our ſaid good Brother, in our Name, our ſaid deareſt Couſin, to be named by him to ſuch Cardinals as be at his Devotion, ſo as the rather, by his good furtherance and means, this our Motion may take place. Whereunto if it ſhall pleaſe him to give his Aſſent, like-as upon knowledg thereof, We ſhall, for our part, alſo labour to ſet forwards the Matter the beſt We may; So doubt We not, but if this Our good purpoſe take effect, both He, and We, and the reſt of all Chriſtendom, ſhall have good cauſe to give God thanks, and rejoice thereat. Aſſuring him, that if We had in our Conſcience thought any other Perſon more fit for that Place than our ſaid deareſt Couſin, We would would not, for any private Affection, have preferred his Advancement before God's Glory, and the Benefit of Chriſtendom: the furtherance whereof is (We take God to Record) the only thing We ſeek herein, which moveth Us to be the more earneſt in this Matter. The overture whereof We have taken in hand, (as you may aſſure them on our Honour) without Our ſaid deareſt Couſin's knowledg or conſent. And becauſe We need not to remember the Wiſdom, Sincerity of Life, and other godly Parts, wherewith Almighty God hath endowed Our ſaid deareſt Couſin, the ſame being well enough known to Our ſaid good Brother, and his ſaid Commiſſioners, and the reſt of the World; We do refer the manner of the opening and handling of the reſt of the Matter unto your own Wiſdoms; praying you, We may underſtand from you, as ſoon as ye may, what anſwer ye ſhall have received herein at the ſaid Commiſſioners hands.

An Order preſcribed by the King and Queens Majeſties, unto the Juſtices of Peace of the County of Norfolk, for the good Government of their Majeſties loving Subjects within the ſame Shire, March 26. 1555.

An Original.

Philip R. Mary the Queen.

FIrſt, The ſaid Juſtices of the Peace aſſembling themſelves together, and conſulting by what good Means, good Order and Quietneſs may be beſt continued, ſhall after divide themſelves into eight, ten, or twelve parts, more or leſs, as to their diſcretions, having regard to the quantity of the Shire, and number of themſelves, ſhall ſeem moſt convenient; endeavouring themſelves, beſides their general care, that every particular number may give diligent heed, within their Limits appointed to them, for conſervation of Quietneſs and good Order. Cotton Libr. Titus B. 2.

Item. The ſaid Juſtices of the Peace, ſhall not only be aiding and aſſiſting unto ſuch Preachers as be, and ſhall be ſent unto the ſaid County, but ſhall alſo be themſelves preſent at Sermons, and uſe the Preachers reverently, travelling ſoberly with ſuch, as by abſtaining from coming to the Church, or by any other open doings ſhall appear not perſwaded to conform themſelves, and to uſe ſuch as be wilful and obſtinate, more roundly, either by rebuking them, or binding them to good bearing, or committing them to Priſon, as the Quality of the Perſons, and Circumſtance of their Doings, may ſeem to deſerve.

Item. Amongſt all other things, they muſt lay ſpecial weight upon thoſe which be Preachers and Teachers of Hereſy, or Procurers of ſecret Meetings for that purpoſe.

Item. The ſaid Juſtices of Peace, and every of them, muſt by themſelves, their Wives, Children, and Servants, ſhew good example; and if they ſhall have any of their own Servants faulty, they muſt firſt begin to reform them.

Item. The ſaid Juſtices of the Peace, and every of them, ſhall, as much as in them lieth, procure to ſearch out all ſuch as ſhall by any means ſpread falſe Tales, or ſeditious Rumours, cauſing them, when they ſhall be known, to be further apprehended and puniſhed according to the Laws.

Item. They ſhall procure to have in every Pariſh, or part of the Shire, as near as may be, ſome one or more honeſt Men, ſecretly inſtructed, to give information of the behaviour of the Inhabitants amongſt or about them.

Item. They ſhall charge the Conſtables, and four, or more of the moſt Honeſt and Catholick of every Pariſh, with the order of the ſame Pariſh, unto whom idle Men, Vagabonds, and ſuch as may be probably ſuſpected, ſhall be bound to give a reckoning how they live, and where they ſhall be come from time to time.

Item. They ſhall have earneſt regard to the execution, and keeping of the Statutes againſt rebellious Vagabonds, and Reteinours, Ale-Houſes, and for keeping of the Statute of Huy-and-Cry; and ſhall give order for keeping of good and ſubſtantial Watches, in places convenient, the ſame to begin the 20*th* day of April next.

Item. As ſoon as any Offenders for Murder, Felony, or other Offences ſhall be taken, the ſaid Juſtices of the Peace, ſhall cauſe the matter to be forthwith examined and ordered, as to Juſtice ſhall appertain, according to the Tenour of the Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, addreſſed preſently unto them for that purpoſe.

Finally; The ſaid Juſtices of Peace ſhall meet and conſult together, at the Seſſions, every month, and more-often, as occaſion may require, conferring among themſelves, upon the ſtate of all particular parts of the Shire, and taking ſuch order for all Miſorders, as to their Wiſdoms may ſeem requiſite.

A Letter written by the King and Queen, requiring the Biſhop of London to go on in the proſecution of the Hereticks.

Philip R. Mary the Queen.

RIght Reverend Father in God, right truſty and well-beloved, We greet you well. And where of late We addreſſed our Letters unto the Juſtices of the Peace within every of the Counties of this our Realm; whereby, amongſt other Inſtructions given therein, for the good Order and quiet Government of the Country about, therein they are willed to have a ſpecial regard unto ſuch diſordered Perſons, as forgetting their Duties towards Almighty God and Us, do lean to any Erroneous and Heretical Opinions, to ſhew themſelves conformable to the Catholick Religion of Chriſt's Church; whom, if they cannot by good admonition and fair means reform, they are willed to deliver unto the Ordinary, to be by him charitably travelled withal, and removed (if it may be) from their naughty Opinions; or elſe, if they continue obſtinate, to be ordered according to the Laws provided in that behalf: Underſtanding now, to our no little marvel, that divers of the ſaid diſordered Perſons, being by the Juſtices of the Peace, for their contempt and obſtinacy, brought to the Ordinaries to be uſed as is aforeſaid, are either refuſed to be received at their hands, or if they be received, are neither ſo travelled with as Chriſtian Charity requireth, nor yet proceeded withal according to the Order of Juſtice, but are ſuffered to continue in their Errors, to the diſhonour of Almighty God, and dangerous example of others. Like-as We find this Matter very ſtrange, ſo have We thought convenient, both to ſignify this Our knowledg, and therewith alſo to admoniſh you, to have in this behalf ſuch regard henceforth to the Office of a good Paſtor and Biſhop, as when any ſuch Offenders ſhall be by the ſaid Juſtices of Peace brought unto you, ye do uſe your good wiſdom and diſcretion, in procuring to remove them from their Errors, if it may be, or elſe in proceeding againſt them, (if they ſhall continue obſtinate) according to the order of the Laws; ſo as through your good furtherance, both God's Glory may be the better advanced, and the Common-Wealth the more quietly governed. Sir T. More's Letter to Cromwell, concerning the Nun of Kent.

Right Worſhipful,

Ex MS. Norfolcianis in Col. Greſham.

AFter my moſt hearty recommendation, with like thanks for your Goodneſs, in accepting of my rude long Letter. I perceive, that of your further goodneſs and favour towards me, it liked your Maſterſhip to break with my Son Roper, of that, that I had had communication, not only with divers that were of Acquaintance with the lewd Nun of Canterbury, but alſo with her ſelf; and had, over that, by my writing, declaring favour towards her, given her advice and counſel; of which my demeanour, that it liketh you to be content to take the labour and the pain to hear, by mine own writing, the truth, I very heartily thank you, and reckon my ſelf therein right deeply beholden to you.

It is, I ſuppoſe, about eight or nine Years ago ſith I heard of that Houſewife firſt; at which time, the Biſhop of Canterbury that then was, God aſſoil his Soul, ſent unto the King's Grace a roll of Paper, in which were written certain words of hers, that ſhe had, as report was then made, at ſundry times ſpoken in her Trances; whereupon it pleaſed the King's Grace to deliver me the Roll, commanding me to look thereon, and afterwards ſhew him what I thought therein. Whereunto, at another time, when his Highneſs asked me, I told him, That in good faith I found nothing in theſe words that I could any thing regard or eſteem; for ſeeing that ſome part fell in Rithm, and that, God wots, full rude alſo; for any reaſon, God wots, that I ſaw therein, a right ſimple Woman might, in my mind, ſpeak it of her own wit well enough. Howbeit, I ſaid, that becauſe it was conſtantly reported for a Truth, that God wrought in her, and that a Miracle was ſhewed upon her; I durſt not, nor would not, be bold in judging the Matter. And the King's Grace, as me thought, eſteemed the Matter as light as it after proved lewd.

From that time, till about Chriſtmaſs was twelve-month, albeit that continually there was much talking of her, and of her Holineſs, yet never heard I any Talk rehearſed, either of Revelation of hers, or Miracle, ſaying that I heard ſay divers times, in my Lord Cardinal's days, that ſhe had been both with his Lordſhip, and with the King's Grace, but what ſhe ſaid, either to the one or to the other, upon my Faith, I had never heard any one word. Now, as I was about to tell you, about Chriſtmaſs was twelve-month, Father Risby, Friar Obſervant, then of Canterbury, lodged one Night at mine Houſe; where, after Supper, a little before he went to his Chamber, he fell in communication with me of the Nun, giving her high commendation of Holineſs, and that it was wonderful to ſee and underſtand the Works that God wrought in her; which thing, I anſwered, That I was very glad to hear it, and thanked God thereof. Then he told me, that ſhe had been with my Lord Legat in his Life, and with the King's Grace too; and that that ſhe had told my Lord Legat a Revelation of hers, of three Swords that God hath put in my Lord Legat's hand, which if he ordered not well, God would lay it ſore to his Charge. The firſt, he ſaid, was the ordering the Spirituality under the Pope, as Legat. The ſecond, The Rule that he bore in order of the Temporality under the King, as his Chancellor. And the third, ſhe ſaid, was the medling he was put in truſt with by the King, concerning the great Matter of his Marriage. And therewithal I ſaid unto him, That any Revelation of the King's Matters I would not hear of, I doubt not but the Goodneſs of God ſhould direct his Highneſs, with his Grace and Wiſdom, that the thing ſhould take ſuch end as God ſhould be pleaſed with, to the King's Honour, and Surety of the Realm. When he heard me ſay theſe words, or the like, he ſaid unto me, That God had ſpecially commanded her to pray for the King; and forthwith he brake again into her Revelations concerning the Cardinal, that his Soul was ſaved by her Mediation; and without any other Communication went unto his Chamber. And he and I never talked any more of any ſuch manner of Matter, nor ſince his departing on the Morrow, I never ſaw him afterwards, to my remembrance, till I ſaw him at Paul's Croſs.

After this, about Shrovetide, there came unto me, a little before Supper, Father Rich, Friar Obſervant of Richmond; and as we fell in talking, I asked him of Father Risby, how he did? And upon that occaſion, he asked me, Whether Father Risby had any thing ſhewed me of the Holy Nun of Kent? and I ſaid, Yea, and that I was very glad to hear of her Vertue. I would not, quoth he, tell you again that you have heard of him already; but I have heard, and known, many great Graces that God hath wrought in her, and in other Folk, by her, which I would gladly tell you, if I thought you had not heard them already. And therewith he asked me, Whether Father Risby had told me any thing of her being with my Lord Cardinal? and I ſaid, Yea: Then he told you, quoth he, of the three Swords: Yea verily, quoth I. Did he tell you, quoth he, of the Revelations that ſhe had concerning the King's Grace? Nay forſooth, quoth I, nor if he would have done, I would not have given him the hearing; nor verily no more I would indeed, for ſith ſhe hath been with the King's Grace her ſelf, and told him, me-thought it a thing needleſs to tell me, or to any Man elſe. And when Father Rich perceived that I would not hear her Revelations concerning the King's Grace, he talked on a little of her Vertue, and let her Revelations alone; and therewith my Supper was ſet upon the Board, where I required him to ſit with me; but he would in no wiſe tarry, but departed to London. After that night I talked with him twice, once in mine own Houſe, another time in his own Garden at the Friars, at every time a great ſpace, but not of any Revelations touching the King's Grace, but only of other mean Folk, I knew not whom of, which things, ſome were very ſtrange, and ſome were very childiſh. But albeit, that he ſaid, He had ſeen her lie in her Trance in great pains, and that he had at other times taken great ſpiritual comfort in her Communication; yet did he never tell me that ſhe had told him thoſe Tales her ſelf; for if he had, I would, for the Tale of Mary Magdalene which he told me, and for the Tale of the Hoſtie, with which, as I have heard ſhe ſaid ſhe was Houſeled at the King's Maſs at Calice: If I had heard it of him, as told unto himſelf by her Mouth for a Revelation, I would have both liked him and her the worſe. But whether ever I heard the ſame Tale of Rich or of Risby, or of neither of them both, but of ſome other Man ſince ſhe was in hold, in good faith I cannot tell; but I wot well when or whereſoever I heard it, me thought it a Tale too marvellous to be true, and very likely that ſhe had told ſome Man her Dream, which told it out for a Revelation. And in effect, I little doubted but that ſome of theſe Tales that were told of her were untrue; but yet ſith I never heard them reported as ſpoken by her own Mouth, I thought nevertheleſs that many of them might be true, and ſhe a very vertuous Woman too; as ſome Lyes be peradventure written of ſome that be Saints in Heaven, and yet many Miracles indeed done by them for all that.

Houſeled

After this, I being upon a day at Sion, and talking with divers of the Fathers together at the Grate, they ſhewed me that ſhe had been with them, and ſhewed me divers things that ſome of them miſliked in her; and in this talking, they wiſhed that I had ſpoken with her, and ſaid, they would fain ſee how I ſhould like her. Whereupon, afterward, when I heard that ſhe was there again, I came thither to ſee her, and to ſpeak with her my ſelf. At which Communication had, in a little Chappel, there were none preſent but we two: in the beginning whereof, I ſhewed that my coming to her was not of any curious mind, any think to know of ſuch things as Folk talked, that it pleaſed God to reveal and ſhew unto her, but for the great Vertue that I had heard ſo many Years, every day more and more ſpoken and reported of her; I therefore had a great mind to ſee her, and be acquainted with her, that ſhe might have ſomewhat the more occaſion to remember me to God in her Devotion and Prayers: Whereunto ſhe gave me a very good vertuous Anſwer, That as God did of his goodneſs far better by her than ſhe, a poor Wretch, was worthy, ſo ſhe feared that many Folk yet beſide that ſpoke of their own favourable minds many things for her, far above the Truth, and that of me ſhe had many ſuch things heard, that already ſhe prayed for me, and ever would; whereof I heartily thanked her. I ſaid unto her, Madam, one Hellen, a Maiden dwelling about Totnam, of whoſe Trances and Revelations there hath been much talking, ſhe hath been with me of late, and ſhewed me, that ſhe was with you, and that after the rehearſal of ſuch Viſions as ſhe had ſeen you ſhewed her, that they were no Revelations, but plain Illuſions of the Devil, and adviſed her to caſt them out of her mind: And verily ſhe gave therein good credence unto you, and thereupon hath left to lean any longer unto ſuch Viſions of her own: Whereupon ſhe ſaith, ſhe findeth your words true, for ever ſince, ſhe hath been the leſs viſited with ſuch things as ſhe was wont to be before. To this ſhe anſwered me, Forſooth Sir, There is in this Point no praiſe unto me, but the Goodneſs of God, as it appeareth, hath wrought much meekneſs in her Soul, which hath taken my rude warning ſo well, and not grudged to hear her Spirit and her Viſions reproved. I liked her, in good Faith, better for this Anſwer, than for many of theſe things that I heard reported by her. Afterward ſhe told me, upon that occaſion, how great need Folk have, that are viſited with ſuch Viſions, to take heed heed, and prove well of what Spirit they come of; and in that Communication she told me, That of late the Devil, in likeness of a Bird, was flying and fluttering about her in a Chamber, and suffered himself to be taken; and being in hands, suddenly changed, in their sight that were present, into such a strange ugly-fashioned Bird, that they were all afraid, and threw him out at a Window.

For conclusion; we talked no word of the King's Grace, or any great Personage else, nor in effect, of any Man or Woman, but of her self and my self; but after no long communication had, for or ever we met, my time came to go home, I gave her a double Ducate, and prayed her to pray for me and mine, and so departed from her, and never spake with her after. Howbeit, of a truth, I had a great good opinion of her, and had her in great estimation, as you shall perceive by the Letter that I wrote unto her. For afterwards, because I had often heard that many right worshipful Folks, as well Men as Women, used to have much communication with her; and many Folk are of nature inquisitive and curious, whereby they fall sometimes into such talking, and better were to forbear, of which thing I nothing thought while I talked with her of Charity, therefore I wrote her a Letter thereof; which sith it may be peradventure, that she brake or lost, I shall insert the very Copy thereof in this present Letter.

These were the very words.

GOod Madam, and my right dearly-beloved Sister in our Lord God, after most hearty Commendation, I shall beseech you to take my good Mind in good worth, and pardon me, that I am so homely as of my self unrequired, and also without necessity, to give counsel to you, of whom for the good Inspirations, and great Revelations that it liketh Almighty God of his Goodness to give and shew, as many wise, well-learned, and very vertuous Folk testify, I my self have need, for the comfort of my Soul, to require and ask advice. For surely, good Madam, sith it pleased God sometime to suffer, such as are far under and of little estimation, to give yet fruitful advertisement to such other as are in the Light of the Spirit so far above them, that there were between them no comparison; as he suffered his High Prophet Moses to be in some things advised and counselled by Jethro, I cannot, for the love that in our Lord I bear you, refrain to put you in remembrance of one thing, which in my poor mind I think highly necessary to be by your Wisdom considered, referring the end, and the order thereof, to God and his Holy Spirit, to direct you. Good Madam, I doubt not, but that you remember that in the beginning of my Communication with you, I shewed you, that I neither was, nor would be, curious of any knowledg of other Mens Matters, and least of all of any Matter of Princes, or of the Realm, in case it so were, that God had, as to many good Folks before-time, he hath any time revealed unto you such things, I said unto your Ladyship, that I was not only not desirous to hear of, but also would not hear of. Now Madam, I consider well that many Folk desire to speak with you, which are not all peradventure of my mind in this Point; but some hap to be curious and inquiſitive of things that little pertain unto their parts; and ſome might peradventure hap to talk of ſuch things as might peradventure after turn to much harm; as I think you have heard how the late Duke of Buckingham, moved with the fame of one that was reported for an Holy Monk, and had ſuch talking with him, as after was a great part of his deſtruction, and diſheriting of his Blood, and great ſlander and infamy of Religion. It ſufficeth me, good Madam, to put you in remembrance of ſuch things, as I nothing doubt your Wiſdom, and the Spirit of God ſhall keep you from talking with any Perſon, ſpecially with high Perſons, of any ſuch manner things as pertain to Princes Affairs, or the State of the Realm, but only to commune and talk with any Perſon, high and low, of ſuch manner things as may to the Soul be profitable for you to ſhew, and for them to know. And thus, my good Lady, and dearly beloved Siſter in our Lord, I make an end of this my needleſs advertiſement unto you, whom the Bleſſed Trinity preſerve and increaſe in Grace, and put in your mind to recommend me and mine unto him in your devout Prayers. At Chelſey, this Tueſday, by the Hand of

Your hearty loving Brother and Beadſman,

Thomas More Kt.

At the receipt of this Letter, ſhe anſwered my Servant, that ſhe heartily thanked me: Soon after this there came to mine Houſe the Prior of the Charterhouſe at Schene, and one Brother Williams with him, who nothing talked to me, but of her, and of the great joy that they took in her Vertue, but of any of her Revelations they had no communication. But at another time Brother Williams came to me, and told me a long Tale of her, being at the Houſe of a Knight in Kent, that was ſore troubled with Temptations to deſtroy himſelf; and none other thing we talked of, nor ſhould have done of likelyhood, though we had tarried together much longer, he took ſo great pleaſure, good Man, to tell the Tale, with all the Circumſtances at length. When I came again another day to Sion, on a day in which there was a Profeſſion, ſome of the Fathers asked me how I liked the Nun? And I anſwered, that, in good Faith, I liked her very well in her talking; howbeit, quoth I, ſhe is never the nearer tried by that, for I aſſure you, ſhe were likely to be very bad, if ſhe ſeemed good, e're I ſhould think her other, till ſhe happened to be proved naught; and in good Faith, that is my manner indeed, except I were ſet to ſearch and examine the Truth, upon likelyhood of ſome cloaked evil; for in that caſe, although I nothing ſuſpected the Perſon my ſelf, yet no leſs than if I ſuſpected him ſore, I would as far, as my wit would ſerve me, ſearch to find out the truth, as your ſelf hath done very prudently in this Matter; wherein you have done, in my mind, to your great laud and praiſe, a very meritorious Deed, in bringing forth to light ſuch deteſtable Hypocriſy, whereby every other Wretch may take warning, and be feared to ſet forth their own deviliſh diſſembled falſhood, under the manner and colour of the wonderful Work of God; for verily, this Woman

ſo handled her ſelf, with help of that evil Spirit that inſpired her, that after her own Confeſſion declared at Paul's Croſs, when I ſent word by my Servant unto the Prior of the Charterhouſe, that ſhe was undoubtedly proved a falſe deceiving Hypocrite; The good Man had had ſo good opinion of her ſo long, that he could at the firſt ſcantly believe me therein. Howbeit it was not he alone that thought her ſo very good, but many another right good Man beſides, as little marvel was upon ſo good report, till ſhe was proved naught.

I remember me further, that in Communication between Father Rich and me; I counſelled him, that in ſuch ſtrange things as concerned ſuch Folk as had come unto her, to whom, as ſhe ſaid, ſhe had told the cauſes of their coming, e're themſelves ſpake thereof; and ſuch good Fruit as they ſaid that many Men had received by her Prayer, he, and ſuch other as ſo reported it, and thought that the knowledg thereof ſhould much pertain to the Glory of God, ſhould firſt cauſe the things to be well and ſure examined by the Ordinaries, and ſuch as had Authority thereunto; ſo that it might be ſurely known whether the things were true or not, and that there were no Letters intermingled among them, or elſe the Letters might after hap to aweigh the credence of theſe things that were true. And when he told me the Tale of Mary Magdalen, I ſaid unto him, Father Rich, that ſhe is a good vertuous Woman, in good Faith, I hear ſo many good Folk ſo report, that I verily think it true; and think it well-likely that God worketh ſome good and great things by her; but yet are, you wot well, theſe ſtrange Tales no part of our Creed; and therefore before you ſee them ſurely proved, yon ſhall have my poor counſel, not to wed your ſelf ſo far forth to the credence of them, as to report them very ſurely for true, leaſt that if it ſhould hap that they were afterwards proved falſe, it might miniſh your eſtimation in your Preaching, whereof might grow great loſs. To this he thanked me for my counſel, but how he uſed it after that, I cannot tell.

Thus have I, good Mr. Cromwell, fully declared to you, as far as my ſelf can call to remembrance, all that ever I have done or ſaid in this Matter, wherein I am ſure that never one of them all ſhall tell you any further thing of effect; for if any of them, or any Man elſe, report of me, as I truſt verily no Man will, and I wot well truly no Man can, any Word or Deed by me ſpoken or done, touching any breach of my legal Truth and Duty toward my moſt redoubted Soveraign, and natural Liege Lord, I will come to mine Anſwer, and make it good in ſuch wiſe as becometh a poor true Man to do; that whoſoever any ſuch thing ſhall ſay, ſhall therein ſay untrue: for I neither have in this Matter done evil, nor ſaid evil, nor ſo much as any evil thing thought, but only have been glad, and rejoiced of them that were reported for good; which condition I ſhall nevertheleſs keep toward all other good Folk, for the falſe cloaked Hypocriſy of any of theſe, no more than I ſhall eſteem Judas the true Apoſtle, for Judas the falſe Traitor.

But ſo purpoſe I to bear my ſelf in every Man's Company, while I live, that neither good Man nor bad, neither Monk, Friar, nor Nun, nor other Man or Woman in this World, ſhall make me digreſs from my Truth and Faith, either towards God, or towards my natural Prince, by the Grace of Almighty God; and as you therein find me true, ſo I heartily therein pray you to continue toward me your favour and good-will, as you ſhall be ſure of my poor daily Prayer; for other pleaſure can I not do you. And thus the Bleſſed Trinity, both bodily and ghoſtly, long preſerve and proſper you.

I pray you pardon me, that I write not unto you of mine own hand, for verily I am compelled to forbear writing for a while, by reaſon of this Diſeaſe of mine, whereof the chief occaſion is grown, as it is thought, by the ſtooping and leaning on my Breaſt, that I have uſed in writing. And thus, eft-ſoons, I beſeech our Lord long to preſerve you.

Ex MS. D.G. Petyte.

First, That ſuch as had Commiſſion to talk with my Lord Cardinal at his firſt coming, touching the Goods of the Church, ſhould have recourſe unto him, at the leaſt once in a week, not only for putting theſe Matters in execution, as much as may be, before the Parliament, but alſo to underſtand of him which way might be beſt to bring to good effect, thoſe Matters that have been begun concerning Religion, both touching good Preaching, I wiſh, that may ſupply and overcome the evil Preaching in time paſt; and alſo to make a ſure Proviſion, that no evil Books ſhall either be printed, bought, or ſold, without juſt puniſhment. Therefore I think it ſhould be well done, that the Univerſities and Churches of this Realm, ſhould be viſited by ſuch Perſons as my Lord Cardinal, with the reſt of you, may be well aſſured to be worthy and ſufficient Perſons to make a true and juſt account thereof, remitting the choice of them to him and you. Touching puniſhment of Hereticks, me thinketh it ought to be done without raſhneſs, not leaving in the mean while to do Juſtice to ſuch, as by Learning would ſeem to deceive the ſimple; and the reſt ſo to be uſed, that the People might well perceive them not to be condemned without juſt occaſion, whereby they ſhall both underſtand the Truth, and beware to do the like. And eſpecially in London, I would wiſh none to be burnt, without ſome of the Councils preſence, and both there and every-where, good Sermons at the ſame. I verily believe that many Benefices ſhould not be in one Man's hand, but after ſuch ſort as every Prieſt might look to his own Charge, and remain reſident there, whereby they ſhould have but one Bond to diſcharge towards God; Whereas now they have many, which I take to be the cauſe that in moſt part of this Realm there is over-much want of good Preachers, and ſuch as ſhould with their Doctrine overcome the evil diligence of the abuſed Preachers in the time of Schiſm, not only by their Preaching, but alſo by their good Example, without which, in mine Opinion, their Sermons ſhall not ſo much profit as I wiſh. And like-as their good Example, on their behalf, ſhall undoubtedly do much good, ſo I account my ſelf bound, on my behalf alſo, to ſhew ſuch example, in encouraging and maintaining thoſe Perſons, well-doing their Duty, (not forgetting, in the mean while, to correct and puniſh them which do contrary) that it may be evident to all this Realm how I diſcharge my Conſcience therein, and miniſter true Juſtice in ſo doing.

Injunctions by Hugh Latimer Biſhop of Worceſter, to the Prior and Convent of St. Mary Houſe in Worceſter, 1537.

Hugh, by the Goodneſs of God, Biſhop of Worceſter, wiſheth to his Brethren, the Prior and Convent aforeſaid, Grace, Mercy, Peace, and true knowledg of God's Word; from God our Father, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Foraſmuch as in this my Viſitation, I evidently perceive the Ignorance and Negligence of divers Religious Perſons in this Monaſtery to be intollerable, and not to be ſuffered; for that thereby doth reign Idolatry, and many kinds of Superſtitions, and other Enormities: And conſidering withal, that our Soveraign Lord the King, for ſome part of Remedy of the ſame, hath granted, by his moſt gracious License, that the Scripture of God may be read in Engliſh, of all his obedient Subjects. I therefore, willing your Reformation in moſt favourable manner, to your leaſt diſpleaſure; do heartily require you all, and every one of you, and alſo in God's behalf command the ſame, according as your Duty is, to obey me as God's Miniſter, and the King's, in all my lawful and honeſt Commandments; that you obſerve and keep inviolably, all theſe Injunctions following, under pain of the Law. L. 3us Reg. Prior. & Convent. Wigorn.

FIrſt; Foraſmuch as I perceive that ſome of you neither have obſerved the King's Injunctions, nor yet have them with you, as willing to obſerve them; therefore ye ſhall from henceforth, both have and obſerve diligently and faithfully, as well ſpecial commandments of Preaching, as other Injunctions given in his Grace's Viſitation.

Item. That the Prior ſhall provide, of the Monaſteries charge, a whole Bible in Engliſh, to be laid faſt chained in ſome open place, either in their Church or Cloiſter.

Item. That every Religious Perſon have, at the leaſt, a New Teſtament in Engliſh, by the Feaſt of the Nativity of our Lord next enſuing.

Item. Whenſoever there ſhall be any Preaching in your Monaſtery, that all manner of Singing, and other Ceremonies, be utterly laid aſide in his preaching time; and all other Service ſhortned, as need ſhall be; and all Religious Perſons quietly to hearken to the Preaching.

Item. That ye have a Lecture of Scripture read every day in Engliſh amongſt you, ſave Holy-days.

Item.

Item. That every Religious Perſon be at every Lecture, from the beginning to the ending, except they have a neceſſary Lett allowed them by the Prior.

Item. That every Religious Houſe have a Layman to their Steward, for all former Buſineſſes.

Item. That you have a continual Schoolmaſter, ſufficiently learned, to teach your Grammer.

Item. That no Religious Perſon diſcourage any manner of Lay-man or Woman, or any other from the reading of any good Book, either in Latin or Engliſh.

Item. That the Prior have at his Dinner or Supper, every day a Chapter read, from the beginning of the Scripture to the end, and that in Engliſh, whereſoever he be in any of his own Places, and to have edifying communication of the ſame.

Item. That the Covent ſit together, four to one Meſs, and to eat together in common, and to have Scripture read in likewiſe, and have communication thereof; and after their Dinner or Supper, their Reliques and Fragments to be diſtributed to the poor People.

Item. That the Covent and Prior, provide Diſtributions to be miniſtred in every Pariſh, whereas ye be Parſons and Proprietaries, and according to the King's Injunctions in that behalf.

Item. That all theſe my Injunctions be read every month, once in the Chapter Houſe, before all the Brethren.

A Letter of Ann Bolleyn's to Gardner.

Ex Chartophylac. Regio.

Mr. Stephens, I thank you for my Letter, wherein I perceive the willing and faithful Mind that you have to do me pleaſure, not doubting, but as much as is poſſible for Man's Wit to Imagine, you will do. I pray God to ſend you well to ſpeed in all your Matters, ſo that you would put me to the ſtudy how to reward your high Service: I do truſt in God you ſhall not repent it, and that the end of this Journey ſhall be more pleaſant to me than your firſt, for that was but a rejoicing hope, which ceaſing the lack of it, does put me to the more pain, and they that are partakers with me, as you do know: And therefore I do truſt that this hard beginning ſhall make the better ending.

Mr. Stephens, I ſend you here Cramp-Rings for you and Mr. Gregory, and Mr. Peter, praying you to diſtribute them as you think beſt. And have me recommended heartily to them both, as She, that you may aſſure them, will be glad to do them any pleaſure which ſhall lie in my power. And thus I make an end, praying God ſend you good health. Written at Greenwich, the 4*th* day of April.

A Letter of Gardiner's to King Henry the Eighth, concerning the Divorce.

An Original.

PLeaſeth it your Majeſty to underſtand, that beſides all other means uſed to the Pope's Holineſs, for attaining and atchieving your Highneſs Purpoſe and Intent, ſuch as in our common Letters to my Lord Legat's Grace, and my ſeveral Letters to the ſame be contained at length. I have alſo a-part ſhewed unto the Pope's Holineſs, that which your Highneſs ſhewed me in your Gallery at Hampton-Court, concerning the ſollicitation of the Princes of Almayn, and ſuch other Matter as ſhould and ought to fear the Pope's ſaid Holineſs; adding alſo thoſe Reaſons which might induce the ſame to adhere expreſly to your Highneſs, and the French King, and ſo to take the more courage to accompliſh your Highneſs Deſires: uſing all ways poſſible to enforce him to do ſomewhat, being a Man of ſuch Nature, as he never reſolveth any thing, but by ſome violent Affection compelled thereunto. And conſidering we can ſpeed no better at his hands, it agreeth with Ex Chartophylac. Regio.

that your Majeſty, of your high Wiſdom before perpended, that his Holineſs would do nothing which might offend the Emperor, unleſs he firſt determined himſelf to adhere to your Highneſs, and the French King, and ſo to declare himſelf, containing himſelf no longer in Neutrality; which he will not do: Ne the State of the Affairs here conſidered, it were for his Wealth ſo to do, unleſs the Leagues otherwiſe proceeded than they yet do, or that his Holineſs would determine himſelf to leave theſe Parts, and eſtabliſh his See in ſome other Place; foraſmuch, as here being, he is daily in danger of the Imperials, like as we have ſignified by our other Letters. His Holineſs is in great perplexity and Agony of Mind, nor can tell what to do: he ſeemeth in words, faſhion, and manner of ſpeaking, as though he would do ſomewhat for your Highneſs; and yet, when it cometh to the Point, nothing he doth: I dare not ſay certainly, whether it be for fear, or want of good Will, for I were loth to make a Lie of him, or to your Highneſs, my Prince, Soveraign Lord and Maſter. Finally, I perceive this by the Pope, and all other here, that ſo your Highneſs cauſe were determined there by my Lord's Legats, they would be glad thereof; and, as I think, if the Emperor would make any Suit againſt that which ſhall be done there, they would ſerve him as they now do your Highneſs, and ſo drive off the time, for they ſeem to be ſo minded, as in this Cauſe they would ſuffer much, but do very little: Wherefore if my Lord Campegius will ſet apart all other reſpects, and frankly promiſe your Highneſs to give Sentence for you, then muſt be your Highneſs Remedy ſhort and expedite; nor ſhall there want wit, by another means, to meet with ſuch delays, as this falſe counterfeit Breve hath cauſed. For with theſe Men here, your Highneſs ſhall by no Suit profit; which thing I write unto your Highneſs, as of my moſt bounden Duty I ought to do: there ſhall every day riſe new Devices, and none take effect, but long delays, and waſted time: wherefore doing what I can yet to get the beſt, although we be fully anſwered therein, I ſhall do what I can to get the Commiſſion amplified as much as may be, and at the leaſt, to extend to the reprobation of the Brief, if I can, for I dare promiſe nothing to your Majeſty at this Man's hands; and that which ſhall be obtained, if any be obtained, ſhall be, according to your Highneſs Pleaſure, ſent by Mr. Bryan.

And whereas your Highneſs, in your gracious Letters directed to me and my Colleagues, marvelleth that I have not e're this advertiſed the ſame, of ſuch Bulls as your Majeſty willed me to impetrate here; I thought verily, that foraſmuch as the ſame be to be impetrate at the Pope's Hand, and that we ſignified unto your Majeſty, by our Letters, of the Pope's great Sickneſs, and how we could not have acceſs unto the ſame, that it had been ſuperfluous for me, in my Letters, to make any mention of the ſaid Bulls: ſignifying unto your Highneſs now, that having thoſe Matters, as it becometh me to have in good remembrance, I have not yet broken with the Pope's Holineſs in them, nor thought good to interrupt the Proſecution of your Highneſs Matter, with the purſuit of thoſe, ſaving that I ſpake a word to the Pope's Holineſs, de Eccleſiis Cathedralibus, and his Holineſs ſaid nothing could be done till the Cardinal Sanctorum Quatuor be recovered. In other things I ſpeak not; for our Audience with the Pope's Holineſs hath been ſo ſcarce, that we thought it little enough to ſpend the ſame in your Highneſs principal Matter.

And to advertiſe your Highneſs what Counſel is here conducted for the defence of your Majeſty's Cauſe, the ſame ſhall underſtand that this Court, as it hath ſuffered in all other things, ſo it is alſo much appeyred in Learned Men, and of them that be, we dare not truſt every one, ne Cauſa Majeſtatis veſtræ illis denudata, they ſhould, prodere illam Adverſariis; wherefore counſelling, as yet only with two, the one called Dominus Michael, the other Dominus Sigiſmundus; we perceiving nothing to be ſolicited openly on the other ſide, and that here as yet, hath been no need to diſpute openly, have communicate your Highneſs Matter to no more. And as for that Article, Quod Papa non poſſit diſpenſare, the Pope himſelf will hear no Diſputations in it; and ſo he might retain your Highneſs good Mind, he ſeemeth not to care for himſelf, whether your Highneſs Cauſe be decided by that Article or no, ſo he did it not: but ſurely it appeareth, as a Man may gather by his faſhion and manner, that he hath made his account no further to meddle in your Highneſs Matter, neither with your Majeſty, nor againſt the ſame, but follow that ſhall be done by his Legats there. Wherefore if my Lord Campegius would promiſe your Majeſty to give Sentence frankly and apertly, having propitium Judicem, I would truſt, being there with ſuch Conſultations as I ſhould bring from hence to ſay ſomewhat to this Breve there, Apud illos & iſta eſt Sacra Anchora Majeſtatis veſtræ, for from hence ſhall come nothing but Delays; deſiring your Highneſs not to ſhew this to my Lord Campegius, nor my Lord's Grace.

Mr. Gregory ſendeth preſently unto your Highneſs the Promiſe made by the Pope's Holineſs, concerning your Highneſs Cauſe, at ſuch time as I went to Venice for his Cauſe, which Promiſe in the firſt three words, viz. Cum nos juſtitiam ejus Cauſæ perpendentes, &c. doth make as much, and more, for the maintenance of that ſhall be done in your Highneſs Cauſe; then if the Commiſſion Decretal, being in Cardinal Campegius's Hands, ſhould be ſhewed: and this your Highneſs at your liberty to ſhew to whom of your Council it ſhall pleaſe your Grace, thinking, in my poor Opinion, that it were not the beſt therefore to move the Pope in that Matter again in this adverſe Time.

I moſt humbly deſire your Majeſty, that I may be a Suitor to the ſame for the ſaid Mr. Gregory; ſo as by your moſt gracious Commandment, payment may be made there to his Factors, of ſuch Diets as your Highneſs alloweth him: for omitting to ſpeak of his true, faithful, and diligent Service, which I have heretofore, and do now perceive in him here; I aſſure your Highneſs, he liveth here ſumptuouſly and chargeably, to your Highneſs Honour, and in this great Scarcity, muſt needs be driven to Extremity, unleſs your Highneſs be a gracious Lord unto him in that behalf.

Thus having none other Matter whereof privately to write unto your Majeſty, beſides that is contained in our common Letters to my Lord Legat's Grace, desiring your Highness, that I may know your Pleasure what to do, in case none other thing can be obtained here. I shall make an end of these Letters, praying Almighty God to preserve your most noble and royal Estate, with a short expedition of this Cause, according to your Highness Purpose and Desire.

From Rome, the 21 day of April.

Your Highness most humble Subject,

Servant, and daily Orator,

A Letter written by the Monks of Glaſſenbury, for the new Founding of that Abbey.

An Original.

To the Right Honourable, the Lord Chamberlain to the Queen's Majeſty.

Ex MS. Nob. Illuſtr. Com. de Huntington.

RIght Honourable, in our moſt humble wiſe, your Lordſhips daily Beadſmen, ſometimes at the Houſe of Glaſſenbury, now here Monks in Weſtminſter, with all due ſubmiſſion, we deſire your Honour to extend your accuſtomed Vertue, as it hath been always heretofore propenſe to the Honour of Almighty God, to the honourable Service of the King and Queen's Majeſty; So it may pleaſe your good Lordſhip again, for the honour of them, both of God and their Majeſties, to put the Queen's Highneſs in remembrance of her gracious Promiſe, concerning the Erection of the late Monaſtery of Glaſſenbury; which Promiſe of her Grace hath been ſo by her Majeſty declared. That upon the ſame, we your Lordſhips daily Beadſmen, underſtanding my Lord Cardinals Grace's Pleaſure to the ſame, by the procurement hereof, our Reverend Father Abbot, hath gotten out the Particulars; and through a Warrant from my Lord Treaſurer, our Friends there have builded, and beſtowed much upon Reparation: Notwithſtanding all now ſtandeth at a ſtay; we think the Cauſe to be want of remembrance; which cannot ſo well be brought unto her Majeſty's underſtanding, as by your Honourable Lordſhips favour and help. And conſidering your Lordſhips moſt godly diſpoſition, we have a confidence thereof to ſollicite the ſame, aſſuring your Lordſhip of our daily Prayers while we live, and of our Succeſſors during the World, if it may ſo pleaſe your good Lordſhip to take it in hand.

We ask nothing in Gift to the Foundation, but only the Houſe and Scite, the reſidue for the accuſtomed Rent; So that with our Labour and Huſbandry, we may live here a few of us in our Religious Habits, till the Charity of good People may ſuffice a greater number: and the Country there being ſo affected to our Religion, we believe we ſhould find more help amongſt them, towards the Reparations and Furniture of the ſame; whereby we would happily prevent the ruin of much, and repair no little part of the whole, to God's Honour, and for the better proſperity of the King and Queens Majeſties, with the whole Realm; for, doubtleſs, if it ſhall pleaſe your good Lordſhip, if there hath ever been any flagitious Deed, ſince the Creation of the World, puniſhed of God, in our Opinion the overthrow of Glaſſenbury may be compared to the ſame, not ſurrendred, as other, but extorted; the Abbot prepoſterouſly put to death, with two innocent vertuous Monks with him; that if the thing were to be ſkanned by by any Univerſity, or ſome learned Councel in Divinity, they would find it more dangerous than it is commonly taken: which might move the Queen's Majeſty to the more ſpeedy Erection; namely, that being an Houſe of ſuch Antiquity, and of Fame through all Chriſtendom; firſt begun by St. Joſeph of Arimathea, (who took down the dead Body of our Saviour Chriſt from the Croſs) and lieth buried in Glaſſenbury: and him moſt heartily we beſeech with us, to pray unto Chriſt for good ſucceſs unto your Honourable Lordſhip, in all your Lordſhip's Affairs; and now eſpecially in this our moſt humble requeſt, that we may do the ſame in Glaſſenbury for the King and Queens Majeſties as our Founders, and for your good Lordſhip, as a ſingular Benefactor.

A Letter from Sir Edward Carne from Rome, ſhewing how the Pope diſſembled with him concerning a General Peace.

An Original.

PLeaſeth it your moſt Excellent Majeſty to be advertiſed, That Francis the Poſt arrived here upon Corpus Chriſti day, with your Majeſty's moſt gracious Letters, as well for the expedition of the Biſhopricks of Wincheſter and Cheſter, as alſo for his Holineſs beſide; with your moſt gracious Letters of the 30*th* of March to me: According to the purport whereof, I ſued for Audience at his Holineſs Hands, the next day following; whereof I had Anſwer, That I ſhould come to his Holineſs, viz. the ſixth of this; and being with his Holineſs, after the delivery of your Majeſty's moſt gracious Letters, with your Majeſty's humble Commendations. After he had read your Majeſty's Letter, in the preſence of the moſt Reverend Lord Cardinal Morone, he ſaid, how much he was bound to that Bleſſed Queen, and moſt Gracious and Loving Daughter, that had written to him ſo gratefully and humbly; ſaying, That he would keep that Letter to be read openly in the Conſiſtory, before all the moſt Reverend Lords his Brethren; and ſaid, that he was much bound to his Legate there, to make that good Report of him to your Majeſty. Whereupon I declared unto him your Majeſty's Pleaſure, according to my Inſtructions, with ſuch Thanks and Congratulations as your pleaſure was I ſhould uſe to his Holineſs, with the reſt of my Inſtructions; leaving no part thereof undeclared and ſpoken: Whereunto he ſaid, That his Affection to that bleſſed Queen (making a Croſs upon your Majeſty's Name contained Ex Chartophylac. Regio.

in the Letter) was not, neither could be as much as the goodneſs of her Majeſty required; but this your Majeſty ſhould be ſure of, he ſaid, that his good Affection, and good Will, ſhould not only continue, but encreaſe to the utmoſt, to the ſatisfaction of your Majeſty in all that may lie in him.

And as touching the Peace to be had perfectly, betwixt the Emperor's Majeſty, and the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty, and the French King, he was wondrous glad to hear that your Majeſty's furtherance ſhould not want in helping to bring the Truce, late concluded, to a perfect Peace. And of his part, he ſaid, that he ſent two Legats for that purpoſe, for his diſcharge towards God: Or elſe, he ſaid, if he ſhould overpaſs, and not declare unto them the great Neceſſities of the Common-Weal of all Chriſtendom to have a perfect Peace, God would impute his ſilence therein unto him, being appointed over his Flock here as he is: For, he ſaid, it is more than time to be doing therein, conſidering that the Realm of Polonia doth ſo waver, and that the King there neither can nor dare, being compaſſed with naughty Sects round about him, do any thing againſt them. And likewiſe the King of Romany about him. They call upon his Holineſs for help, and ſome Proviſion for Amendment; which thing he cannot do without a General Council, which, he ſaid, cannot be well done, unleſs the ſaid Peace be made; for though there be an Abſtinence from War, yet the grudg of the Doings heretofore, and the incertainty of Peace, will be an occaſion to keep Men of War, and the one ſhall be in miſtruſt of the other, in ſuch ſort, as the Paſſages cannot be ſure for thoſe that ſhould come to the ſaid Council: Therefore he will travel, as much as is poſſible for him, to have a Peace, without the which it will not be poſſible to do any good in the Council. His Holineſs is minded to have the General Council here in St. John Latarenenſe, and thinks it the moſt meeteſt Place, for divers conſiderations which he declared; For it is the Head Church of Chriſtendom, and there hath been divers times many wholſome and Holy Councils in times paſt. And for that this City is Communis Patria, and free to all the World to reſort to freely, truſting that all Neceſſaries ſhall come hither, both by Sea and Land. And alſo foraſmuch as in divers Councils begun in times of his Predeceſſors, little good could be done; and Men thought that more good might have been done, if the Pope had been preſent himſelf in the ſaid Councils; therefore his Holineſs would be preſent himſelf in this Council; which he cannot, being in a manner decrepit for Age, in caſe it were kept far here-hence; he not being able to travel for Age, unleſs it be kept here, where he truſteth to be himſelf in Perſon. And for to conclude this Matter, in ſuch ſort as the Neceſſity of Chriſtendom requireth, he hath diſpatched the two Legats, de Latere ſuo, at this preſent, wherein he knoweth that your Majeſty may do more than any others, and doubteth not but your Majeſty will ſo do. Concluding that God hath preſerved your Majeſty to help all the World; whereunto I ſaid, That there ſhould not want neither good Will, neither any other thing that your Majeſty might do for the furtherance thereof.

As touching the Proviſions of Wincheſter and Cheſter, it ſhall be done with all the ſpeed that may be. And his Holineſs hath promiſed all the favour that he can conveniently ſhew for your Majeſty's ſake: It muſt have ſomewhat longer time, for that the Proceſs made there by my Lord Legat's Grace, for to try the Yearly Value of Wincheſter, muſt be committed to certain Cardinals, for to report in the Conſiſtory before the new Tax can be made; but there ſhall be no time loſt, for it ſhall be diligently ſollicited.

Alſo concerning the Pention to my Lord Cardinal's Grace, of a thouſand Pounds Sterling Yearly, the Pope his Holineſs will aſſign it according to your Majeſty's Pleaſure; ſo that all ſhall be done therein with all the ſpeed that may be, God willing; wherein the moſt reverend Lord Cardinal Morone, who rejoiceth much in your Gracious Letters ſent to him, to his great comfort, doth travel, as he is moſt ready always, in all that toucheth your Majeſty, or any of your moſt noble Realms.

As concerning the Occurrents here, ſince my laſt Letters of the fifteenth of the laſt, be none other, but that the Cardinal de Caraffa, departed here-hence towards France, the fourteenth of the laſt, with divers Antiquities to be preſented to the French King. Some ſay here, that part of his Charge is, to move the French King to take the Dukedom of Paleano in his Protection, as he hath Parma and Mirandula. There be a great number of Workmen already gone to Fortify Paleano, Neptuno, and Rocca del Papa; and certain Captains appointed and gone thither alſo.

The Legat to the Emperor's Majeſty, and the King's Majeſty, departed the 30*th* of the laſt.

The Ambaſſador of Polonia is returned toward his Maſter. His Petition, as I am informed, to his Holineſs, was, to have Licenſe for Prieſts to Marry, and all Lay-folk to receive the Communion, ſub utraque ſpecie, in the Realm of Polonia, and certain Diſmes upon the Clergy, to be ſpent againſt the Turk. His Anſwer, as I hear, was, in general, with relation of all ſuch Matters to the General Council.

Alſo there came hither four Ambaſſadors very honourably from the State of Genua, with the Obedience of that State to his Holineſs: Which Ambaſſador did viſit me, declaring the good Will, Amity, and Service, that the ſaid State bare towards the King, and your moſt Excellent Majeſty, deſiring me advertiſe your Majeſty thereof.

The 24*th* of the laſt, the Pope's Holineſs kept the Anniverſary of his Coronation: I was warned to be at the Chappel, by the Officers appointed for that purpoſe. Alſo one of his Holineſs Gentlemen was ſent to invite me to dine with his Holineſs that day. At my coming to the Court, the Ambaſſador of Portugal being there, at his Holineſs coming forth, would have kept the Place, amongſt all the Ambaſſadors, from me, that I was wont to ſtand in, that is, next the French Ambaſſador; And next to me would be the Ambaſſador of Polonia. I came to the Ambaſſador of Portugal, as gently as I could; and for that he would not give me my Place, I took him by the Shoulder, and removed him out of that Place, ſaying, That it was your Majeſty's Ambaſſador's Place always. Beneath me he would not ſtand, neither next me he ſhould not, for the Ambaſſador of Polonia who claimed next to me: Whereupon the Portugal went and complained to the Duke of Paleano, who who went ſtreight to the Pope; and after him went the ſaid Ambaſſador of Portugal to him himſelf. His Holineſs willed him to depart there-hence. He deſired that I ſhould depart likewiſe. And thereupon the Duke came to me, ſaying, That the Pope his Pleaſure was, I ſhould depart alſo. I asked him, Why? He ſaid, That his Holineſs, to avoid diſſention, would have me to depart. I told him, I made no Diſſention; for if the other would keep his own Place, and not uſurp upon the Place that always the Ambaſſadors of England, in times paſt, were wont to be in, he might be in quiet, and ſuffer me to be in quiet likewiſe, and not to ſeek that ſeemed him not. All this Year he never ſought it till now, why now, I cannot tell; but he may be ſure he ſhall not have it of me, unleſs your Majeſty command it. Alſo the Maſter of the Houſhold with his Holineſs, ſaid, That I was invited, and that Portugal was not, but came upon his own Head.

I am much bound to the Marqueſs, he was very angry with the Portugal, being his Brother, to attempt any ſuch thing againſt your Majeſty's Ambaſſador; and ſent to me, as ſoon as he heard of it. Indeed he was not there, I kept my Place from him, ſending him to ſeek his Place in ſuch ſort, that all the Ambaſſadors thought it well done; and others that were indifferent, ſaid no leſs. I told the Duke that I would not loſe a jot of your Majeſty's Honour for no Man. For it is the Place of Ambaſſadors of England, nigh a thouſand Years before there was any King in Portugal.

Other Occurrents here be none. And thus I beſeech Almighty God to conſerve your moſt Excellent Majeſty, in long and moſt proſperous Life.

From Rome, the 9*th* of June, 1556.

Foraſmuch as divers deviliſh and clamorous Perſons, have not only invented, bruited, and ſet forth divers falſe Rumours, Tales, and ſeditious Slanders againſt Us, but alſo have ſown divers Hereſies and Heretical Opinions; and ſet forth divers ſeditious Books within this our Realm of England, meaning thereby to move, procure, and ſtir up Diviſions, Striſe, Contentions and Seditions, not only amongſt Our loving Subjects, but alſo betwixt Us and Our ſaid Subjects; with divers other outragious Miſdemeanours, Enormities, Contempts, and Offences daily committed and done, to the diſquieting of Us and Our People; We minding and intending the due puniſhment of ſuch Offenders, and the repreſſing of ſuch-like Offences, Enormities, and Miſbehaviours from henceforth, having ſpecial truſt and confidence in your Fidelities, Wiſdoms, and Diſcretions, have authoriſed, appointed, and aſſigned you to be Our Commiſſioners; and by theſe Preſents do give full Power and Authority unto you, and three of you, to enquire, as well by the Oaths of twelve good and lawful Men, as by Witneſſes, and all other means and politick ways you can deviſe, of all and ſundry Hereſies, Heretical Opinions, Lollardies; heretical and ſeditious Books, Concealments, Contempts, Conſpiracies, and of all falſe Rumours, Tales, Seditious and Clamorous Words and Sayings, raiſed, publiſhed, bruited, invented, or ſet forth againſt Us, or either of Us; or againſt the quiet Governance and Rule of Our People and Subjects, by Books, Letters, Tales, or otherwiſe, in any County, City, Burrough, or other Place or Places within this Our Realm of England, and elſewhere, in any Place or Places beyond the Seas; and of

of the bringers in Uſers, Buyers, Sellers, Readers, Keepers, or Conveyers of any ſuch Letters, Books, Rumour, or Tale; and of all and every their Coadjutors, Counſellors, Conſorters, Procurers, Abetters, and Maintainers, ; Giving to you, and three of you, full Power and Authority, by vertue hereof, to ſearch out, and take into your hands and Poſſeſſion, all manner of heretical and ſeditious Books, Letters, Writings, whereſoever they, or any of them ſhall be found, as well in Printers Houſes and Shops, as elſewhere; willing you, and every of you, to ſearch for the ſame in all places, according to your diſcretions. And alſo to enquire, hear, and determine, all and ſingular Enormities, Diſturbances, Miſbehaviours, Miſdemeanours and Negligences, done, ſuffered, or committed, in any Church, Chappel, or other hallowed Place within this Realm. And alſo for and concerning the taking away, or the with-holding of any Lands, Tenements, Goods, and Ornaments, Stocks of Mony, or other things belonging to any of the ſame Churches and Chappels, and all Accompts and Reckonings concerning the ſame. And alſo to enquire and ſearch out all ſuch Perſons as obſtinately do refuſe to preach the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, to hear Maſs, or come to their Pariſh, or other convenient Places, appointed for Divine Service; and all ſuch as refuſe to go in Proceſſions, to take Holy Water, or Holy Bread; or otherwiſe do miſuſe themſelves in any Church, or other Hallowed Place, whereſoever any of the ſame Offences have been, or hereafter ſhall be, committed within this Our ſaid Realm. Nevertheleſs Our Will and Pleaſure is, That when, and as often as any Perſon or Perſons hereafter to be called or convented before you, do obſtinately perſiſt or ſtand in any manner of Hereſy, or heretical Opinions, that then ye, or three of you, do immediately take order, that the ſame Perſon, or Perſons, ſo ſtanding or perſiſting, be delivered and committed to his Ordinary, there to be uſed according to the Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical Laws. And alſo We give unto you, or three of you, full Power and Authority to enquire and ſearch out all Vagabonds and Maſterleſs Men, Barretors, Quarrellers, and ſuſpect Perſons, Vagrant, or abiding within the City of London, or ten miles compaſs of the ſame; and all Aſſaults and Affrays done and committed within the ſame City, and Compaſs. And further, to ſearch out all Waſtes, Decays, and Ruines of Churches, Chancels, Chappels, Parſonages, and Vicarages, in whatſoever Dioceſs the ſame be within this Realm. Giving to you, or any three of you, full Power and Authority, by vertue hereof to hear and determine the ſame, and all other Offences and Matters above ſpecified and rehearſed, according to your Wiſdoms, and Conſciences, and Diſcretions; willing and commanding you, or three of you, from time to time, to uſe and deviſe all ſuch politic ways and means, for the trial and ſearching out of the Premiſes, as by you, or three of you, ſhall be thought moſt expedient and neceſſary; and upon enquiry, and due proof had, known, perceived, and tried out by the Confeſſion of the Parties, or by ſufficient Witneſſes, before you, or three of you, concerning the Premiſes, or any part thereof, or by any other ways or meanes requiſite, to give and award ſuch puniſhment to the Offenders, by Fine, Impriſonment, or otherwiſe; and to take ſuch order for redreſs and reformation of the Premiſes, as to your Wiſdoms, or three of you, ſhall be thought meet and

and convenient. Further willing and commanding you, and any three of you, in caſe you ſhall find any Perſon or Perſons, obſtinate or diſobedient, either in their appearance before you, or three of you, at your calling or aſſignment; or elſe in not accompliſhing, or not obeying your Decrees, Orders, and Commandments, in any thing or things touching the Premiſes, or anv part thereof, to commit the ſame Perſon, or Perſons, ſo offending, to Ward, there to remain, till they be by you, or three of you, enlarged and delivered. And We give to you, and any three of you, full Power and Authority, by theſe Preſents, to take and receive, by your Diſcretions, of every Offender, or ſuſpect Perſon, to be convented or brought before you, a Recognizance or Recognizances, Obligation or Obligations to Our uſe, of ſuch Sum or Sums of Mony, as to you, or three of you, ſhall ſeem convenient, as well for the perſonal appearance before you, of any ſuch ſuſpect Perſon, or for the performance and accompliſhment of your Orders and Decrees, in caſe you ſhall think ſo convenient, as for the ſure and true payment of all and every ſuch Fine and Fines, as ſhall hereafter be by you, or three of you, taxed or aſſeſſed upon any Offender that ſhall be before you, or three of you, duly convinced, as is aforeſaid, to Our uſe, to be paid at ſuch days and times, as by you, or three of you, ſhall be ſealed, limited, or appointed: And you to certifie any ſuch Recognizance, or Obligation, as being taken for any Fine, or Fines, not fully and wholly paid before you, under your Hands and Seals, or the Hands and Seals of three of you, into Our Court of Chancery, to the intent We may be therefore duly anſwered, as appertaineth.

And furthermore, We give to you, or three of you, full Power and Authority, by theſe Preſents, not only to call afore you all and every Offender and Offenders, and all and every ſuſpect Perſon and Perſons in any of the Premiſes, but alſo all ſuch, and ſo many Witneſſes as ye ſhall think meet to be called; and them, and every of them, to examine and compel to Anſwer, and Swear, upon the Holy Evangeliſt, to declare the Truth in all ſuch things, whereof they, or any of them ſhall be examined, for the better trial, opening, and declaration of the Premiſes, or of any part thereof.

And furthermore, Our Will and Pleaſure is, that you, or three of you, ſhall name and appoint, one ſufficient Perſon to gather up and receive all ſuch Sums of Mony as ſhall be aſſeſſed or taxed by you, or three of you, for any Fine or Fines, upon any Perſon or Perſons, for their Offence; and you, or three of you, by Bill, or Bills, ſigned with your Hands, ſhall, and may aſſign and appoint, as well to the ſaid Perſon for his pains in receiving the ſaid Sums, as alſo to your Clark, Meſſengers, and Attendants upon you, for their travel, pains and charge to be ſuſtained for Us about the Premiſes, or any part thereof, ſuch ſum and ſums of Mony for their Rewards, as by you, or three of you, ſhall be thought expedient. Willing and commanding you, or three of you, after the time of this Our Commiſſion is expired, to certify into our Exchequer, as well the Name of the ſaid Receiver, as alſo a Note of ſuch Fines as ſhall be ſet or taxed before you, to the intent, that upon the determination of the Account of the ſame Receiver, We may be anſwered, that that to Us ſhall juſtly appertain. Willing and Commanding alſo all Our Auditors, and other Officers, upon the ſight of the ſaid Bills, ſigned with the Hands of you, or three of you, to make to the ſaid Receiver, due allowance, according to the ſaid Bills upon his account. Wherefore We Will and Command you, our ſaid Commiſſioners, with diligence to execute the Premiſes, with effect: any of Our Laws, Statutes, Proclamations, or other Grants, Privileges, or Ordinances, which be, or may ſeem to be contrary to the Premiſes, notwithſtanding.

And moreover, We Will and Command, all and ſingular Juſtices of Peace, Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Conſtables, and all other Our Officers, Miniſters, and faithful Subjects, to be aiding, helping, and aſſiſting to you, at your commandment, in the due execution hereof, as they tender Our Pleaſure, and will anſwer to the Coſts, at their utmoſt Perils.

And We Will and Grant, That theſe Our Letters Patents ſhall be a ſufficient Warrant and Diſcharge for you, and any of you, againſt Us, Our Heirs and Succeſſors; and all, and every other Perſon or Perſons whatſoever they be, of, for, or concerning the Premiſes, or any parcel thereof, or for the execution of this Our Commiſſion, or any part thereof.

In Witneſs Whereof, We have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patents, and to continue and endure for one whole Year next coming after the Date hereof. Witneſs Our Self at Weſtminſter, the 8*th* day of February, the third and fourth Years of Our Reign.

A Letter writ by the Council, expreſſing their Jealouſies of the Lady Elizabeth.

An Original.

Cotton Libr. Titus B. 2.

Mr. Pope, after our very hearty Commendations, ye ſhall underſtand, That amongſt divers other deviliſh Practices, attempted from time to time, by Dudly Aſhton, and other Traitors in France, for the diſturbance of the Quiet of the Realm; they have now lately ſent over one Cleyberdo, who (if I the Lord Chancellor be not deceived in the Man) was, whilſt I was Preſident in Wales, indicted of a Burglary, and ſhould have been, if he had not eſcaped by the means of certain his Complices, who took him from the Sheriffs Man, as well for the ſaid Burglary, as for divers other notable Robberies, and other Offences, made ſure enough from attempting this Enterprize now. This Man being ſent by the foreſaid Traitors into the extream parts of Eſſex and Suffolk; where naming himſelf to be Earl of Devonſhire, he hath, by ſpreading abroad of ſlanderous Letters & Proclamations, abuſed the Lady Elizabeth's Graces Name; pronouncing thereby, as much as in him lay, to ſtir the King's and Queen's Majeſties Subjects in thoſe parts to Rebellion, as by the Copies of the ſaid Letters and Proclamations, which we ſend unto you herewith, may at better length appear unto you. And albeit the People there have ſhewed themſelves ſo true and and obedient Subjects, as immediately upon the understanding of this Enterprize, they did of themselves, and without any Commandment, apprehend as many of the Attempters of this deviliſh Practice as they could come by, whereby their good-will and truth to the King and Queen's Majeſties doth well appear. Yet becauſe this Matter is ſpread already abroad, and that peradventure many Conſtructions and Diſcourſes will be made thereof, we have thought meet to ſignify the whole Circumſtances of the Cauſe unto you, to be by you opened unto the Lady Elizabeth's Grace, at ſuch time as ye ſhall think convenient; to the end it may appear unto her how little theſe Men ſtick, by falſhood and untruth, to compaſs their Purpoſe; not letting, for that intent, to abuſe the Name of her Grace, or any others: which their Deviſes nevertheleſs are (God be thanked) by his Goodneſs diſcovered from time to time to their Majeſties preſervance, and confuſion of their Enemies. And ſo bid you heartily well to fare. From Eltham, the 30*th* of July, 1556.

An Original.

PLeaſe it your moſt excellent Majeſties, according as I advertiſed your Highneſs in my Letters of the 8*th* of this; So I have informed all the Cardinals that be here of the Congregation of the Inquiſition, as the moſt Reverend Lord Cardinal Morone adviſed me, informing them of the good Proceedings and Reformations made, by the moſt Reverend Lord Cardinal's Grace there, as well in Clero as in Populo; not only in things pertaining ad cultum Dei, but alſo in other, pertaining to the Common-Weal of Chriſt's Church, in ſuch ſort as Chriſt's Religion doth ſo proſper there, that there is good hope all things ſhould come to their perfection in time. And for that purpoſe his Grace had called there a Synod of the Clergy of the Realm, where many good Ordinances, for the maintenance of the Premiſes been paſt already; and many ready in hand for to paſs, and not fully ended nor perfected: which ſhould be ſtaid, in caſe the Legacy ſhould be there-hence revoked, which might turn to the great danger and damage of many in that your Majeſty's Realm, in caſe due Reformation throughout and perfectly were not made: Therefore I deſired them, Ex Chartophylac. Regio.

that when the Matter were moved amongſt them, ſo to weigh it, as ſuch a good beginning, that through your Majeſty's Goodneſs hath been there, be not brought by their doings here, into no worſe terms, then your Majeſties, with no little pain, have always travelled to bring it unto: Adding beſides divers Caſes that daily might fall, which could not be holpen without the Authority of this See: And that Men newly reduced to the Unity of the Church, would rather ſtand in their naughty Doings, whoſe Examples might be noiſome to many, than repair hither for any help; But having the Legat there, would gladly ſeek help at his hands being preſent amongſt them.

And likewiſe for reduction of your Majeſty's Realm of Ireland to the Unity of the Church, which whether it were paſt or no, I doubted, and ended throughly: And if it were, yet were it moſt expedient that there ſhould be Reformation, as well in Clero as in Populo; which could not well be, in caſe the Legacy continue not there. This is the effect of the Points that I informed them upon, who all thought it moſt expedient, that the Legacy ſhould continue there, and would not fail to ſtay, as much as might lie in them, for theſe Conſiderations above rehearſed; and thought, being of ſuch importance, that if my Lord's Grace were not there already, it were moſt expedient that he ſhould be ſent thither, rather than to be revoked; and hereof, as well Cardinal Morone, as all the other, would needs I ſhould move his Holineſs.

Whereupon the 12*th* of this, I went to the Pope himſelf, upon pretence to give him Thanks for the Proviſion of the Church of Chicheſter, and of the moſt gracious and honourable Report that he made in the Conſiſtory the ſame time, of your Highneſs my Soveraign Lady the Queen; where his Holineſs declared ſo much Goodneſs and Vertue of your Majeſty, that he, and his See, could not, he ſaid, ſhew ſo much favour to any of yours, as the ſame required. As undoubtedly, as far as I could here, he doth, whenſoever he hath occaſion to ſpeak of your Majeſty, ſo reverently as more could not be; who prevented me, and ſaid, that he was glad that I was come unto him, and truſted that God had ſent me thither: for there had been with him, the day before, Cardinal Pacheco, who ſhewed him of the good inclination of your Majeſty, my Soveraign Lord, to have Peace with him and the Church. And that alſo he had received a Letter from the moſt Reverend Lord Cardinal's Grace there-hence, who had ſpoken with your Majeſty, and found the ſame ſo well inclined to have Peace with his Holineſs, as might be deſired; which his Holineſs ſaid he liked very well, and held up his hands, beſeeching Almighty God to continue your Majeſty in that good mind. And then he began to declare, how that God provided, and always confirmed you, the Queen's Majeſty, not only to do good to that Realm, but to all Chriſtendom alſo; in whom his Holineſs had ſuch hope, that the ſame will ſo help with the King's Majeſty, that Peace may follow betwixt the Church and him: and he of his part coveted nothing more, as it ſhould appear, if the King's Majeſty would treat of it; Yea, he ſaid, though he ſhould ſuſtain great Damage thereby, he will win his Majeſty if he can.

And where his Majeſty is informed, that his Holineſs would hear none of thoſe that were ſent to him from his Majeſty, as Franciſco Pacheco, Pacheco, and one Citizen of Naples; he ſaid, That he never heard that either the ſaid Franciſco, or the ſaid Citizen, had any Letter or Word to him from his Majeſty; If they had had, he, as he ſaid, who giveth Audience daily to as many as do ſeek it at his hands, without denial, would have heard them, or any that had been ſent from his Highneſs; and this, he ſaid, all that be about him can teſtify, and called God to Record of it. And yet, he ſaid, that the King's Majeſty is informed of the contrary; whereupon, he ſaid, that his Majeſty was brought in belief, that it was ſufficient for his Highneſs to offer himſelf to be heard, and ſeeing he could not, he was diſcharged towards God, and ſo lay the fault in his Holineſs; from the which Error, ſo his Holineſs named it, he would and wiſhed that his Majeſty ſhould be brought: for his Holineſs cauſed to be enquired of them, Whether they had any Letters, or any thing to ſay of his Majeſty's behalf to him, and could hear of none; Wherefore his Holineſs deſired me to write to your Majeſty, and to ſignify the ſame to your Highneſs; and of his Holineſs behalf, to pray you to adverti ſe the King's Majeſty, that therein was no lack of his Holineſs: Saying, If his Majeſty had ſent to him, he would have gladly heard him; or if it may pleaſe his Majeſty yet to ſend, no Man will be more glad thereof than he: And ſaid further, that God, who had called him to that place, knew that he always hath been of mind to have a General Council for a Reformation throughout Chriſtendom, and in ſuch Place as had been meet for it; and doubted not, but that he would have ſeen Chriſtendom in ſuch Order, that ſuch Enormities as do reign in many Parts, ſhould have been reformed, if theſe Wars had not troubled him: Saying therewith, That the Power of the Church is not able to maintain Wars of it ſelf, but that God had provided Aid elſewhere; but if he can have Peace, he will embrace it, he ſaid, though it were to his loſs. And prayed me to deſire your Majeſty, of his behalf, to put to your good help towards it. To whom after Thanks firſt given to his Holineſs for the ſaid good Opinion that he had of your Majeſty, and alſo of the Proviſion made of the ſaid Church of Chicheſter, I ſaid, that I was glad to hear of that good inclination of his Holineſs to Peace; and ſaid, that I would gladly ſignify to you, the Queen's Majeſty, according to his Holineſs Pleaſure: And that I had heard of divers, that his Holineſs would not give Audience, to ſuch as you my Soveraign Lord had ſent to him; whereof I was ſorry, and yet nevertheleſs truſted that betwixt his Holineſs and your Majeſty, ſhould be as great Amity as appertaineth; and had not ſo good hope thereof, ſithence this War began, as now hearing his Holineſs to be ſo well inclined to it; not doubting but all the World ſhould perceive no lack of your Majeſty's behalf, as far as any Reaſon required.

Whether this be done for a practice to pleaſe, leſt any ſtir be there, againſt the Frenchmen, which is moſt feared here, I am not able to ſay, for there lacketh no practice in this Court that they think may ſerve for their purpoſe. The truth is, that there is jarring betwixt the Pope and the French now; with whom the Pope is nothing contented, neither they with him, as it is credibly reported here. All the Italians that the Pope had in the French Camp be all gone; the French handled them them very ill and vile, and eſpecially Don Antonio de Caraffa the Pope's Nephew: So that it is thought here, that the Pope will turn the Leaf, if any were here of your behalf, the King's Majeſty, that had Authority to treat with his Holineſs: And if it pleaſe your Majeſty to ſend any hither for that purpoſe, by the Opinion of all your Majeſty's well-willers here, there can come but good of it.

After this Communication, I lamented to his Holineſs greatly of one thing, that I had heard his Holineſs pretended to do: And foraſmuch as your Majeſty had placed me here with his Holineſs, and that the caſe was ſuch, that it touched the maintenance of the Common-Wealth of Chriſtian Religion within your Majeſty's Realm there, ſo much, that of Duty I could do no leſs but open it to his Holineſs, truſting that the ſame, who had always ſhewed himſelf moſt ready, with all benignity, to do for You, the Queen's Majeſty, and your Realm, would ſo continue ſtill: Which thing was, I ſaid, That his Holineſs would revoke his Legat there, which ſhould be too great a prejudice to the Church of that Realm, to be done before all things were truly ſtabliſhed there, and opened unto his Holineſs all the Conſiderations before rehearſed, whereof I had informed the Cardinals in as ample manner as I could. Then, he ſaid, that there was nothing that he could do for you, the Queen's Majeſty, or your ſaid Realm, but he would do it moſt gladly, unleſs occaſion ſhould be given there-hence that he might not. And as touching the Revocation of the Legat in England, he ſaid, That it was done already, and not for to provide any thing within that Realm, but only for becauſe, it was not convenient that any Legat of his ſhould be within any of the King's Majeſty's Realms or Dominions; and therefore he revoked his Nuncio's from Naples, from Spain, and all other parts of the King's Majeſty's Realms and Dominions, and of England therefore: Nevertheleſs, he ſaid, if you the Queen's Majeſty would write to him, for the continuance of his Legat there, he would reſtore him to his former Authority, or any thing elſe that your Majeſty ſhould think expedient for him to do. Then, I ſaid, It would be long time before Anſwer can come from England hither; and if his Revocation ſhould be once known in England, what would come of it, I doubted. Therefore I beſought his Holineſs not to ſuffer it to paſs, for if it be once known abroad, it ſhall be a great comfort to the Wicked, and diſcomfort to the Good, whereby many Inconveniences might enſue. Then, he ſaid, that that is done, cannot be undone. I ſaid, That his Holineſs had not ſo far gone in his Decree, but that he might moderate it, that it need not extend to England. And then I told him, that he had ſhewed me, that in all his Proceedings, he would have your Majeſty's Realm of England ſeparated from all other the King's Majeſty's Realms, and now had ſet it as far further as any of the other; therefore, I ſaid, his Holineſs ſhould conſider it, and that the Decree in no wiſe ſhould extend thither. Then, he ſaid, That it could not ſtand with the Majeſty of the Place that he ſat in, to revoke any part of the Decree ſolemnly given in the Conſiſtory, in the preſence of all the Cardinals. I ſaid, That his Holineſs, with his Honour, might well do it; conſidering, that when he gave the Decree, he was not informed of ſuch Inconveniences that might enſue thereof; and now being informed by me, his Holineſs had not only a juſt cauſe to revoke it, but alſo of congruence ought to do it; conſidering that his Holineſs had the Cure of all Mens Souls: and if any Inconveniency ſhould follow through his Holineſs Doings, it could not be choſen but his Holineſs muſt anſwer for it; where his Holineſs ſuffering all things to proceed in his due courſe, as it hath been begun, all Dangers that have been before rehearſed might be avoided; therefore now his Holineſs had a good Cauſe to ſtay his Decree in that behalf: All which he took in good part, and ſaid thus, I muſt needs do for that Realm what I can, and therefore to morrow is the Congregation of the Inquiſition, and then the Matter ſhall be propounded, where, he ſaid, he would do what he could; and willed me to reſort to the Cardinal St. Jacobo to inform him, that he might procure it there. I ſaid, I would; indeed I had been with the ſaid Cardinal before, and had informed him fully; nevertheleſs I went to him again, to ſhew him the Pope's Pleaſure therein; who ſaid, he would do his Duty therein. Indeed that Matter occupied the Pope and the Cardinals all that Congregation time. The next morrow, as the Cardinals ſaid, the Concluſion was, That the Pope would make anſwer to me himſelf. Indeed he thought to take Counſel of the ſaid Congregation, before I had been with them about the ſame Decree, but not to revoke any part thereof, but to have their advice in framing of it. So that if I had not gone to him, the Decree had gone forth, with the intimation thereof, and the inhibition; but being with his Holineſs this Evening, to know what was to be had herein; his Holineſs, after a long Oration, in commendation of you the Queen's Majeſty, he ſaid, That in caſe your moſt Excellent Majeſty would write to him for the continuance of his Legat, for ſuch Cauſes as ſhould ſeem good to the ſame, the Legat to be yet expedient therein, he would appoint my Lord's Grace there to continue, but he could in no wiſe revoke his Decree made in open Conſiſtory. I laid many things that his Holineſs might do it, and that divers of his Predeceſſors had done it, upon Cauſes before not known; with divers Examples that I ſhewed him in Law; that at the laſt, he ſaid plainly, He would not revoke his Decree; but for becauſe of my Suit, he ſaid he was content to ſtay, and to go no further till your Majeſty's Letters do come; and charged the Datary, and his Secretary Berigno, that they ſend forth no intimation of his Decree of the ſaid Revocation, without his ſpecial Commandment; where-elſe he ſaid, the Intimation had been ſent forth with an Inhibition alſo: And ſo all is ſtaied, that nothing here-hence ſhall go forth till your Pleaſure, the Queen's Majeſty be known therein; which the Pope doth look for: Until which Intimation, the Legacy there doth continue.

Occurrents here be no other, but that the 10*th* of this, the late made Duke of Paleano departed here-hence towards the Duke's Camp, which doth lie yet in the Siege of Civitella, within your Majeſty's Realm of Naples. They that ſeem to bear their good Wills here towards your Majeſty, do ſay here, that they may lie there long before they take it, for they cannot hurt it much with Battery. And they ſay, the Counts de Sancto Flore, and de Sarme, be within the Town with two thouſand Souldiers; many of the Frenchmen be ſlain there. Nevertheleſs, others do ſay, that it ſtandeth in danger of taking; for becauſe the Frenchmen have gotten a Hill, from the which they do beat ſore into the Town, and have withdrawn certain Waters from them of the Town, and do undermine it; the moſt part here thinketh they ſhall loſe their labour, for it is very ſtrong.

The Gallies of Marſeilles arrived at Civita Vechia, ſix or ſeven days paſt, and brought twelve Enſigns more of French Souldiers to reinforce the French Army; and as far as I can learn, they return again to fetch more, always to refreſh their Camp with freſh Souldiers, in the lieu of ſuch as be periſhed: Of the which twelve Enſigns, the French Ambaſſador choſe out three, which he hath ſent to the Duke of Guiſe, well furniſhed; the reſt he diſcharged, but all the other that came, be gone to the Camp, to ſuch Captains as will retain them there, for ſuch of the other as be ſlain, or otherwiſe periſhed. Don Antonio de Carraffa doth not as yet return to the Camp, neither intendeth to go as I hear. I heard ſay, That the Duke of Alva was within ſixteen miles of the Frenchmen, with a great Army of Horſemen and Footmen, what he doth is not ſpoken of here, for there is none that can paſs to them, or from them hither; there is ſuch ſtrait keeping, and dangerous paſſing.

Here be ill News from Piedmont, for they ſay here, the Frenchmen in thoſe Parts have taken Cheraſto, a very ſtrong Town in Piedmont, which I truſt be not true. The common Report is here, That if the Frenchmen be not withſtanded in time, they will do much hurt in Italy.

The Pope doth ſet forth a Bull for Mony, that one of every Hundred ſhall be paid of the value of all the Lands that be within the Churches Dominions, which they ſay will draw to Two or three Millions, if it be paid.

And having no other at this preſent, I beſeech Almighty God to conſerve both your moſt Excellent Majeſties, in long and moſt proſperous Life together.

Inſtructions ſent by the Privy Council, repreſenting the State of the Nation to King Philip, after the loſs of Calais.

Firſt, to ſay,

Cotton Libr. Titus. B. 2.

THat we be moſt bounden unto his Majeſty for his good Affection towards this Realm; and his gracious Diſpoſition and Offer, to put this Force to the Field this Year, being elſe otherwiſe determined for the recovery of that Honour and Reputation, which this Realm hath loſt by the loſs of Calais.

To ſay, That this Offer of his Majeſty we ſhould not only have, upon our Knees, accepted, but alſo in like-wiſe have ſued firſt for the ſame.

And ſo undoubtedly we would have done, if other reſpects hereafter following, which we truſt his Majeſty will graciouſly underſtand, had not been (to our great regret) the lett thereof.

Firſt; We do conſider, That if we ſhould ſend over an Army, we cannot ſend under 20000 Men; the levying, and ſending over whereof, will ask a time; before which time, conſidering alſo the time the Enemy hath had (being now almoſt a Month) to Fortify and Victual the Place, it is thought the ſame will be in ſuch ſtrength, as we ſhall not be able alone to recover it.

We do conſider how unapt and unwonted our People be to lie abroad, and ſpecially in the Cold: And what Inconveniency might follow alſo at their hands, (beſides the loſs of Charges) if their hope for recovery of Calais ſhould not come to paſs.

The Charge of this Army (if it ſhould go over) would ſtand the Realm in one hundred and ſeventy thouſand pounds at the leaſt, for five months; which Sum (having regard to other neceſſary Charges for the Defence of the Realm, both by Land and by Sea, which the People only have in their Heads, with a wan hope of the recovery of Calais) neither we doubt will be granted of the People; nor if it were, can be conveniently levied in time to ſerve the turn.

Great Gariſons continually, and an Army for Defence againſt the Scots and Frenchmen by Land, muſt of neceſſity be maintained, the charge whereof will be one way and another (go the next way we can) e're the Year go about, an hundred and fifty thouſand Pounds.

The defence of the Sea-Coaſt, and the Iſles, and the ſetting forth of an Army by Sea, will coſt the Realm in a Year (all things accounted) above two hundred thouſand pounds; and yet all will be too little that way, if the Danes and the Sweeds, which we very much doubt, ſhould be our Enemies.

The Sums amounting in the whole, to five hundred and twenty thouſand pounds, beſides Proviſion of Ammunition, which will be chargeable; and Furniture of Ordnance, whereof we have great lack, by the loſs of Calais and Guiſnes.

We

We ſee not how it can be levied in one Year to ſave us, unleſs the People ſhould of new have ſtrange Impoſitions ſet upon them, which we think they would not bear.

The Queen's Majeſty's own Revenue, is ſcarce able to maintain her Eſtate.

The Noblemen and Gentlemen, for the moſt part receiving no more Rent than they were wont to receive, and paying thrice as much for every thing they provide, by reaſon of the baſeneſs of the Mony, are not able to do as they have done in times paſt.

The Merchants have had great loſſes of late, whereby the Cloathiers be never the richer.

The Farmers, Graſiers, and other People, how well-willing ſoever they be taken to be, will not be acknown of their Wealth, and by the miſcontentment of this loſs, be grown ſtubborn and liberal of Talk.

So that conſidering our Wants on every ſide, our lack of Mony at Home; our want of Credit, by reaſon of this Loſs abroad; the ſcarcity of Captains and Leaders of our Men, which be but few; the unwillingneſs of our People to go abroad, and leave their Things at home, without a certain hope of recovering their Loſs; the need we have to defend Home, (looking as we do to be aſſaulted both by Land and by Sea) how deſirous ſoever we be to recover Calais, and well-willing to ſerve his Majeſty, (either for that purpoſe, or in any other thing wherein it ſhall pleaſe him to employ us) we ſee not how we can poſſibly (at the leaſt, for this Year) ſend over an Army; nor until we may be aſſured of fewer Enemies than we fear to have cauſe to doubt; and have time to bring ſuch as be ill Men amongſt our People, and now be ready (againſt their Duties) to make Uproars and Stirs amongſt our ſelves, to Order and Obedience.

Wherefore, in moſt humble wiſe, upon our Knees, we ſhall beſeech the King's Majeſty to accept, in gracious part, this our Anſwer, which we make much againſt our Hearts, if we might otherwiſe chuſe. And as for our own Perſons, we ſhall beſtow, with all that ever we have, to the death, where and however it ſhall pleaſe him, ſubmitting our ſelves to his Majeſty's Judgment in this Matter, and to the execution and doing of that whatſoever, either his Majeſty, or any other Man, ſhall deviſe to be done, better than we have ſaid in this Anſwer, and more for the Honour and Surety of their Majeſties, and Common-Wealth of this their Realm. Feb. 1. 1577.

Sir Thomas Pope's Letter, concerning the Anſwer made by the Lady Elizabeth, to a Propoſition of Marriage, ſent over by the Elected King of Sweden.

Ex MS. D.G. Petyt.

FIrſt, After I had declared to her Grace how well the Queen's Maſty liked of her prudent and honourable Anſwer made to the ſame Meſſenger; I then opened unto her Grace the Effect of the ſaid Meſſengers ſengers Credence; which after her Grace had heard, I ſaid, The Queen's Highneſs had ſent me to her Grace, not only to declare the ſame, but alſo to underſtand how her Grace liked the ſaid Motion. Whereunto, after a little pauſe taken, her Grace anſwered in form following. Maſter Pope, I require you, after my moſt humble Commendations to the Queen's Majeſty, to render unto the ſame like Thanks, that it pleaſed her Highneſs, of her Goodneſs, to conceive ſo well of my Anſwer made to the ſame Meſſenger, and here withal, of her Princely Conſideration, with ſuch ſpeed to command you, by your Letters, to ſignify the ſame unto me; who before remained wonderfully perplexed, fearing that her Majeſty might miſtake the ſame; for which her Goodneſs, I acknowledg my ſelf bound to honour, ſerve, love, and obey her Highneſs, during my Life: Requiring you alſo to ſay unto her Majeſty, That in the King, my Brother's Time, there was offered me a very honourable Marriage or two, and Ambaſſadors ſent to treat with me touching the ſame; whereupon I made my humble Suit unto his Highneſs, as ſome of Honour yet living can be teſtimonies, that it would like the ſame to give me leave, with his Grace's favour, to remain in that Eſtate I was, which of all others beſt liked me or pleaſed me. And in good Faith, I pray you ſay unto her Highneſs, I am even at this preſent of the ſame mind, and ſo intend to continue, with her Majeſty's favour; and aſſuring her Highneſs, I ſo well like this Eſtate, as I perſwade my ſelf there is not any kind of Life comparable unto it. And as concerning my liking the ſaid Motion made by the ſaid Meſſenger, I beſeech you ſay unto her Majeſty, That to my remembrance, I never heard of his Maſter before this time; and that I ſo well like, both the Meſſage and the Meſſenger, as I ſhall moſt humbly pray God, upon my Knees, that from henceforth I never hear of the one nor of the other; aſſure you, that if it ſhould eft-ſoons repair unto me, I would forbear to ſpeak to him. And were there nothing elſe to move me to miſlike the Motion, other than that his Maſter would attempt the ſame, without making the Queen's Majeſty privy thereunto, it were cauſe ſufficient. And when her Grace had thus ended, I was ſo bold as of my ſelf to ſay unto her Grace, (her pardon firſt required) that I thought few or none would believe, but that her Grace could be right-well contented to marry, ſo there were ſome honourable Marriage offered her by the Queen's Highneſs, or her Majeſty's Aſſent. Whereunto her Grace anſwered; What I ſhall do hereafter I know not, but I aſſure you, upon my Truth and Fidelity, and as God be merciful unto me, I am not at this time otherwiſe minded than I have declared unto you, no, though I were offered the greateſt Prince in all Europe. And yet percaſe the Queen's Majeſty may conceive this rather to proceed of a maidenly ſhamefaſtneſs, than upon any ſuch certain determination.

Tho. Pope.

BOOK III.

Number 1.

The Device for Alteration of Religion, in the first Year of Queen Elizabeth: offered to Secretary Cecill.

Queſtion 1.

WHen the Queen's Highneſs may attempt to reduce the Church of England again to the former purity, and when to begin the Alteration? Ex M. SS. Nob. D. Grey de Ruthen.

Anſwer.

At the next Parliament; ſo that the Dangers be foreſeen, and Remedies provided; for the ſooner that Religion is reſtored, God is the more glorified, and as we truſt, will be more merciful unto us, and better ſave and defend her Highneſs from all Dangers.

Queſt. 2.

What Dangers may enſue thereof?

Anſw. 1.

The Biſhop of Rome, all that he may, will be incenſed, he will Excommunicate the Queen's Highneſs, Interdict the Realm, and give it in Prey to all Princes that will enter upon it; and ſtir them up to it by all manner of means.

2. The

2. The French King will be encouraged more to the War, and make his People more ready to fight againſt us, not only as Enemies, but as Hereticks: He will be in great hope of Aid from hence, of them that are diſcontented with this Alteration, looking for Tumults and Diſcords; He will alſo ſtay concluding of Peace, upon hope of ſome alteration.

3. Scotland alſo will have the ſame Cauſes of boldneſs, and by that way the French King will ſeem ſooneſt to attempt to annoy us. Ireland alſo will be very difficultly ſtayed in the Obedience, by reaſon of the Clergy that is ſo addicted to Rome.

4. Many People of our own, will be very much diſcontented, eſpecially all ſuch as governed in the late Queen Mary's Time, and were choſen thereto for no other Cauſes, or were then moſt eſteemed for being hot and earneſt in that other Religion, and now remain unplaced and uncalled to Credit, will think themſelves diſcredited, and all their Doings defaced, and ſtudy all the ways they can to maintain their own Doings, deſtroy and deſpiſe all this Alteration.

5. Biſhops, and all the Clergy, will ſee their own Ruin; and in Confeſſion, and Preaching, and all other Means and Ways they can, will perſuade the People from it; they will conſpire with whomſoever, will attempt and pretend to do God a Sacrifice, in letting the Alteration, though it be with murder of Chriſtian Men, and Treaſon. Men which be of the Papiſts Sect, which of late were in a manner all the Judges of the Land; the Juſtices of the Peace choſen out by the late Queen in all the Shires, ſuch as were believed to be of that Sect, and the more earneſt therein, the more in eſtimation; Theſe are moſt like to join and conſpire with the Biſhops, and Clergy. Some, when the Subſidy ſhall be granted, and Mony levied, (as it appeareth that neceſſarily it muſt be done) will be therewith offended, and like enough to conſpire and ariſe, if they have any heed to ſtir them to do it, or hope of Gain or Spoil.

6. Many ſuch as would gladly have Alteration from the Church of Rome, when they ſhall ſee peradventure that ſome old Ceremonies be left ſtill, for that their Doctrine, which they embrace, is not allowed and commanded only, and all other aboliſhed and diſproved, ſhall be diſcontented, and call the Alteration a Cloak'd Papiſtry, or a Mingle-Mangle.

Queſt. 3.

What Remedy for the ſame Dangers? What ſhall be the manner of doing of it? and what is neceſſary to be done before?

Anſw. 1.

Firſt, for France, to practiſe a Peace, or if it be offered, not to refuſe it: If Controverſy of Religion be there amongſt them, to kindle it. Rome is leſs to be feared, from whom nothing is to be feared, but evil Will, Curſing, and Practiſing. Scotland will follow France for Peace, but there may be Practice to help forward their Diviſion, and eſpecially to augment the Hope of them who inclined them to good Religion.

For

For certainty, to fortify Barwick, and to employ Demi-lances, and Horſemen, for ſafety of the Frontiers, and ſome Expences of Mony in Ireland. The fourth divided into five parts.

1. The firſt is of them which were of Queen Mary's Council, elected or advanced to Authority, only or chiefly for being of the Pope's Religion, and earneſt in the ſame. Every Augmentation, or Conſervation of ſuch Men in Authority or Reputation, is an encouraging thoſe of their Sect, and giveth hope to them that it ſhall revive and continue, although it hath a contrary ſhew: leſt ſeeing the Pillars to ſtand ſtill untouched, it be a confirmation of them that are wavering Papiſts, and a diſcouraging of ſuch as are but half inclined to this Alteration. Dum in dubio eſt animus, parvo momento huc illuc impellitur. This muſt be ſearched by all Law, ſo far as Juſtice may extend, and the Queen's Majeſty's Clemency not to be extended, before they do acknowledg themſelves to have fallen into the lapſe of the Law. They muſt be abaſed of Authority, diſcredited in their Countries, ſo long as they ſeem to repugn the true Religion, or to maintain the old Proceedings; and if they ſhould ſeem to allow and bear with the new Alteration, yet not lightly to be credited, quia neophiti; and no Man, but he loveth that time wherein he did flouriſh, and when he came, and as he came; thoſe Ancient Laws and Orders he will defend and maintain, with whom and in whom he was in Eſtimation, and Authority, and a Doer: for every Man naturally loveth that which is his own Work and Creature. And contrary, as thoſe Men be abaſed, ſo muſt her Highneſs old and ſure Servants, who have tarried with her, and not ſhrunk in the late Storm, be advanced, with Authority and Credit, that the World may ſee that her Highneſs is not unkind, not unmindful. And throughout all England, if ſuch Prſons, as are known to be ſure in Religion, and God's Cauſe, ſhall be ſlack; yet their own Safety and Eſtate, ſhould cauſe to be vigilant, careful, and earneſt for the conſervation of her Eſtate, and maintenance of this Alteration; and in all this, ſhe ſhall do but the ſame that the late Queen Mary did, to eſtabliſh her Religion.

2. The ſecond is, the Biſhops and Clergy, being in manner all made and choſen, ſuch as were thought the ſtouteſt and mightieſt Champions of the Pope's Church, who in the late Queen Mary's Time, taking from the Crown, impoveriſhing it, by extorting from private Men, and all other means poſſible, per fas & nefas, have ſought to enrich and advance themſelves. Theſe, her Majeſty being inclined to uſe much clemency, yet muſt ſeek, as well by Parliament, as by the juſt Laws of England, in the Premunire, or other ſuch Penal Laws, to bring again in order; and being found in the default, not to pardon, until they confeſs their Fault, put themſelves wholly to her Highneſs Mercy, abjure the Pope of Rome, and conform themſelves to the new Alteration; and by theſe means, well handled, her Majeſty's neceſſity of Mony may be ſomewhat relieved.

3. The third is to amend, even as all the reſt above, by ſuch ways as Queen Mary taught, That no ſuch as were, may be in Commiſſion of Peace in their Shires; but rather Men meaner in Subſtance, and younger in Years, ſo that they have diſcretion to be put in Place. A ſharp Law made and extended againſt Aſſemblies of People, without Authority. Lieutenants made in every Shire, one or two Men known to be ſure of the Queen's Devotion. In the mean time, Muſters and Captains appointed, Young Gentlemen, which do favour her Highneſs. No Office of Juriſdiction or Authority to be in any diſcontented Man's hands, ſo far as Juſtice or Law may extend.

4. The fourth is to be remedied otherwiſe, than by gentle and dulce handling; it is by the Commiſſioners, and by the readineſs and good-will of the Lieutenants and Captains; to repreſs them, if any ſhould begin a Tumult, or murmur, or provide any Aſſembly, or ſtoutneſs, to the contrary.

5. The fifth; For the Diſcontentation of ſuch as could be content to have Religion altered, but would have it to go, for fear the ſtrait Laws upon the Promulgation of the Book, and ſevere execution of the ſame, at the firſt, would ſo oppreſs them, that it is great hope it ſhall touch but a few: And better it were that they did ſuffer, than her Highneſs and Common-Wealth ſhould ſhake or be in danger; and to this they muſt well take heed that draw the Book. And herein the Univerſities muſt not be neglected, and the hurt which the laſt Viſitation in Queen Mary's Time did, muſt be amended: Likewiſe ſuch Colleges, where Children be inſtructed to come to the Univerſity, as Eaton, and Wincheſter, that as well the encreaſe hereafter, as this preſent time, may be provided for.

Queſt. 4.

What may be done of her Highneſs, for her own Conſcience, openly, before the whole Alteration? or if the Alteration muſt tarry longer?

Anſwer.

This conſultation is to be referred to ſuch Learned Men as be meet to ſhew their Minds therein, and to bring a Plot or Book hereof ready drawn to her Highneſs; which being approved by her Majeſty, may ſo be put in the Parliament-Houſe. To which, for the time it is thought that theſe are apt Men, Dr. Bill, Dr. Parker, Dr. May, Dr. Cox, Mr. Whitehead, Grindall, Pilkington, and Sir Thomas Smith, to call them together, and to be amongſt them: and after the conſultation with theſe, to draw in other Men of Learning, and grave and apt Men for your Purpoſe and Credit, to have their Aſſents. As for that is neceſſary to be done before, it is thought to be moſt neceſſary, that a ſtrait Prohibition be made of all Innovation, until ſuch time as the Book come forth, as well that there ſhould be no often Changes in Religion, which would take away Authority in the common Peoples eſtimation, as alſo to exerciſe the Queen's Majeſty's Subjects to Obedience.

Queſt.

Queſt. 5.

What Orders be fit to be in the whole Realm, as in the interim?

Anſwer.

To alter no further than her Majeſty hath, except it be to receive the Communion, as her Majeſty pleaſeth, at high Feaſts; and that where there be more at the Maſs, that they do always communicate with the Executor in both kinds. And for her Highneſs Conſcience, till then, if there be ſome other devout ſort of Prayer, or Memory, and the or Maſs.

Queſt. 6.

What Noblemen be fit to be made privy to thoſe Proceedings, before it be opened to the whole Council?

Anſwer.

The Marqueſs Northampton, the Earl of Bedford, the Earl of Pembrook, Lord John Gray.

Queſt. 7.

What Allowance the Learned Men ſhall have for the time they are about to renew the Book of Common Prayers, and Order of certain Ceremonies and Service in the Church; and when they ſhall meet?

Anſwer.

Being ſo many Perſons as muſt attend ſtill upon it, two Meſſes of Meat is thought yet indifferently to ſuffice for them, and their Servants. The Place is thought moſt meet, either in ſome ſet Place, or rather at Sir Thomas Smith's Lodging in Cannon-Row. At one of thoſe Places, muſt Proviſion be laid in, of Wood, of Coal, and Drink.

Number 2.

Dr. Sand's Letter to Dr. Parker, concerning ſome Proceedings in Parliament.

An Original.

Ex MS. Col. Cor. C. Cant.

YE have rightly conſidered that theſe times are given to taking, and not to giving; for ye have ſtretched forth your hands further than all the reſt. They never asked us in what ſtate we ſtand, neither conſider that we want; and yet in the time of our Exile, were we not ſo bare as we are now brought: but I truſt we ſhall not linger here long, for the Parliament draweth towards an end. The laſt Book of Service is gone through with a Proviſo, to retain the Ornaments which were uſed in the firſt and ſecond Year of King Edward, until it pleaſe the Queen to take other order for them; our gloſs upon this Text is, that we ſhall not be forced to uſe them, but that others in the mean time ſhall not convey them away, but that they may remain for the Queen. After this Book was paſt, Boxall, and others, quarrelled with it, that according to the order of the Scripture, we had not gratiarum actio; for, ſaith he, Chriſtus accepit panem, gratias egit, but in the time of Conſecration we give no Thanks. This he put into the Treaſurer's Head, and into Count de Soreus Head; and he laboured to alienate the Queen's Majeſty from confirming of the Act, but I truſt they cannot prevail. Mr. Secretary is earneſt with the Book, and we have miniſtred Reaſons to maintain that part. The Bill of Supreme Government, of both the Temporality and Clergy, paſſeth with a Proviſo, that nothing ſhall be judged hereafter, which is not confirmed by the Canonical Scriptures, and four General Councils. Mr. Lever wiſely put ſuch a Scruple into the Queen's Head, that ſhe would not take the Title of Supream Head. The Biſhops, as it is ſaid, will not ſwear unto it as it is, but rather loſe their Livings. The Bill is in hand to reſtore Men to their Livings; how it will ſpeed I know not. The Parliament is like to end ſhortly, and then we ſhall underſtand how they mind to uſe us. We are forced, through the vain Bruits of the lying Papiſts, to give up a Confeſſion of our Faith, to ſhew forth the Sum of that Doctrine which we profeſs, and to declare that we diſſent not amongſt our ſelves. This Labour we have now in hand, on purpoſe to publiſh that, ſo ſoon as the Parliament is ended; I wiſh that we had your Hand unto it. Ye are happy that ye are ſo far from this toſſing, and groſs Alterations and Mutations; for we are made weary with them; but ye cannot reſt long in your Cell, ye muſt be removed to a more large Abbey: and therefore in the mean time take your pleaſure, for after ye will find but a little, Nihil eſt ſtatutum, de conjugio Sacerdotum, ſed tanquam relictum in medio. Lever was married now of late; The Queen's Majeſty will wink at it, but not ſtabliſh it by Law, which is nothing elſe but to baſtard our Children. Other things another time. Thus praying you to commend me to your Abbeſſes, I take my leave of you for this preſent haſtily, at London, April ult. 1559.

He was Dean of Windſor and Peterb. in Q. Mary's Time.

Yours, Edwin Sands.

Number 3.

The firſt Propoſition, upon which the Papiſts and Proteſtants, Diſputed in Weſtminſter-Abbey. With the Arguments which the Reformed Divines made upon it.

It is againſt the Word of God, and the Cuſtom of the Primitive Church, to uſe a Tongue unknown to the People in Common-Prayers, and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments.

BY theſe words (the Word) we mean only the written Word of God, or Canonical Scriptures. Ex MS. Col. C. C. Cantab.

And by the Cuſtom of the Primitive Church, we mean, the Order moſt generally uſed in the Church for the ſpace of five hundred Years after Chriſt; in which Times lived the moſt notable Fathers, as Juſtin, Ireneus, Tertullian, Cyprian, Baſil, Chryſoſtom, Hierome, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, &c.

This Aſſertion, above-written, hath two parts.

Firſt, That the uſe of a Tongue not underſtood of the People, in Common Prayers of the Church, or in the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, is againſt God's Word.

The ſecond, That the ſame is againſt the Uſe of the Primitive-Church.

The firſt part is moſt manifeſtly proved by the 14*th* Chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, almoſt throughout the whole Chapter; in the which Chapter St. Paul intreateth of this Matter, ex profeſſo, purpoſely: And although ſome do cavil, that St. Paul ſpeaketh not in that Chapter of Praying, but of Preaching; yet it is moſt evident, to any indifferent Reader of Underſtanding, and appeareth alſo by the Expoſition of the beſt Writers, That he plainly there ſpeaketh not only of Preaching and Propheſying, but alſo of Prayer and Thankſgiving, and generally of all other publick Actions, which require any Speech in the Church or Congregation.

For of Praying, he ſaith, I will pray with my Spirit, and I will pray with my Mind; I will ſing with the Spirit, and I will ſing with my Mind. And of Thankſgiving, (which is a kind of Prayer) Thou giveſt Thanks well, but the other is not edified; And how ſhall he that occupieth the room of the Unlearned, ſay Amen to thy giving of Thanks, when he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt? And in the end, aſcending from Particulars to Univerſals, concludeth, That all things ought to be done to Edification.

Thus much is clear by the very words of St. Paul, and the Ancient Doctors, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, Hierome, and others, do ſo underſtand this this Chapter, as it ſhall appear by their Teſtimonies, which ſhall follow afterwards.

Upon this Chapter of St. Paul, we gather theſe Reaſons following.

1. All things done in the Church, or Congregation, ought to be ſo done, as they may edify the ſame.

But the uſe of an Unknown Tongue in Publick Prayer, or Adminiſtration of Sacraments, doth not edify the Congregation;

Therefore the uſe of an Unknown Tongue, in Publick Prayer, or Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, is not to be had in the Church.

The firſt part of this Reaſon, is grounded upon St. Paul's words, commanding all things to be done to Edification.

The ſecond part is alſo proved by St. Paul's plain words. Firſt, By this Similitude; If the Trumpet give an uncertain ſound, who ſhall be prepared to Battel? Even ſo likewiſe, when ye ſpeak with Tongues, except ye ſpeak words that have ſignification, how ſhall it be underſtood what is ſpoken? for ye ſhall but ſpeak in the Air, that is to ſay, in vain, and conſequently without edifying.

And afterward, in the ſame Chapter, he ſaith, How can he that occupieth the place of the Unlearned, ſay Amen at thy giving of Thanks: ſeeing he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt? For thou verily giveſt Thanks well, but the other is not edified.

Theſe be St. Paul's words, plainly proving, That a Tongue not underſtood, doth not edify.

And therefore both the parts of the Reaſons thus prov'd by St. Paul, the Concluſion followeth neceſſarily.

2. Secondly; Nothing is to be ſpoken in the Congregation in an Unknown Tongue, except it be interpreted to the People, that it may be underſtood. For, ſaith Paul, if there be no Interpreter to him that ſpeaketh in an unknown Tougue, taceat in Eccleſiâ, let him hold his peace in the Church. And therefore the Common Prayers, and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, neither done in a known Tongue, nor interpreted, are againſt this Commandment of Paul, and not to be uſed.

3. The Miniſter, in Praying, or Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, uſing Language not underſtood of the Hearers, is to them barbarous, an Alien, which of St. Paul is accounted a great Abſurdity.

4. It is not to be counted a Chriſtian Common-Prayer, where the People preſent declare not their Aſſent unto it, by ſaying Amen; wherein is implyed all other words of Aſſent.

But St. Paul affirmeth, That the People cannot declare their Aſſent, in ſaying Amen, except they underſtand what is ſaid, as afore.

Therefore it is no Chriſtian Common-Prayer, where the People underſtandeth not what is ſaid.

5. Paul would not ſuffer, in his time, a ſtrange Tongue to be heard in the Common-Prayer in the Church, notwithſtanding that ſuch a kind of Speech was then a Miracle, and a ſingular Gift of the Holy Ghoſt, Ghoſt, whereby Infidels might be perſuaded and brought to the Faith: much leſs is it to be ſuffered now among Chriſtian and Faithful Men, eſpecially being no Miracle, nor eſpecial Gift of the Holy Ghoſt.

6. Some will peradventure anſwer, That to uſe any kind of Tongue in Common-Prayer, or Adminiſtration of Sacraments, is a thing indifferent.

But St. Paul is to the contrary; for he commandeth all things to be done to Edification: He commandeth to keep ſilence, if there be no Interpreter. And in the end of the Chapter, he concludeth thus; If any Man be Spiritual, or a Prophet, let him know, that the Things which I write are the Commandment of the Lord. And ſo, ſhortly to conclude, the uſe of a ſtrange Tongue, in Prayer and Adminiſtration, is againſt the Word and Commandment of God.

To theſe Reaſons, grounded upon St. Paul's words, which are the moſt firm Foundation of this Aſſertion, divers other Reaſons may be joined, gathered out of the Scriptures, and otherwiſe.

1. In the Old Teſtament, all things pertaining to the Publick Prayer, Benediction, Thankſgiving, or Sacrifice, were always in their Vulgar and Natural Tongue.

In the ſecond Book of Paraleipomenon, Cap. 29. it is written, That Ezechias commanded the Levites, to praiſe God with the Pſalms of David, and Aſaph the Prophet; which doubtleſs were written in the Hebrew, their Vulgar Tongue. If they did ſo in the Shadows of the Law, much more ought we to do the like; who, as Chriſt ſaith, muſt pray in Spiritu & Veritate.

2. The final end of our Prayer is, (as David ſaith) Ut populi conveniant in unum, & annuncient nomen Domini in Sion, & laudes ejus in Hieruſalem.

But the Name and Praiſes of God cannot be ſet forth to the People, unleſs it be done in ſuch a Tongue, as they may underſtand.

Therefore Common-Prayer muſt be had in the Vulgar Tongue.

3. The definition of Publick Prayer, out of the words of St. Paul; Orabo Spiritu, Orabo & Mente. Publicè orare, eſt vota communia mente ad Deum effundere, & ea Spiritu hoc eſt, Linguâ teſtari. Common-Prayer is, to lift up our Common Deſires to God with our Minds, and to teſtify the ſame outwardly with our Tongues. Which Definition is approved of by St. Auguſtine de Magiſt. C. 1. Nihil opus eſt (inquit) loquutione, niſi forte ut Sacerdotes faciunt, ſignificandæ mentis Cauſâ, ut populus intelligat.

4. The Miniſtrations of the Lord's laſt Supper, and Baptiſm, are, as it were, Sermons of the Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt.

But Sermons to the People, muſt be had in ſuch Language, as the People may perceive, otherwiſe they ſhould be had in vain.

5. It

5. It is not lawful for a Christian Man to abuse the Gifts of God. But he that prayeth in the Church in a strange Tongue, abuseth the Gift of God; for the Tongue serveth only to express the mind of the Speaker to the Hearer. And Augustine saith, de Doct. Christ. lib. 4. cap. 10. Loquendi omnino nulla est causa, si quod loquimur non intelligunt, propter quos, ut intelligant, loquimur. There is no cause why we should speak, if they, for whose cause we speak, understand not our speaking.

6. The Heathen, and Barbarous Nations of all Countries, and sorts of Men, were they never so wild, evermore made their Prayers, and Sacrifice to their Gods, in their own Mother-Tongue; which is a manifest Declaration, that it is the very Light and Voice of Nature.

Thus much upon the ground of St. Paul, and other Reasons out of the Scriptures; joining therewith the common Usage of all Nations, as a Testimony of the Law of Nature.

Now for the second part of the Assertion, which is, That the use of a strangue Tongue, in publick Prayer, and Administration of Sacraments, is against the Custom of the Primitive Church. Which is a Matter so clear, that the denial of it must needs proceed, either of great Ignorance, or of wilful Malice.

Justinus Apol. 2. For, first of all, Justinus Martyr, describing the Order of the Communion in his time, saith thus; Die Solis urbanorum & rusticorum eadem fiunt, ubi Apostolorum, Prophetarumq; literæ, quoad fieri potest, præleguntur: Deinde cessante Lectore Præpositus verba facit adhortatoria, ad imitationem tam honestarum rerum invitans. Post hæc consurgimus omnes, & preces offerimus, quibus finitis, profertur (ut diximus) Panis, Vinum & Aqua, tum præpositus quantum potest preces offert, & gratiarum Actiones; plebs vero Amen accinit. Upon the Sundays Assemblies are made both of the Citizens and Country-men; whereas the Writings of the Disciples, and of the Prophets, are read as much as may be. Afterwards when the Reader doth cease, the Head-Minister maketh an Exhortation, exhorting them to follow so honest things. After this we rise all together, and offer Prayers; which being ended, (as we have said) Bread, Wine, and Water, are brought forth; then the Head-Minister offereth Prayers, and Thanksgivings, as much as he can, and the People answereth, Amen.

These words of Justin, who lived about 160 Years after Christ, considered with their Circumstances, declare plainly, That not only the Scriptures were read, but also that the Prayers, and Administration of the Lord's Supper, were done in a Tongue understood.

Both the Liturgies of Basil and Chrysostom, declare, That in the Celebration of the Communion, the People were appointed to answer to the Prayer of the Minister, sometimes Amen; sometimes, Lord have mercy upon us; sometimes, And with thy Spirit; and, We have our Hearts lifted up unto the Lord, &c. Which Answers they would not have made in due time, if the Prayers had not been made in a Tongue understood.

And

And for further proof, let us hear what Basil writeth in this Matter to the Clerks of Neocesarea; Cæterum ad Objectum in Psalmodiis crimen, quo maximè simpliciores terrent Calumniatores, &c. 'As touching that is 'laid to our charge in Psalmodies and Songs, wherewith our Slanderers 'do fray the Simple, I have this to say, That our Custom and Usage in 'all Churches, be uniform and agreeable. For in the Night, the Peo-'ple with us riseth, goeth to the House of Prayer: and in Travel, Tri-'bulation, and continual Tears, they confess themselves to God; and 'at the last rising again, go to their Songs, or Psalmodies, where being 'divided into two parts, sing by course together, both deeply weighing 'and confirming the Matter of the Heavenly Saying; and also stirring 'up their Attention and Devotion of Heart, which by other means be 'alienated and pluck'd away. Then appointing one to begin the Song, 'the rest follow; and so with divers Songs and Prayers, passing over 'the Night at the dawning of the Day, all together, even, as it were 'with one Mouth, and one Heart, they sing unto the Lord a new Song 'of Confession, every Man framing to Himself meet words of Repen-'tance. Basil Epist. 63.

'If ye will flee us from henceforth for these things, ye must flee also 'the Egyptians, and both the Lybians, ye must eschew the Thebians, Pa-'lestines, Arabians, the Phenices, the Syrians, and those which dwell 'besides Euphrates. And to be short, all those with whom Watchings, 'Prayers, and common singing of Psalms are had in honour.

These are sufficient to prove, that it is against God's Word, and the Use of the Primitive Church, to use a Language not understood of the People, in Common Prayer, and Ministration of the Sacraments.

Wherefore it is to be marvelled at, not only how such an Untruth and Abuse crept, at the first, into the Church, but also how it is maintained so stifly at this Day; And upon what ground, these that will be thought Guides, and Pastors of Christ's Church, are so loth to return to the first Original of St. Paul's Doctrine, and the Practice of the Primitive Catholick Church of Christ.

The God of Patience and Consolation, give us Grace to be like minded one towards another, in Christ Jesus, that we all agreeing together, may, with one mouth, praise God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

Number 4.

The Anſwer of Dr. Cole, to the firſt Propoſition of the Proteſtants, at the Diſputation before the Lords at Weſtminſter.

Eſt contra Verbum Dei, & conſuetudinem veteris Eccleſiæ Linguâ Populo ignotâ uti in publicis precibus, & Adminiſtratione Sacramentorum.

Ex MS. Col. Cor. C. Cant.

Moſt Honourable;

WHereas theſe Men here preſent, have declared openly, That it is repugnant, and contrary to the Word of God, to have the Common-Prayers, and Miniſtration of the Sacraments, in the Latin Tongue, here in England; and that all ſuch Common-Prayer, and Miniſtration, ought to be, and remain in the Engliſh Tongue. Ye ſhall underſtand, that to prove this their Aſſertion, they have brought in as yet only one place of Scripture, taken out of St. Paul's firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, Chap. 14. with certain other places of the Holy Doctors; whereunto anſwer is not now to be made: But when the Book, which they read, ſhall be delivered unto us, according to the appointment made in that behalf, then, God willing, we ſhall make anſwer, as well to the Scripture, as other Teſtimonies alledged by them, ſo as all good Men may evidently perceive and underſtand the ſame Scripture to be miſconſtrued, and drawn from the native and true ſenſe: And that it is not St. Paul's mind there to treat of Common-Prayer, or Miniſtration of any Sacraments. And therefore we now have only to declare, and open before you briefly (which after, as opportunity ſerves in our Anſwer, ſhall appear more at large) cauſes which move us to perſiſt and continue in the order received, and to ſay, and affirm, that to have the Common-Prayer, or Service, with the Miniſtration of the Sacraments in the Latin Tongue, is convenient, (and as the ſtate of the Cauſe ſtandeth at this preſent) neceſſary.

Second Section.

1. And this we affirm, firſt, becauſe there is no Scripture manifeſt againſt this our Aſſertion and Uſage of the Church. And though there were any, yet it is not to be condemn'd that the Church hath receiv'd. Which thing may evidently appear in many things that were ſometime expreſly commanded by God and his Holy Apoſtles.

2. As for Example, (to make the Matter plain) ye ſee the expreſs Command of Almighty God, touching the obſervation of the Sabbath-Day, to be changed by Authority of the Church (without any Word of God written for the ſame) into the Sunday. The Reaſon whereof appeareth not to all Men; and howſoever it doth appear, and is accepted of all good Men, without any Controverſy of Scripture; yea, without without any mention of the Day, ſaving only that St. John in his Apocalyps, nameth it, Diem Dominicam: In the change whereof, all Men may evidently underſtand the Authority of the Church, both in this cauſe, and alſo in other Matters to be of great weight and importance, and therein eſteemed accordingly,

3. Another Example we have given unto us by the Mouth of our Saviour himſelf, who waſhing the feet of his Diſciples, ſaid, I have herein given you an Example, that as I have done, even ſo do you. Notwithſtanding theſe expreſs words, the Holy Church hath left the thing undone, without blame: not of any Negligence, but of great and urgent Cauſes, which appeareth not to many Men, and yet univerſally without the breach of God's Commandment (as is ſaid) left undone. Was not the Fact alſo, and, as it ſeemeth, the expreſs Commandment of Chriſt, our Saviour, changed and altered, by the Authority of the Church, in the higheſt Myſtery of our Faith, the Bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar? For he miniſtreth the ſame (as the Scripture witneſſeth) after Supper. And now if a contentious Man would ſtrain the Fact to the firſt Inſtitution, St. Auguſtine anſwereth (not by Scripture, for there is none to improve it, but indeed otherwiſe) even as the Apoſtles did, Viſum eſt Spiritui ſancto, ut in honorem tanti Sacramenti, in os Chriſtiani hominis prius intret Corpus Dominicum quam exteri cibi. It is determin'd (ſaith St. Auguſtine) by the Holy Ghoſt, that in the honour of ſo great a Sacrament, the Body of our Lord ſhould enter firſt into the Mouth of a Chriſtian Man before other external Meats. So that notwithſtanding it was the Fact of Chriſt himſelf, yet the Church moved by the Holy Ghoſt, (as is ſaid) hath changed that alſo, without offence likewiſe. By the which Sentence of St. Auguſtine, manifeſtly appeareth, that this Authority was deriv'd from the Apoſtles unto this Time; the which ſame Authority, according to Chriſt's Promiſes, doth ſtill abide and remain with his Church.

4. And hereupon alſo reſteth the Alteration of the Sacrament under one kind, when-as the multitude of the Gentiles entred, the Church inſtructed by the Holy Ghoſt, underſtood Inconveniencies, and partly alſo Hereſy to creep in through the Miniſtration under both kinds; and therefore, as in the former Examples, ſo in this now, (the Matter nothing diminiſhed, neither in it ſelf, nor in the Receivers, and the thing alſo being received before, by a common and uniform Conſent, without contradiction) the Church did decree, that from henceforth it ſhould be received under the form of Bread only; and whoſoever ſhould think and affirm, that Whole Chriſt remained not under both kinds, pronounc'd him to be in Hereſy.

5. Moreover, we read in the Acts, whereas it was determined in a Council holden at Hieruſalem by the Apoſtles, that the Gentiles ſhould abſtain from Strangled, and Blood, in theſe words, Viſum eſt Spiritui Sancto, & Nobis, &c. It is decreed, by the Holy Ghoſt, and Us, (ſay the Apoſtles) that no other burden be laid upon you, than theſe neceſſary things, That ye abſtain from things offered up unto Idols, and from Blood; and from that is ſtrangled, and from Fornication. This was the Commandment of God, (for ſtill it is commanded, upon pain of damnation, to keep our Bodies clean from Fornication) and the other, join'd by the Holy Ghoſt with the ſame, not kept nor obſerved at this day.

6. Likewiſe in the Acts of the Apoſtles it appeareth, That among them in the Primitive Church, all things were common. They ſold their Lands and poſſeſſions, and laid the Mony at the Feet of the Apoſtles, to be divided to the People as every Man had need; inſomuch that Ananias and Saphira, who kept back a part of their Poſſeſſion, and laid but the other part at the Apoſtles Feet, were declared, by the Mouth of St. Peter, to be tempted by the Devil, and to lye againſt the Holy Ghoſt, and in example of all other, puniſh'd with ſudden Death. By all which Examples, and many other, it is manifeſt, that though there were any ſuch Scripture which they pretend, as there is not, yet the Church wherein the Holy Ghoſt is alway reſident, may order the ſame, and may therein ſay as truly, Viſum eſt Spiritui Sancto, & Nobis, as did the Apoſtles; For Chriſt promiſed unto the Church, That the Holy Ghoſt ſhould teach them all Truth, and that He himſelf would be with the ſame Church unto the Worlds end. And hereupon we do make this Argument with St. Auguſtine, which he writeth in his Epiſtle ad Januarium, after this ſort, Eccleſia Dei inter multam paleam multaque Zizania conſtituta, multa tolerat; & tamen quæ ſunt contra fidem, vel bonam vitam non approbat, nec tacet, nec facit.

To this Major, we add this Minor; But the Catholick Church of God, neither reproveth the Service, or Common-Prayer, to be in the Learned Tongue, nor yet uſeth it otherwiſe.

Therefore it is moſt lawful and commendable ſo to be.

Third Section.

Another Cauſe that moveth us to ſay and think, is, That otherwiſe doing, (as they have ſaid) there followeth neceſſarily the breach of Unity of the Church, and the Commodities thereby are withdrawn and taken from us; there follows neceſſarily an horrible Schiſm and Diviſion.

In alteration of the Service into our Mother-Tongue, we condemn the Church of God, which hath been heretofore, we condemn the Church that is preſent, and namely the Church of Rome.

To the which, howſoever it is lightly eſteemed here among us, the Holy Saint and Martyr, Ireneus, ſaith in plain words thus; Ad hanc Eccleſiam propter potentiorem principalitatem, neceſſe eſt omnes alias Eccleſias convenire; hoc eſt omnes undiq; Fideles. It is neceſſary (ſaith this Holy Man) who was nigh to the Apoſtles, or rather in that time, for he is called σύνχρονον Apoſtolorum) that all Churches do conform themſelves, and agree with the See or Church of Rome, all Churches, that is to ſay (as he declareth himſelf) all Chriſtian and Faithful Men. And he alleageth the Cauſe why it is neceſſary for all Men to agree therewith, (propter potentiorem principalitatem) for the greater Preeminence of the ſame, or for the mightier Principality.

From this Church, and conſequently from the whole Univerſal Church of Chriſt, we fall undoubtedly into a fearful and dangerous Schiſm, and therewith into all Incommodities of the ſame.

That in this doing, we fall from the Unity of the Church, it is more manifeſt than that we need much to ſtand upon. St. Auguſtine, Contra Creſconium Grammaticum, putting a difference between Hereſis and Schiſma, Schiſma, ſaith, Schiſma eſt diverſa ſequentium ſecta, Hereſis autem Schiſma inveteratum.

To avoid this horrible Sin of Schiſm, we are commanded, by the words of St. Paul, ſaying, Obſecro vos ut id ipſum dicatis omnes & non ſin in vobis Schiſmata.

And that this changing of the Service out of the Learned Tongue, is doing contrary to the Form and Order univerſally obſerved, is plain and evident to every Man's Eye.

They are to be named Hereticks (ſaith he) which obſtinately think and judg in Matters of Faith, otherwiſe than the reſt of the Church doth. And thoſe are called Schiſmaticks, which follow not the Order and Trade of the Church, but will invent of their own Wit and Brain other Orders, contrary or diverſe to them which are already, by the Holy Ghoſt, univerſally eſtabliſh'd in the Church. And we being declin'd from God by Schiſm, note what follows; There is then no Gift of God, no Knowledg, no Juſtice, no Faith, no Works, and finally, no Vertue that could ſtand us in ſtead, though we ſhould think to glorify God by ſuffering Death, (as St. Paul ſaith) 1 Cor. 13. Yea, there is no Sacrament that availeth to Salvation, in them that willingly fall into Schiſm, that without fear ſeparate and divide themſelves from the Sacred Unity of Chriſt's Holy Spouſe, the Church, as St. Auguſtine plainly ſaith; Quicunque ille eſt, qualiſcunque ille eſt, Chriſtianus non eſt qui in Eccleſia Chriſti non eſt; that is, Whoſoever he be, whatſoever degree or condition he be of, or what qualities ſoever he hath; though he ſhould ſpeak with the Tongues of Angels, ſpeak he never ſo holily, ſhew he never ſo much Vertue, yet is he not a Chriſtian Man that is guilty of that Crime of Schiſm; and ſo no Member of that Church.

Wherefore this is an evident Argument; Every Chriſtian Man is bound, upon pain of Damnation, by the plain words of God, uttered by St. Paul, to avoid the horrible Sin of Schiſm.

The changing of the Service-Book out of the Learned Tongue, it being univerſally obſerv'd through the whole Church from the beginning, is a cauſe of an horrible Schiſm; wherefore every good Chriſtian Man is bound to avoid the change of the Service.

Now to confirm that we ſaid before, and to prove that to have the Common-Prayer, and Miniſtration of the Sacraments in Engliſh, or in other than is the Learned Tongue, let us behold the firſt Inſtitution of the Weſt Church, and the Particulars thereof.

And firſt, to begin with the Church of France: Dyoniſius, St. Paul's Scholar, who firſt planted the Faith of Chriſt in France: Martialis, who (as it is ſaid) planted the Faith in Spain: And others which planted the ſame here in England, in the Time of Elutherius: And ſuch as planted the Faith in Germany, and other Countries: And St. Auguſtine, that converted this Realm afterwards, in the time of Gregory, almoſt a thouſand Years ago: It may appear that they had Interpreters, as touching the Declaration and Preaching of the Goſpel, or elſe the Gift of Tongues: But that ever, in any of theſe Weſt Churches, they had the Service in their own Language, or that the Sacraments, other than than Matrimony, were miniſtred in their own Vulgar Tongue; that does not appear by any Ancient Hiſtoriographer. Whether ſhall they be able ever to prove that it was ſo generally, and thereby by continuance, in the Latin, the ſelf-ſame Order and Words remain ſtill; whereas all Men do conſider, and know right-well, that in all other inferiour and barbarous Tongues, great change daily is ſeen, and ſpecially in this our Engliſh Tongue, which in quovis Seculo fere, in every Age, or hundred Years, there appeareth a great change and alteration in this Language.

For the proof whereof, there hath remained many Books of late in this Realm, (as many do well know) which we, that be now Engliſhmen, can ſcarcely underſtand or read. And if we ſhould ſo often (as the thing may chance, and as alteration daily doth grow in our Vulgar Tongue) change the Service of the Church, what manifold Inconveniences and Errors would follow, we leave it to all Mens Judgments to conſider. So that hereby may appear another invincible Argument, which is, the Conſent of the whole Catholick Church, that cannot err in the Faith and Doctrine of our Saviour Chriſt, but is (by St. Paul's ſaying) the Pillar and Foundation of all Truth.

Moreover, the People of England do not underſtand their own Tongue, better than Eunuchus did the Hebrew; of whom we read in the Acts, that Philip was commanded to teach him; and he reading there the Propheſy of Eſay, Philip (as it is written in the 8*th* Chapter of the Acts) enquired of him, Whether he underſtood that which he read, or no? He made anſwer, ſaying, Et quomodo poſſum, ſi non aliquis oſtenderit mihi; in which words are reproved the intollerable boldneſs of ſuch as will enterprize without any Teacher; yea, contemning all Doctors to unclaſp the Book, and thereby, inſtead of Eternal Food, drink up deadly Poiſon. For whereas the Scripture is miſconſtrued, and taken in a wrong ſenſe, that it is not the Scripture of God, but as St. Hierom ſaith, Writing upon the Epiſtle to the Galathians, it is the Scripture of the Devil: And we do not contend with Hereticks for the Scripture, but for the true ſenſe and meaning of the Scripture.

We read of Ceremonies in the Old Teſtament, as the Circumciſion, the Bells and Pomegranates; of Aaron's Apparel, with many other, and kinds of Sacrifices; which all were, as St. Paul ſaith unto the Hebrews, Juſtitia Carnis; and did not inwardly juſtify the Party before God, that objected, in Proteſtation of their Faith in Chriſt to come: And although they had the knowledg of every Fact of Chriſt, which was ſignified particularly by thoſe Ceremonies. And it is evident and plain, that the High Prieſt entred into the inner part of the Temple, (named, Sanctum Sanctorum) whereas the People might not follow, nor was it lawful for them to ſtand, but there where they could neither ſee, nor hear, what the Prieſt either ſaid, or did, as St. Luke in the firſt Chapter of his Goſpel, rehearſeth in the Hiſtory of Zachary.

Upon Conference of theſe two Teſtaments, may be plainly gathered this Doctrine, That in the School of Chriſt, many things may be ſaid and done, the Myſtery whereof the People knoweth not, neither are they bound to know. Which things, that is, that the People did not hear hear and underſtand the Common Prayer of the Prieſt and Miniſter, it is evident and plain, by the practice of the Ancient Greek Church, and that alſo that now is at Venice, or elſe-where.

In that Eaſt Church, the Prieſt ſtandeth, as it were, in a Travice, or Cloſet, hang'd round about with Curtains, or Vails, apart from the People. And after the Conſecration, when he ſheweth the Bleſſed Sacrament, the Curtains are drawn, whereof Chryſoſtom ſpeaketh thus; Cum Vela videris retrahi, tunc ſuperne Cœlum aperiri cogita; When thou ſeeſt the Vails, or Curtains drawn open, then think thou that Heaven is open from above.

It is alſo here to be noted, That there is two manners of Prayings, one Publick, another Private; for which cauſe the Church hath ſuch conſiderations of the Publick Prayer, that it deſtroyeth not, nor taketh away the Private Prayer of the People in time of Sacrifice, or other Divine Service; which thing would chance, if the People ſhould do nothing but hearken to anſwer, and ſay, Amen. Beſides the impoſſibility of the Matter, whereas, in a great Pariſh, every Man cannot hear what the Prieſt ſaith, though the Material Church were defaced, and he left the Altar of God, and ſtood in the midſt of the People.

Furthermore, If we ſhould confeſs that it were neceſſary to have Common-Prayer in the Vulgar Tongue, theſe two Hereſies would follow upon it; that Prayer profiteth no Man but him that underſtandeth it, and him alſo that is preſent and heareth it; and ſo, by conſequent, void was the Prayer for St. Peter in Priſon, by the Church abroad.

Now conſider the Practice of this Realm.

If we ſhould grant the Service to be in Engliſh, we ſhould not have that in the ſame form that it is in now, being in Latin; but be-like we ſhould have that, as it was, of late days. The Matter of which Service is taken out of the Pſalms, and other part of the Bible, Tranſlated into Engliſh, wherein are manifeſt Errors, and falſe Tranſlations, which all are by depravation of God's Scripture, and ſo, verè mendacia. Now if the Service be ſo fram'd, then may Men well ſay upon us, That we ſerve God with Lyes.

Wherefore we may not ſo travel and labour to alter the form of our Common-Prayer, that we leſe the Fruit of all Prayer, which by this barbarous contention, no doubt, we ſhall do. And the Church of God hath no ſuch cuſtom, as St. Paul alledgeth, in ſuch Contentions. And may not the whole World ſay unto us, as St. Paul ſaid unto the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 14. An à vobis Verbum Dei proceſſit, aut in vos ſolos pervenit? As though the whole Church had been ever in Error, and never had ſeen this Chapter of St. Paul before: And that the Holy Ghoſt had utterly forſaken his Office, in leading that into all Truth, till now of late, certain, boaſting of the Holy Ghoſt, and the ſincere Word of of God, hath enterpriſed to correct and overthrow the whole Church.

Auguſtinus, lib. 1. contra Julianum Pelagium, à Græcis pro ſuâ Hereſi profugum, querentem, ad hunc modum, reſpondit: Puto (inquit) tibi eam partem orbis debere ſufficere, in quâ primum Apoſtolorum ſuorum voluit Dominus glorioſiſſimo Martyrio Coronari. Et idem paulo poſt; Te certe (Julianum alloquitur) Occidentalis Terra generavit, Occidentalis Regeneravit Eccleſia. Quid ei quæris inferre, quod in eâ non inveniſti, quando in ejus membra veniſti? Imò, Quid ei quæris auferre, quod in eâ tu quoque accepiſti? Hæc ille.

A number of Authorities out of the Doctors we could rehearſe, that maketh for the Unity of the Church, and for not diſturbing the quiet Government of the ſame; which all impugn this their firſt Aſſertion by way of Argument. But becauſe they have framed their Aſſertion ſo, that we be compelled to defend the Negative, (in the probation whereof, the Doctors uſe not directly to have many words); therefore of purpoſe we leave out a number of the Sayings of the Doctors, (which all, as I ſaid before, would prove this firſt Matter by way of Argument) leſt we ſhould be tedious, and keep you too long in a plain Matter.

And therefore now to conclude, for not changing the Divine Service, and the Miniſtration of the Sacraments from the Learned Tongue (which thing doth make a Schiſm, and a Diviſion between us and the Catholick Church of God) we have brought in the Scripture that doth forbid all ſuch Schiſm. And alſo the Conſent and Cuſtom of the whole Church, which cannot Err, and maketh us bold to ſay as we do; with other things, as ye have heard, for confirmation of the ſame. And in anſwering to the firſt Matter, we intend (God willing) to ſay much more; beſeeching Almighty God ſo to inſpire the Heart of the Queen's Majeſty, and her moſt Honourable Council, with the Nobility of this Realm, and Us that be the Paſtors of the People in theſe Cauſes, that ſo we may diſpoſe of the Service of God, as we may therein ſerve God: And that we do not, by altering the ſaid Service from the Uniform manner of Chriſt's Church, but alſo highly diſpleaſe God, and procure to Us infamy of the World, the Worm of Conſcience, and Eternal Damnation; which God forbid: and grant us Grace to acknowledg, confeſs, and maintain his Truth. To whom be all Glory. Amen.

The Declaration of the Proceedings of a Conference begun at Weſtminſter, the laſt of March, 1559, concerning certain Articles of Religion; and the breaking up of the ſaid Conference, by default and contempt of certain Biſhops, Parties of the ſaid Conference.

THE Queen's moſt Excellent Majeſty having heard of diverſities of Opinions in certain Matters of Religion, amongſt ſundry of her loving Subjects; and being very deſirous to have the ſame reduced to ſome Godly and Chriſtian Concord, thought it beſt, by advice of the Lords, and others of her Privy Council, as well for the ſatisfaction of Perſons doubtful, as alſo for the knowledg of the very Truth, in certain Matters of difference, to have a convenient choſen number of the beſt Learned of either Part, and to confer together their Opinions and Reaſons; and thereby to come to ſome good and charitable Agreement. And hereupon, by her Majeſty's Commandment, certain of her ſaid Privy Council, declared this purpoſe to the Arch-biſhop of York, being alſo one of the ſaid Privy Council, and required him, that he would impart the ſame to ſome of the Biſhops, and to make choice of eight, nine, or ten of them; and that there ſhould be the like number named of the other part; and further alſo declared to him (as then was ſuppoſed) what the Matters ſhould be: and as for the time it was thought upon; and then after certain days paſt, it was ſignified by the ſaid Arch-biſhop, that there was appointed (by ſuch of the Biſhops to whom he had imparted this Matter) eight Perſons; that is to ſay, four Biſhops, and four Doctors, who were content, at the Queen's Majeſty's Commandment, to ſhew their Opinions, and as he termed it, render account of their Faith in thoſe Matters, which were mentioned, and that ſpecially in writing. Although, he ſaid, they thought the ſame ſo determined, as there was no cauſe to diſpute upon them. It was hereupon fully reſolved, by the Queen's Majeſty, with the Advice aforeſaid, that according to their deſire, it ſhould be in writing on both Parts, for avoiding of much alteration in words. And that the ſaid Biſhops ſhould, becauſe they were in Authority of Degree Superiours, firſt declare their Minds and Opinions to the Matter, with their Reaſons, in Writing. And the other number, being alſo eight Men of good degree in Schools, (and ſome having been in Dignity in the Church of England) if they had any thing to ſay to the contrary, ſhould the ſame day declare their Opinions in like manner. And ſo each of them ſhould deliver their Writings to the other to be conſidered what were to be improved therein; and the ſame to declare again in Writing at ſome other convenient day; and the like Order to be kept in all the reſt of the Matters.

Ex Chartophylac. Regio.

All this was fully agreed upon with the Arch-biſhop of York, and ſo alſo ſignified to both Parties; and immediately hereupon divers of the Nobility, and States of the Realm, underſtanding that ſuch a Meeting and Conference ſhould be, and that in certain Matters, thereupon the preſent Court of Parliament conſequently following, ſome Laws might be grounded, they made earneſt means to her Majeſty, that the Parties of this Conference might put and read their Aſſertions in the Engliſh Tongue, and that in the preſence of them, the Nobility, and others of her Parliament-Houſe, for the better ſatisfaction, and enabling of their own Judgments to treat and conclude of ſuch Laws, as might depend thereupon. This alſo being thought very reaſonable, was ſignified to both Parties, and ſo fully agreed upon. And the day appointed for the firſt Meeting to be the Friday in the Forenoon, being the laſt of March, at Weſtminſter-Church, where both for good Order, and for Honour of the Conferences by the Queen's Majeſty's Commandment; the Lords and others of the Privy-Council were preſent, and a great part of the Nobility alſo.

And notwithſtanding the former Order appointed and conſented unto by both Parties, yet the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and his Colleagues, alleadging, that they had miſtaken that their Aſſertions and Reaſons ſhould be written, and ſo only recited out of the Book, ſaid, Their Book was not then ready written, but they were ready to Argue and Diſpute, and therefore they would for that time repeat in Speech, that which they had to ſay to the firſt Propoſition.

This variation from the former Order, and ſpecially from that which themſelves had, by the ſaid Arch-biſhop, in Writing before required, (adding thereto the Reaſon of the Apoſtle, that to contend with Words, is profitable to nothing, but to the ſubverſion of the Hearer) ſeemed to the Queen's Majeſty ſomewhat ſtrange; and yet was it permitted, without any great reprehenſion, becauſe they excuſed themſelves with miſtaking the Order, and argued, that they would not fail, but put it in writing, and according to the former Order, deliver it to the other Part.

And ſo the ſaid Biſhop of Wincheſter, and his Colleagues, appointed Dr. Cole, Dean of Pauls, to be their Utterer of their Minds, who partly by Speech only, and partly by reading of Authorities written; and at certain times being informed of his Colleagues what to ſay, made a declaration of their Meanings and their Reaſons to the firſt Propoſition.

Which being ended, they were asked, by the Privy Council, If any of them had any more to be ſaid? and they ſaid; No. So as then the other part was licenſed to ſhew their Minds, which they did accordingly to the firſt Order, exhibiting all that which they meant, to propound in a Book written. Which, after a Prayer, and Invocation made moſt humbly to Almighty God, for the enduing of them with his Holy Spirit, and a Proteſtation alſo to ſtand to the Doctrine of the Catholick Church, builded upon the Scriptures, and the Doctrine of the Prophets and the Apoſtles, was diſtinctly read by one Robert Horn, Batchelor in Divinity, late Dean of Dureſm. And the ſame being ended, (with ſome likelyhood, as it ſeemed, that the ſame was much allowable to the Audience) certain of the Biſhops began to ſay contrary to their former Anſwer, that they had now much more to ſay to this Matter; wherein, although they might have been well reprehended for ſuch manner of cavillation, yet for avoiding any more miſtaking of Orders in this Colloquie, or Conference, and for that they ſhould utter all that which they had to ſay, it was both ordered, and thus openly agreed upon of both Parts, in the full Audience, that upon the Monday following, the Biſhops ſhould bring their Minds and Reaſons in Writing, to the ſecond Aſſertion, and the laſt alſo, if they could, and firſt read the ſame; and that done, the other Part ſhould bring likewiſe theirs to the ſame; and being read, each of them ſhould deliver to other the ſame Writings. And in the mean time the Biſhops ſhould put in writing, not only all that which Dr. Cole had that day uttered, but all ſuch other Matters, as they any otherwiſe could think of for the ſame; and as ſoon as might poſſible, to ſend the ſame Book, touching the firſt Aſſertion to the other part; and they ſhould receive of them that Writing which Maſter Horn had there read that day; and upon Monday it ſhould be agreed, what day they ſhould exhibit their Anſwer touching the firſt Propoſition.

Thus both Parts aſſented thereto, and the Aſſembly was quietly diſmiſſed. And therefore upon Monday the like Aſſembly began again at the Place and Hour appointed; and there, upon what ſiniſter or diſordered meaning, is not yet fully known, (though in ſome part it be underſtanded) the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and his Colleagues, and ſpecially Lincoln, refuſed to exhibit or read, according to the former notorious Order on Friday, that which they had prepared for the ſecond Aſſertion; and thereupon, by the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, they being firſt gently and favourably required, to keep the Order appointed, and that taking no place, being ſecondly, as it behoved, preſſed with the more earneſt requeſt, they neither regarding the Authority of that Place, nor their own Reputation, nor the Credit of the Cauſe, utterly refuſed that to do.

And finally, being again particularly every one of them apart, diſtinctly by Name required to underſtand their Opinions therein; they all (ſaving one, which was the Abbot of Weſtminſter, having ſome more conſideration of Order, and his Duty of Obedience, than the other) utterly and plainly denied to have their Book read, ſome of them as more earneſtly than other ſome, ſo alſo ſome others more indiſcreetly and irreverently than others.

Whereupon giving ſuch Example of Diſorders, Stubbornneſs, and Self-will, as hath not been ſeen and ſuffered in ſuch an Honourable Aſſembly, being of the two Eſtates of this Realm, the Nobilities and Commons, beſides the Perſons of the Queen's Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, the ſame Aſſembly was diſmiſſed, and the Godly, and moſt Chriſtian Purpoſe of the Queen's Majeſty made fruſtrate: And afterwards, for the contempt ſo notoriouſly made, the Biſhops of Wincheſter and Lincoln, who have moſt obſtinately diſobeyed, both Common Authority, and varied manifeſtly from their own Order; ſpecially Lincoln, who ſhewed more folly than the other, were condignly committed to the Tower of London; and the reſt, ſaving the Abbot of Weſtminſter, ſtand bound to make daily their perſonal appearance before the Council, and not to depart the City of London and Weſtminſter, until further Order be taken with them for their Diſobedience and Contempt.

An Addreſs made by ſome Biſhops and Divines, to Queen Elizabeth, againſt the Uſe of Images.

To the Queen's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

WE knowing your gracious Clemency, and conſidering the neceſſity of the Matter that we have to move, the one doth encourage us, and the other compel us (as before) to make our humble Petition unto your Highneſs, and to renew our former Suit, not in any reſpect of ſelf-will, ſtoutneſs, or ſtriving againſt your Majeſty, (God we take to Witneſs) for with David, we confeſs that we are but as Canes mortui, aut Pulices, in compariſon. But we do it only for that fear and reverence which we bear to the Majeſty of Almighty God, in whoſe Hands to fall, 'tis terrible; for it lieth in his Power to deſtroy for ever, and to caſt both Body and Soul into Hell Fire. And leſt in giving juſt offence to the little Ones, in ſetting a Trap of Errors for the Ignorant, and digging a Pit for the Blind to fall into, we ſhould not only be guilty of the Blood of our Brethren, and deſerve the wrathful Væ, and Vengeance of God, but alſo procure, to our reclaiming Conſciences, the biting Worm, that never dieth, for our endleſs confuſion. For in what thing ſoever we may ſerve your Excellent Majeſty, not offending the Divine Majeſty of God, we ſhall, with all humble Obedience, be moſt ready thereunto, if it be even to the loſs of our Life; for ſo God commandeth of us, Duty requireth of us, and we with all conformity have put in proof. And as God, through your gracious Government, hath delivered unto us innumerable Benefits, which we moſt humbly acknowledg, and with due Reverence daily give him Thanks. So we doubt not, but that of his Mercy He will happily finiſh in your Majeſty that good Work, which of His free Favour He hath moſt graciouſly begun; that following the Examples of the Godly Princes which have gone before, you may clearly purge the polluted Church, and remove all occaſions of Evil. And for ſo much as we have heretofore, at ſundry times, made Petition to your Majeſty concerning the Matter of Images, but at no time exhibited any Reaſons for the removing of the ſame. Now, leſt we ſhould ſeem to ſay much, and prove little, to alleage Conſciences without the Warrant rant of God, and unreasonably require that, for the which we can give no Reason, we have at this time put in writing, and do most humbly exhibit to your gracious Consideration, those Authorities of the Scriptures, Reasons, and pithy Persuasions, which as they have moved all such our Brethren, as now bear the Office of Bishops, to think and affirm Images not expedient for the Church of Christ; so will they not suffer us, without the great offending of God, and grievous wounding of our own Consciences, (which God deliver us from) to consent to the erecting or retaining of the same in the place of Worshipping; and we trust, and most earnestly ask it of God, that they may also persuade your Majesty, by your Regal Authority, and in the Zeal of God, utterly to remove this Offensive Evil out of the Church of England, to God's great Glory, and our great Comfort.

Here follow the Reasons against them, of which I have given a full Abstract in the History, and therefore do not set them down here, for they are very large. The Address concludes in these words.

Having thus declared unto your Highness a few Causes of many, which do move our Consciences in this Matter, we beseech your Highness, most humbly, not to strain us any further, but to consider that God's Word doth threaten a terrible Judgment unto us, if we being Pastors and Ministers in His Church, should assent unto the thing, which in our Learning and Conscience, we are persuaded doth tend to the confirmation of Error, Superstition, and Idolatry; and finally, to the ruine of the Souls committed to our Charge, for the which we must give an account to the Prince of Pastors at the last Day. We pray your Majesty also, not to be offended with this our Plainness and Liberty, which all good and Christian Princes have ever taken in good part at the hands of Godly Bishops. Heb. 13. 1 Pet. 5.

St. Ambrose, writing to Theodosius the Emperor, useth these words; Sed neque Imperiale est libertatem dicendi negare, neque Sacerdotale quod sentiat non dicere. Epist. lib. 5. Epist. 29.

And again; In causa vero Dei quem audies, si Sacerdotem non audies, cujus Majore peccatur periculo? Quis tibi verum audebit dicere, si Sacerdos non audeat? Ibidem.

These, and such-like Speeches of St. Ambrose, Theodosius, and Valentinianus, the Emperors did take in good part; and we doubt not, but your Grace will do the like, of whose, not only Clemency, but also Beneficence, we have largely tasted.

We beseech your Majesty also, in these and such-like Controversies of Religion, to refer the discusement, and deciding of them, to a Synod of the Bishops, and other Godly Learned Men, according to the Example of Constantinus Magnus, and other Christian Emperors, that the Reasons of both Parties being examined by them, the Judgment may be given uprightly in all doubtful Matters.

And to return to this present Matter; We most humbly beseech your Majesty to consider, That besides weighty Causes in Policy, which we leave to the Wisdom of the Honourable Counsellors, the establishing of Images by your Authority, shall not only utterly discredit our Ministeries, as builders of the thing which we have destroyed, but also blemish blemiſh the Fame of your moſt Godly Brother, and ſuch notable Fathers as have given their Lives for the Teſtimony of God's Truth, who by publick Law removed all Images.

The Almighty and Everliving God, plentifully endue your Majeſty with His Spirit and Heavenly Wiſdom; and long preſerve your moſt gracious Reign, and proſperous Government over us, to the advancement of his Glory, to the overthrow of Superſtition, and to the Benefit and Comfort of all your Highneſſes loving Subjects. Amen.

Ten Letters written to, and by Dr. Parker, concerning his Promotion to the See of Canterbury.

An Original.

AFter my right-hearty Commendations, these are to signify unto you, That for certain Matters touching your self, which I trust shall turn you to good, I would wish that you should repair hither to London, with as convenient speed as you can, where you shall find me at Burgeny House in Pater-Noster Row, if it be not over-long e're you come. And if it chance that I be returned into Suffolk before your coming, then I would you should make your repair unto my Brother-in-Law, Sir William Cecil, the Queen's Secretary, declaring unto him, that I appointed you to wait upon him to know his Pleasure touching such Matters as he and I did talk of concerning you. Thus wishing you well to do, I bid you heartily farewel. Ex M. SS. Reverendiſ. D. D. Gul. Arch. Cant.

RIght Worshipful, with my thankful Duty of Commendations, hearing of your sickness still to occupy you, I was right-heartily sorry that I molested you with so long a Letter, into which fault, for that I will not fall again at this present, I shall use the fewer words. Sir, If I may know at what time I might, in your return down, wait on your Worship at Burgeny, or at New-Market, I will, by God's Grace, so appoint my self to be there first, the rather for that I would not give occasion to have your Journey either protracted, or yet diverted out of the right Line thereof. In the mean time I shall beseech God to restore your strength, that ye may the sooner be restored to the Common-Wealth, which in this apparent necessity of worthy Persons, I fear, feeleth God's Hand in this his Visitation to be burdenous. I would wish ye were not much stirring abroad in the distemperance of the Air, so contrarious to the state of Mens Bodies, once pierced with this insolent Quartane, as Experience sheweth. I think the Spring-time, as in natural respects, must be expected, though Almighty God be bound to no time. Thus I heartily commend you to his gracious protection, this 20*th* of December.

Your most bounden assuredly to command, M. P.

A Letter written to him by Secretary Cecil.

AFter my hearty Commendations. The Queen's Highneſs minding preſently to uſe your Service in certain Matters of Importance, hath willed me ſo to ſignify unto you, to the end you ſhould forthwith, upon the ſight hereof, put your ſelf in order to make your undelaied repair hither unto London; at which your coming up, I ſhall declare unto you her Majeſty's further Pleaſure, and the occaſion why you are ſent for; and hereof praying you therefore in no wiſe to fail, I bid you well to fare.

AFter hearty Commendations, theſe are to ſignify unto you, That ye may aſſure your ſelf, that you ſhall have any thing that I can do for you touching the requeſt of your Letters, or any other Matter being in my Power: I do think that ye have received, e're this, a Letter from Mr. Secretary, willing you to come up immediately, if your Health will ſuffer, for certain weighty Matters touching the Queen's Service; ſo as I truſt, by your preſence, all things to your own contentation ſhall come the better to paſs. If this Letter be not come to your Hands, and therewith you be not able to come, it ſhall be behoveful for you to ſignify ſo much, becauſe I have been willed alſo to haſte your coming up. Thus right-heartily fare ye well. Written the 4*th* of January, 1558. By,

Right Worſhipful;

AFter my Duty of Commendations. Where of late I received your Letters to this effect, That I ſhould repair up unto you at London, upon occaſion, as ye wrote, which may turn me to good, ſo judged by a late Conference with the Right Worſhipful Sir William Cecil, Secretary to the Queen's Majeſty, of long time my ſpecial good Friend and Maſter, ye ſhall underſtand that my Quartane hath ſo much diſtempered the ſtate of my Health, that without apparent danger, I cannot as yet commit my ſelf to the adventure of the Air, as by divers eſſays I hrve attempted of late, to my greater pain, and further hinderance; whereupon, if your opportunity might ſo ſerve, I would moſt heartily pray your Worſhip to ſignify ſo much. And further, yet in confidence of your old good Heart to me, I would be a Suiter to you, as I was once to Sir John Cheek, my entire good Friend, and Patron, to the ſaid Sir William Cecil, that where he was deſirous, by his mediation, to do me good, (as here you uſe to call it) even as I was then framed in mind, ſo am I at this day. I would be inwardly heavy and ſorry that his favourable Affection ſhould procure me any thing above the reach of mine Ability, whereby I ſhould both diſhoneſt my ſelf, and diſappoint the expectation of ſuch as may think that in me, which I know is not; but ſpecially I might clog and cumber by Conſcience to Godward, before whom I look every day to appear to make mine Anſwer, which I think, and as I truſt, is not far off: Notwithſtanding though I would moſt fain wear out the reſt of my Life in private ſtate, yet concerning that very ſmall Talent credited unto me, I would not ſo unthankfully to God enſue my quiet, that I could not be content to beſtow it, ſo it were there, whether my Heart and Conſcience afore this time, and daily yet doth incline me: I mean, to be no further abled, but by the Revenue of ſome Prebend, (without charge of Cure, or of Government) to occupy my ſelf to diſpenſe God's Word amongſt the ſimple ſtrayed Sheep of God's Fold, in poor deſtitute Pariſhes and Cures, more meet for my decayed Voice, and ſmall Quality, than in Theatrical and great Audience: which walk, and wiſh I would to be near their Quarters, where we both were born, by occaſion whereof I might have opportunity to wait other-while on you at Redgrave, whither I have vowed my firſt Journey, immediately upon my ſtrength recovered, by the occaſion of your friendly Requeſt of your Letters ye ſent me. And if I might be yet bolder with you, as I was with the ſaid Sir John Cheek, to diſcloſe my deſire of all Places in England, I would wiſh to beſtow moſt my time in the Univerſity, the ſtate whereof is miſerable at this preſent, as I have had intelligence from time to time thereof. And if in any reſpect I could do Service, as a weak Member of the Common-Wealth, I think I might do it with them, having long Acquaintance, and ſome Experience in the Doings thereof; which Judgment had the ſaid Sir John Cheek towards me:

And therefore to ſet me on work, had once, by the favour of the ſaid Mr. Secretary, procured to have me named to the Maſterſhip of Trinity College, which yet chanced not to that effect, God otherwiſe determining the Matter in his Providence. But to tell you my Heart, I had rather have ſuch a thing as Bennet-College is in Cambridg, a Living of twenty Nobles by the Year at the moſt, than to dwell in the Deanry of Lincoln, which is 200 at the leaſt. Now Sir, ye may ſee herein, yet my Ambition in writing thus much, but I ſhall pray you to accept the Circumſtances, which ye may better inſinuate to Mr. Secretary, than I dare be bold, by my rude Letters, to moleſt his favourable goodneſs, or yet preſcribe to your, or his Worſhip, Wiſdom and Prudence. In concluſion, at the Reverence of God, I pray you, either help that I be quite forgotten, or elſe ſo appointed, that I be not entangled now of new, with the concourſe of the World, in any reſpect of publick ſtate of living, whereby I ſhall have an unfeigned ſignification of your very good Will to me indeed, and be bound to pray for you during my Life.

Some of your Scholars at Cambridg, enjoying the benefit of your liberal Exhibition, have ſent your Worſhip now their Letters, ſome be ſick and abſent.

Thus repriſing the quiet of my Mind, and having good hope in your friendlineſs to the conſideration aforeſaid, I wiſh you a full recovery of your Health, and a continuance in God's Grace and Favour, with all your Family.

Your Beadſman to command,

M. P.

A long Letter of Dr. Parker's, excuſing himſelf from the Offer of the Arch-biſhoprick of Canterbury.

An Original.

RIght Honourable, my Duty preſuppoſed. It is an old ſaid Proverb, Ubi quis dolet ibidem & manum frequenter habet, beſeeching you, for God's ſake, the rather to bear the importunity of this my hand-writing, ſuppoſing that this may be one of the laſt Solicitations that I ſhall moleſt you with.

Sir, Your ſignification uttered to me at my firſt coming to you at London, concerning a certain Office ye named to me, did hold me in ſuch carefulneſs all my time of being there, with the recurring of a dull Diſtemperance, ſet in my Head by the Dregs of my Quartane, and as yet not remedied, whereby I had no diſpoſition to my Book; beſide ſome other diſpleaſant Cogitations concerning the ſtate of this Time, made me have ſo little joy of my being at London, as I had never leſs in my Life: moſt glad when my Back was turned thereunto. But to come near to my intent of writing, I ſhall pray to God, yea, beſtow beſtow that Office well, ye ſhall need care the leſs for the reſidue. God grant it chanceth neither on an arrogant Man, neither on a faint-hearted Man, nor on a covetous Man; The firſt ſhall both ſit in his own light, and ſhall diſcourage his Fellows to join with him in Unity of Doctrine, which muſt be their whole ſtrength; for if any heart-burning be betwixt them, if private Quarrels ſtirred abroad be brought home, and ſo ſhall ſhiver them aſunder, it may chance to have that ſucceſs which I fear in the concluſion will follow. The ſecond Man ſhould be too weak to commune with the Adverſaries, who would be the ſtouter upon his puſillanimity. The third Man not worth his Bread, profitable for no Eſtate in any Chriſtian Common-Wealth, to ſerve it rightly.

For my part, I pray God I never fall into his Indignation and Wiſdom; it were not for a Subject to deſerve his Prince's Diſpleaſure, and ſorry would I be to diſcontent Mr. Secretary, and you, for whoſe worſhipful Favours, I count my ſelf more bound to pray to God, and to wiſh well to them for all the Men in the Realm beſide. I ſpeak it ſincerely, without flattery; for though I have little Wit, yet I can diſcern betwixt Men, who delight to be flattered, and who not, though I would not conſider how diſhoneſt it were for me to uſe it. But, Sir, except ye both moderate and reſtrain your over-much good Will in the former reſpect to me-ward, I fear, in the end, I ſhall diſlike you both, and that your Benevolencies ſhould, by occaſion of my obſtinate untowardneſs, jeopard me into Priſon; yet there ſhall I bear you my good Heart, which I had rather ſuffer in a quiet Conſcience, than to be intruded into ſuch Room and Vocation, wherein I ſhould not be able to anſwer the Charge to God, nor to the World, wherein I ſhould not ſerve the Queen's Honour, which I wiſh moſt heartily advanced in all her wiſe and godly Proceedings; nor yet ſhould I live to the Honour of the Realm, and ſo finally ſhould but work a further diſpleaſant contemplation to my good Friends who preferred me.

This, this is the Thing that makes me afraid, my Lord, though I paſſed not on mine own ſhame and rebuke; and therefore, by God's Favour, and your good Helps, I never intend to be of that Order, better or worſe, higher nor lower; Non omnia poſſumus omnes; & tutiſſimum eſt ut quiſque hanc artem exerceat in qua educatus, & ad quam natura homines formavit. And as for other Furniſhments, I am too far behind. When I came firſt up to London, I had thirty pounds in my Purſe, not ten ſhillings more, whereof I have waſted a good part; and if I were placed, as ſome of my Friends wiſh to me, what would that do to begin, or to furniſh my Houſhold. And I hear how the Citizens of Norwich pray for the Soul of their laſt Biſhop, for when upon his departure they ſeized his Goods, to anſwer his Debts to them, ſtraight-way came the Queen's Officers and diſcharged them all, which yet were not able, for all his ſpare Hoſpitality, to pay half that he owed.

Furthermore, to come to another Conſideration, of a further Imperfection, which I would have diſſembled to you and others, but it cannot be, but I muſt open it to you, my aſſured good Maſter and Friend, Friend, in ſecrecy, whoſe old good Will maketh me the leſs abaſhed, to be ſo homely with you at this time. In one of my Letters, I made a little ſignification of it, but peradventure ye did not mark it. Sir, I am ſo in Body hurt and decayed, coram Deo non mentior, that whatſoever my Ability were, either of worldly Furniture, or inward Quality; and though my Heart would right-feign ſerve my Soveraign Lady, the Queen's Majeſty, in more reſpects than of my Allegiance, not forgetting what words her Grace's Mother ſaid to me of her, not ſix days before her apprehenſion, yet this my painful Infirmity, will not ſuffer it in all manner of Services. Flying in a Night, for ſuch as ſought for me, to my peril, I fell off my Horſe ſo dangerouſly, that I ſhall never recover it; and by my late Journey up, and my being there at London, not well ſetled, it is increaſed to my greater pain. I am fain ſometime to be idle, when I would be occupied; and alſo to keep my Bed, when my Heart is not ſick.

This was one cauſe why I was importune to you for that room, whereof I made mention in my former Letters, by the which I might be abled, by the portion of that Stipend, in this my Impoveriſhment, to wear out my Life tolerably, and ſhould not by that be occaſioned to come up to any Convocations, as having no Voice in that Houſe; and peradventure being there, I might be a mean for the fewer Matters of diſturbance, to come up to Mr. Secretary, now Chancellor there, to moleſt him, more than ſhould need, whoſe gentle affability might provoke ſome inconſiderate Men not to regard his other greater Affairs. And yet though I were ſo placed, I would not forſwear London, or the Court either, at times, as could ſtand with my Ability and Health of Body, if my Service could be any ways acceptable, and were agreeable to the provortion of my Capacity.

Sir, Becauſe I may not diſſemble with you, I have told you all now, do with me what ye will, I might be aſhamed to ſpend ſo many words in a Cauſe private of my ſelf; but yet becauſe ye muſt be Partner of ſome lack, if I anſwered not the expectation, I could no leſs do, but make you privy before-hand. I pray you think not that the Prognoſtication of Mr. Michael Noſtre Dame reigneth in my Head. I eſteem that fantaſtical Hotch-potch not ſo well, as I credit Lucianus Book, De veris Narrationibus; nor yet all other vain Propheſies of Sands, more than I regard Sir Thomas Moor's Book of Fortunes Anſwers upon the chance of three Dice caſting. I would I ſaw no more cauſe to fear the likelyhood of God's Wrath deſerved, for diſolute Life, to fall upon the Realm, by the evidence of his true Word, and by God's old practices: and yet no Man conſidereth his ire already begun, Dum non ſinit viros doloſos dimidiare dies ſuos. I ſhall pray to God to defend you and your Family, and that ye may revolve in Mind Chriſt's ſerious Admonition, Quid proderit homini, ſi totum mundum lucretur, ſi animæ ſuæ detrimentum patiatur. Et non in abundantia cujuſquam, eſt vita hominis ex his quæ poſſidet.

Mat. 16. Luc. 11.

Sir, My Duty of Heart maketh me bold with you, not otherwiſe meaning before God, but thanking him many times that Mr. Secretary and you may have the doing of things in this greedy World, and that ye ye have ſo good credit, and ready acceſs to the Queen's Majeſty, to comfort her good Inclination, whom I beſeech the God of Heaven to preſerve with her Council, yea, and with the Seniority of her Spiritual Miniſters alſo, againſt whom I ſee a great Charge ſet before them, to overcome that, muſt ſpecially go through their hands by diligent watching, upon the unruly Flock of the Engliſh People, if they were not ſo much acloyed with Worldly Collections, Temporal Commiſſions, and Worldly Proviſions. I ſpeak this the rather in this reſpect, which I thought good to put to your underſtanding; At my laſt being at London, I heard and ſaw Books printed, which be ſpread abroad, whoſe Authors be Miniſters of good eſtimation; the Doctrine of the one, is to prove, That a Lady Woman cannot be, by God's Word, a Governor in a Chriſtian Realm. And in another Book going abroad, is Matter ſet out to prove, That it is lawful for every private Subject to kill his Sovereign, ferro, veneno, quocunque modo, if he think him to be a Tyrant in his Conſcience, yea, and worthy to have his Reward for his Attempt: Exhorrui cum iſta legerem. If ſuch Principles be ſpread into Mens Heads, as now they be framed and referred to the Judgment of the Subject, of the Tenant, and of the Servant, to diſcuſs what is Tyranny, and to diſcern whether his Prince, his Landlord, his Maſter, is a Tyrant, by his own fancy, and collection ſuppoſed, What Lord of the Council ſhall ride quietly-minded in the Streets, among deſperate Beaſts? What Maſter ſhall be ſure in his Bed-chamber? It is the ſureſt way for every Man to ſerve God truly in his Vocation, to deſerve the rather his protection: and then both the Devil and Man, Foreign and Inteſtine, ſhall have their Malices retorted upon themſelves again. But thus goeth the Devil about to dull the heretical Stomachs of Princely Men, to do good in their turn of Time, to ſerve God and the Common-Wealth. They ſay that the Realm is full of Anabaptiſts, Arrians, Libertines, Free-will Men, &c. againſt whom only I thought Miniſters ſhould have needed to fight in Unity of Doctrine. As for the Romiſh Adverſaries, their Mouths may be ſtopped with their own Books, and Confeſſions of late days; I never dreamed that Miniſters ſhould be compelled to impugn Miniſters; the Adverſaries have good ſport betwixt themſelves, to prognoſtick the likelyhood. Some Proteſtants peradventure, perceiving how Men nip them to diſable them, to keep any Learned Men in Houſe to confer with, and to beat down theſe Seditious Sects, if any inconvenience, for want of preaching, ſhall fall, they may chance to ſay a Verſe of David's Pſalter, Lætabitque juſtus, cum viderit vindictam, & manus ſuas lavabit in ſanguine peccatoris, as not caring for their Aſſurances, who abaſe them ſo low: and ſome peradventure have caſt already their ſtarting ſhifts, and make Proviſion againſt all Adventures. Well, I pray God all be Conſcience to God, that is ſometimes ſo pretended: Men be Men, yea, after the School of Affliction, Men be Men. Hypocriſie is a privy Thief, both in the Clergy and in the Laity. To make an end of ſuch Conference, which I would gladly have told you preſently, but I could not wait ſo much leiſure in you, and opportunity; and loth I was to have begun my Tale, and not to have ended it, by reaſon of interruption by others. But as for the principal occaſion of my writing, howſoever it may diſlike you, yet ſhall I ever-more acknowledg my Duty to you, yea, though now ye give me quite up: I reverence you ſo much, that I had rather ye diſliked me utterly by times, with your leſs repentance, rather than ye and other of my loving Friends ſhould bear any envy; or any diſpleaſant unthankfulneſs, and ſo too late to repent for your commending of me, (if a perſwaſion in an appearance, is not ſurely grounded to be ſeen) when Experience ſhould have ſhewed the Trial. And therefore I write it to you in time again, after the ſignification of my very firſt Letters to prevent you, for I know ye may, with a few words, remedy all the towardneſs yet concluded.

And think not, I pray your Honour, that I ſeek mine privat Gain, or my idle eaſe, put me where ye will elſe; and if, as far as my power of Knowledg, and of Health of Body will extend, I do not apply my ſelf to diſcharge my Duty, let me be thruſt out again like a Thief. I thank God my Conſcience condemneth me not, that I have been aforetime any great Gatherer; and now, for the upholding of two or three Years more of Life, to heap unproportionably, I count it madneſs; and more than this purpoſe, by God's Grace, I dare promiſe nothing: And as for ſuch few Folks which I may leave behind me, they ſhall not ſay by me, I truſt, That happy be theſe Children whoſe Fathers go to the Devil for their ſake. Your Lordſhip knoweth with what Patrimony I began the World with, and yet have hitherto lived with enough, yea, when all my Livings were taken from me, yet God, I thank him, miniſtred to me ſufficiently, above the capacity of my underſtanding, or foreſeeing. And thus commending your good Lordſhip to that merciful Governance, I pray your Honourable Wiſdom to put this ſcribling out of the Way, from every Man's ſight and intelligence.

Right Honourable, after my duty of Commendations to your Lordſhip, I am bold now to ſend you a Fancy of my Head, expreſſed in theſe few Leaves; which if I had compact in a Letter, it would have ſeemed over-long, and being compriſed in Leaves, may appear to be but a very little Book of one Sheet of Paper, which yet I ſo deviſed, upon conſideration of your Buſineſs, which will not ſuffer you to be long detained in Matters impertinent, and therefore ye may turn in the Leaf and read it at divers leaſures, if your Lordſhip ſhall vouchſafe the reading. And thus wiſhing you joy of Heart, which I feel to be a great Treaſure in this World, as the want, a grievous torment; I pray God preſerve your Honourable Goodneſs, with my good Lady your Wife. If ye ſee ought in my Quire worth reformation, ye know I am diſciplinable, and have read, quod meliora ſunt vulnera diligentis, quam fraudulenta oſcula odentis: Wherefore, reſerving mine unreaſonable determination, as you ſhall know, I ſhall yield my ſelf wholly conformable to your Honour, ubi, quomodo, quando, aliquid, vel tandem nihil. Of an Occaſion lately miniſtred, I have ſent my Letters to Mr. Secretary concerning another Matter, primo Martii.

Your aſſured Orator.

A Letter written to him by the Lord Keeper concerning it.

An Original.

THat before this time I have not ſent you Anſwer to your laſt Letters; the cauſe hath been, for that I could by no mean underſtand to what end the Matter mentioned in thoſe Letters would grow unto; but perceiving this day, by a Reſolution made in the Queen's Highneſs preſence, that your Friends ſhall very hardly deliver you of the Charge written of in the ſame Letters, I thought it good to make you privy thereunto; and therewith to adviſe you, to commit to the Judgment of your Friends, your Ability and Diſability to ſerve, where and when you ſhall be called. If I knew a Man to whom the deſcription made, in the beginning of your Letter, might more juſtly be referred, than to your ſelf, I would prefer him before you; but knowing none ſo meet indeed, I take it to be my duty to prefer you before all others, and the rather alſo, becauſe otherwiſe I ſhould not follow the Advice of your own Letter. The reſt, which is much, I defer until our next meeting. It is like, that e're it be long, you ſhall receive Letters ſubſcribed by me and others jointly. Thus right-heartily farewel. From the Court the 17*th* of May, 1559.

Yours aſſuredly,

An Order ſent to him, requiring him to come up to London.

AFter our hearty Commendations. Theſe be to ſignify unto you, that for certain Cauſes, wherein the Queen's Majeſty intendeth to uſe your Service, her Pleaſure is, That you ſhould repair up hither with ſuch ſpeed, as you conveniently may; and at your coming up, you ſhall underſtand the reſt. Thus right-heartily fare ye well.

AFter our hearty Commendations. Where before this time we directed our Letters unto you, declaring thereby, that for certain Cauſes, wherein the Queen's Majeſty intendeth to uſe your Service, you ſhould repair hither with all convenient ſpeed, whereof we have as yet received none Anſwer. And therefore, doubting leſt by the default of the Meſſenger, the Letter be not come to your hands, we have thought good again to write unto you, to the intent you ſhould underſtand her Hignneſs Pleaſure is, That you ſhould make your repair hither with all ſpeed poſſible. Thus right-heartily farewel. From the Court, the 28*th* day of May, 1559.

Dr. Parker's Letter to the Queen, excuſing himſelf.

An Original.

PLeaſeth it your moſt Honourable Majeſty to be gracious Lady to my poor Suit, which at this time extream neceſſity compelleth me to make, both in reſpect of my conſtrained Conſcience to Almighty God, as alſo in the regard of my Duty which I owe to your noble Eſtate, and moſt high Authority. So it is, moſt gracious and ſoveraign Lady, where I have underſtanding of your moſt favourable Opinion toward me, Your Grace's moſt ſimple Subject, concerning the Arch-biſhoprick of Canterbury; In conſideration whereof, I ought, and do acknowledg my moſt bounden Duty to be a faithful Orator for your Grace during my Life. Yet calling to examination my great unworthineſs for ſo high a Function, which mine diſability I might alledge at length in particularity, but for moleſting your Graces moſt weighty Affairs, I am bold thus, by my writing, to approach to your Honour to diſcharge me of that ſo high and chargeable an Office, which doth require a Man of ſo much Wit, Learning, Vertue, and Experience than I ſee, and perfectly know can be performed of me worthily, to occupy it to God's Pleaſure, to Your Grace's Honour, and to the Wealth of your loving Subjects beſide. Many other imperfections in me, as well for temporal Ability for the furniſhing thereof, as were ſeemly to the Honour of the Realm; as alſo of infirmity of Body, which will not ſuffer me to attend on ſo difficult a Cure, to the diſcharge thereof, in any reaſonable expectation. And where, moſt gracious Lady, Lady, beſide my humble Duty of Allegiance to your Princely Dignity, I am otherwiſe, for the great Benefits which ſometime I received at Your Grace's honourable Mother's Benevolence (whoſe Soul I doubt not but is in bliſsful felicity with God) moſt ſingularly obliged, above many other, to be Your moſt faithful Beadſman, both in thanking Almighty God for his Fatherly Protection hitherto over Your noble Perſon, And alſo furthermore to pray for the continuance of your fortunate Reign in all godly Proſperity. So I am right ſorry, and do lament within my ſelf, that I am ſo baſely qualified inwardly in Knowledg, and outwardly in externe Sufficiencies, to do Your Grace any meet Service, as I would wiſh could be acceptable, and to Your Graces expectation: aſſuring Your noble Eſtate, that in any other ſmaller Vocation, under the degree of ſuch chargeable Offices, and more agreeable to my Infirmity, if it ſhall be ſo ſeem, to Your high Wiſdom, and merciful Liberality, I ſhall endeavour my ſelf to attend thereon; referring yet my ſelf wholly to Your Grace's Pleaſure, rather than by juſt allegation of my unworthineſs, the loyal Duty of my faithful Heart ſhould be any ways ſuſpected to Your reverend Majeſty.

Your Grace's poor Subject,
Matthew Parker.

The Inſtrument of Dr. Parker's Conſecration; with ſome Atteſtations of the Authenticalneſs of it.

Rituum atque Ceremoniarum Ordo, in Conſecrando Reverendiſſimo in Chriſto Patre, Mattheo Parker, Cantuarienſi Archiepiſcopo, in Sacello ſuo apud Manerium ſuum de Lambeth, die Dominico 17. viz. die Menſis Decembris, Anno Dom. 1559. habit.

PRincipio, Sacellum Tapetibus ad Orientem adornabatur, ſolum vero panno rubro inſternebatur, Menſa quoq; Sacris peragendis neceſſaria, tapeto pulvinariq; ornata ad Orientem ſita erat. Ex MS. Col. C. C. Cantab.

Quatuor preterea Cathedræ, quatuor Epiſcopis, quibus munus conſecrandi Archiepiſcopi delegabatur, ad auſtrum Orientalis Sacelli partis erant poſitæ.

Scamnum preterea tapeto pulvinaribuſq; inſtratum, cui Epiſcopi genubus flexis inniterentur, ante Cathedras ponebatur.

Pari quoq; modo Cathedra, ſcamnumq; tapeto pulvinariq; ornatum, Archiepiſcopo, ad Borealem Orientalis ejuſdem Sacelli partis plagam poſita erant.

helmo Barlow olim Bathon. & Wellen. Epiſcopo, nunc vero ad Ciceſtren. Epiſcopatum electo, Johanne Scory olim Ciceſtriæ Epiſcopo & nunc ad Herefordenſem vocato, Milone Coverdallo olim Exonienſe Epiſcopo, & Johanne Hodgskinne Bedfordiæ Suffraganeo. Qui omnes poſtquam ſedes ſibi paratas ordine ſinguli ſuo occupaſſent, Preces continuo matutinæ per Andream Pierſon Archiepiſcopi Capellanum clara voce recitabantur; quibus peractis, Johannes Scory (de quo ſupra diximus) ſuggeſtum conſcendit, atque inde aſſumpto ſibi, in themà, Seniores ergo qui in vobis ſunt obſecro conſenior, &c. non ineleganter concionabatur.

Finita concione, egrediuntur ſimul Archiepiſcopus reliquique quatuor Epiſcopi Sacellum, ſe ad ſacram communionem paraturi, neque mora confeſtim per borealem portam in veſtiarum ad hunc modum veſtiti redeunt. Archiepiſcopus nimirum linteo ſuperpelliceo (quod vocant) induebatur. Ciceſtrenſis electus, capa ſerica ad ſacra peragenda paratus utebatur. Cui miniſtrabant operamq; ſuam prebebant duo Archiepiſcopi Capellani, Nicholaus, viz. Bullingham Lincolniæ Archidiaconus, & Edmundus Geſt Cantuarienſis quoq; Archidiaconus, capis ſericis ſimiliter veſtiti. Hereford electus & Bedford Suffraganeus, linteis ſuperpelliceis induebantur.

Finito tandem Evangelio, Hereforden. Electus, Bedfordiæ Suffraganeus & Milo Coverdallus (de quibus ſupra) Archiepiſcopum coram Ciceſtren. electo apud menſam in Cathedra ſedenti hiis verbis adduxerunt; Reverende in Deo Pater, hunc virum pium pariter atq; doctum tibi offerimus atq; preſentamus, ut Archiepiſcopus conſecretur. Poſtque hæc dixiſſent, proferebatur illico Reginæ diploma ſive mandatum pro conſecratione Archiepiſcopi, quo per Reverendum Thomam Yale Legum Doctorem perlecto, Sacramentum de Regio Primatu ſive ſuprema ejus authoritate tuenda juxta Statuta 1. An. Regni Sereniſſimæ Reginæ noſtræ Elizabeth. promulgata ab eodem Archiepiſcopo exigebatur, quod cum ille ſolemniter tactis corporaliter ſacris Evangeliis conceptis verbis preſtitiſſet, Ciceſtrenſ. electus quædam præfatus atque populum ad orationem hortatus, ad Litanias decantandas Choro reſpondente ſe accinxit. Quibus finitis, poſt quæſtiones aliquot Archiepiſcopo per Ciceſtrien. electum propoſitas, & poſt orationes & ſuffragia quædam juxta formam Libri antedicti Parliamenti editi, apud Deum habita, Ciceſtrienſis, Herefordienſis, Suffraganeus Bedfordienſis & Milo Coverdallus, manibus Archiepiſcopo impoſitis. Accipe (inquiunt Anglicè) Spiritum Sanctum, & gratiam Dei quæ jam per impoſitionis manuum in te eſt excitare memento. Non enim timoris, ſed virtutis, dilectionis & ſobrietatis ſpiritum dedit nobis Deus. His ita dictis, Biblia Sacra illi in manibus tradiderunt hujuſmodi apud eum verba habentes; In legendo, hortando, & docendo vide diligens ſis, atque ea meditare aſſidue quæ in hiſce Libris ſcripta ſunt, noli in his ſegnis eſſe quo incrementum inde proveniens omnibus innoteſcat & palam fiat. Cura quæ ad te & ad docendi munus ſpectant diligenter. Hoc enim modo non teipſum ſolum, ſed & reliquos Auditores tuos per Jeſum Chriſtum Dominum Dominum noſtrum ſalvabis. Poſtquam hæc dixiſſent, ad reliqua communionis ſolennia pergit Ciceſtrenſis, nullum Archiepiſcopo tradens paſtorale baculum : cum quo communicabant una Archiepiſcopus, & illi Epiſcopi ſupra nominati cum aliis etiam nonnullis.

Finitis tandem peratiſque ſacris, egreditur per borealem orientis Sacelli partis portam Archiepiſcopus quatuor illis comitatus Epiſcopis qui eum conſecraverant, & confeſtim iiſdem ipſis ſtipatus Epiſcopis per eandem revertitur portam albo Epiſcopali ſuperpelliceo, crimeraque (ut vocant) ex nigro ſerico indutus, circa collum vero collare quoddam ex pretioſis pellibus ſabellinis (vulgo Sables vocant) conſutum geſtabat. Pari quoque modo Ciceſtrenſis & Herefordenſis, ſuis Epiſcopalibus amictibus, ſuperpelliceo ſcilicet & crimera uterque induebatur. D. Coverdallus vero & Bedfordiæ Suffraganeus togis ſolummodo talaribus utebantur. Pergens deinde Occidentalem portam verſus Archiepiſcopus Thomæ Doyle Economo, Johanni Baker Theſaurario, & Johanni Marche computo Rotulario, ſingulis ſingulos Albos dedit Baculos, hoc ſcilicet modo eis muneribus & officiis ſuis ornans.

Hiis itaque hunc ad modum ordine ſuo, ut jam ante dictum eſt, peractis, per occidentalem portam Sacellum egreditur Archiepiſcopus generoſioribus quibuſque ſanguine ex ejus familia eum precedentibus, reliquis vero eum a tergo ſequentibus.

Acta geſtaque hæc erunt omnia in præſentia Reverendorum Epiſcoporum, Edmundi Gryndall Londinenſis Epiſcopi electi, Richardi Cockes Elienſis electi, Edwini Sandes Wigornienſis electi, Anthonii Huſe Armigeri, Principalis & Primarii Regiſtrarii dicti Archiepiſcopali, Thomæ Argal Armigeri Regrarii Ciceſtriæ Prerogativæ Cantuarienſis, Thomæ Willet, & Johannis Incent Notariorum publicorum, & aliorum quoque nonnullorum.

The

The Rules to be obſerved in Tranſlation of the Bible.

1. THe ordinary Bible read in the Church, commonly called the Biſhops Bible, to be followed, and as little altered, as the Truth of the Original will permit.

2. The Names of the Prophets, and the Holy Writers, with the other Names of the Text, to be retained, as nigh as may be, accordingly as they were vulgarly uſed.

3. The old Eccleſiaſtical Words to be kept, viz. the word Church not to be tranſlated Congregation, &c.

4. When a Word hath divers ſignifications, that to be kept which hath been moſt commonly uſed by the moſt of the Ancient Fathers, being agreeable to the Propriety of the Place, and the Analogy of the Faith.

5. The diviſion of the Chapters to be altered, either not at all, or as little as may be, if neceſſity ſo require.

6. No Marginal Notes at all to be affixed, but only for the explanation of the Hebrew or Greek words, which cannot, without ſome circumlocution, ſo briefly and fitly be expreſt in the Text.

7. Such Quotations of Places to be marginally ſet down, as ſhall ſerve for the fit reference of one Scripture to another.

8. Every particular Man of each Company, to take the ſame Chapter, or Chapters, and having tranſlated, or amended them ſeverally by himſelf, where he thinketh good, all to meet together, confer what they have done, and agree for their parts what ſhall ſtand.

9. As any one Company hath diſpatched any one Book in this manner, they ſhall ſend it to the reſt, to be conſidered of ſeriouſly and judiciouſly, for his Majeſty is very careful in this Point.

10. If any Company, upon the review of the Book ſo ſent, doubt or differ upon any Place, to ſend them word thereof; note the Place, and withal ſend the Reaſons; to which if they conſent not, the difference to be compounded at the General Meeting, which is to be of the chief Perſons of each Company at the end of the Work.

11. When any Place of ſpecial obſcurity is douted of, Letters to be directed, by Authority, to ſend to any Learned Man in the Land, for his judgment of ſuch a Place.

12. Letters to be ſent from every Biſhop, to the reſt of his Clergy, admoniſhing them of this Tranſlation in hand; and to move and charge, as many as being skilful in the Tongues; and having taken pains in that kind, to ſend his particular Obſervations to the Company, either at Weſtminſter, Cambridg, or Oxford.

13. The Directors in each Company, to be the Deans of Weſtminſter and Cheſter for that Place; and the King's Profeſſors in the Hebrew or Greek in either Univerſity.

14. Theſe Tranſlantions to be uſed, when they agree better with the Text than the Biſhops Bible, viz. Tindoll's. Matthews. Coverdale's. Whitchurch's. Geneva.

15. Beſides

15. Beſides the ſaid Directors before mentioned, three or four of the moſt Ancient and Grave Divines, in either of the Univerſities, not employed in Tranſlating, to be aſſigned by the Vice-Chancellor, upon conference with reſt of the Heads, to be Overſeers of the Tranſlations, as well Hebrew as Greek; for the better obſervation of the 4*th* Rule above ſpecified.

Number 11.

A Declaration of certain principal Articles of Religion, ſet out by the Order of both Arch-biſhops, Metropolitans, and the reſt of the Biſhops, for the Unity of Doctrine to be taught and holden of all Parſons, Vicars, and Curats, as well in teſtification of their common Conſent in the ſaid Doctrine, to the ſtopping of the mouths of them that go about to ſlander the Miniſters of the Church, for diverſity of Judgment: as neceſſary for the inſtruction of their People, to be read by the ſaid Parſons, Vicars, and Curats, at their Poſſeſſion-taking, or firſt entry into their Cures. And alſo after that, yearly, at two ſeveral times; that is to ſay, the Sundays next following Eaſter-day, and St. Michael the Arch-Angel, or on ſome other Sunday, within one month after thoſe Feaſts, immediately after the Goſpel.

FOraſmuch as it appertaineth to all Chriſtian Men, but eſpecially to the Miniſters and the Paſtors of the Church, being Teachers and Inſtructers of others, to be ready to give a Reaſon of their Faith, when they ſhall be thereunto required: I for my part now appointed your Parſon, Vicar, or Curat, having before my Eyes the Fear of God, and the Teſtimony of my Conſcience, do acknowledg for my ſelf, and require you to aſſent to the ſame.

I.

Firſt; That there is but one living and true God, of infinite Power, Wiſdom, and Goodneſs; the maker and preſerver of all Things. And that in Unity of this God-head, there be three Perſons of one Subſtance, of equal Power and Eternity; the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt.

II.

I believe alſo whatſoever is contained in the Holy Canonical Scriptures. In the which Scriptures are contained all things neceſſary to Salvation; by the which alſo, all Errors and Hereſies may ſufficiently be reproved and convicted; and all Doctrine and Articles, neceſſary to Salvation, eſtabliſhed. I do alſo moſt firmly believe and confeſs all the Articles contained in the Three Creeds; The Nicene Creed, Athanaſius Creed, and our common Creed, called, the Apoſtles Creed; for theſe do briefly contain the principal Articles of our Faith, which are at large ſet forth in the Holy Scriptures.

III.

I do acknowledg alſo that Church to be the Spouſe of Chriſt, wherein the Word of God is truly taught, the Sacraments orderly miniſtred, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, and the Authority of the Keys duly uſed. And that every ſuch particular Church, hath authority to inſtitute, to change, clean to put away Ceremonies, and other Eccleſiaſtical Rites, as they be ſuperfluous, or be abuſed; and to conſtitute other, making more to ſeemlineſs, to Order, or Edification.

IV.

Moreover, I confeſs, That it is not lawful for any Man to take upon him any Office or Miniſtry, either Eccleſiaſtical or Secular, but ſuch only as are lawfully thereunto called by their High Authorities, according to the Ordinances of this Realm.

V.

Furthermore, I do acknowledg the Queen's Majeſty's Prerogative and Superiority of Government of all Eſtates, and in all Cauſes, as well Eccleſiaſtical as Temporal, within this Realm, and other her Dominions and Countries, to be agreeable to God's Word, and of right to appertain to her Highneſs, in ſuch ſort as is in the late Act of Parliament expreſſed, and ſithence by her Majeſty's Injunctions declared and expounded.

VI.

Moreover, touching the Biſhop of Rome, I do acknowledg and confeſs, that by the Scriptures, and Word of God, he hath no more Authority than other Biſhops have in their Provinces and Dioceſſes: And therefore the Power which he now challengeth, that is, to be the Supream Head of the Univerſal Church of Chriſt, and ſo to be above all Emperors, Kings, and Princes, is an uſurped Power, contrary to the Scriptures and Word of God, and contrary to the Example of the Primitive Church; and therefore is, for moſt juſt Cauſes, taken away and aboliſhed in this Realm.

VII.

Furthermore, I do grant and confeſs, That the Book of Common Prayer, and Adminiſtration of the Holy Sacraments, ſet forth by the Authority

Authority of Parliament, is agreeable to the Scriptures, and that it is Catholick, Apoſtolick, and moſt for the advancing of God's Glory, and the edifying of God's People; both for that it is in a Tongue that may be underſtanded of the People, and alſo for the Doctrine and Form of Adminiſtration contained in the ſame.

VIII.

And although, in the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm, there is neither Exorciſm, Oil, Salt, Spittle, or hallowing of the Water now uſed; and for that they were of late Years abuſed, and eſteemed neceſſary. Where they pertain not to the ſubſtance and neceſſity of the Sacrament, they be reaſonably aboliſhed, and yet the Sacrament full and perfectly miniſtred, to all Intents and Purpoſes, agreeable to the Inſtitution of our Saviour Chriſt.

IX.

Moreover, I do not only acknowledg, that Private Maſſes were never uſed amongſt the Fathers of the Primitive Church; I mean, publick Miniſtration, and receiving of the Sacrament by the Prieſt alone, without a juſt number of Communicants, according to Chriſt's ſaying, Take ye, and eat ye, &c. But alſo that the Doctrine that maintaineth the Maſs to be a propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead, and a mean to deliver Souls out of Purgatory, is neither agreeable to Chriſt's Ordinance, nor grounded upon Doctrine Apoſtolick. But contrary-wiſe, moſt ungodly and moſt injurious to the precious Redemption of our Saviour Chriſt, and his only-ſufficient Sacrifice offered once for ever, upon the Altar of the Croſs.

X.

I am of that mind alſo, That the Holy Communion, or Sacrament, of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, for the due obedience to Chriſt's Inſtitution, and to expreſs the virtue of the ſame, ought to be miniſtred unto the People under both kinds. And that it is avouched by certain Fathers of the Church, to be a plain Sacrilege to rob them of the Myſtical Cup, for whom Chriſt hath ſhed his moſt precious Blood, ſeeing he himſelf hath ſaid, Drink ye all of this. Conſidering alſo, That in the time of the Ancient Doctors of the Church, as Cyprian, Hierom, Auguſtine, Gelaſius, and others, ſix hundred Years after Chriſt, and more, both the Parts of the Sacrament were miniſtred to the People.

Laſt of all.

As I do utterly diſallow the extolling of Images, Reliques, and feigned Miracles; and alſo all kind of expreſſing God Inviſible, in the form of an Old Man, or the Holy Ghoſt in form of a Dove; and all other vain worſhipping of God, deviſed by Man's fantaſy; beſides, or contrary contrary to the Scriptures; As wandring on Pilgrimages, ſetting up of Candles, praying upon Beads, and ſuch-like Superſtition; which kind of Works, have no promiſe of Reward in Scripture, but contrary-wiſe, Threatnings and Maledictions: So I do exhort all Men to the Obedience of God's Law, and to the Works of Faith, as Charity, Mercy, Pity, Alms, devout and fervent Prayer, with the affection of the Heart, and not with the Mouth only; Godly Abſtinence and Faſting, Chaſtity, Obedience to the Rulers and Superior Powers, with ſuch-like Works, and Godlineſs of Life commanded by God in his Word; which, as St. Paul ſaith, hath Promiſes both of this Life, and of the Life to come; and are Works only acceptable in God's ſight.

Theſe things, above-rehearſed, though they be appointed by common Order, yet do I, without all compulſion, with freedom of Mind and Conſcience, from the bottom of my Heart, and upon moſt ſure perſuaſion, acknowledg to be true and agreeable to God's Word. And therefore I exhort you all, of whom I have Cure, heartily and obediently to embrace and receive the ſame; That we all joining together in unity of Spirit, Faith, and Charity, may alſo at length be joined together in the Kingdom of God, and that through the Merits and Death of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. To whom, with the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt, be all Glory and Empire, now and for ever. Amen.

Sir Walter Mildmay's Opinion, concerning the keeping of the Queen of Scots (October 26. 1569.) at Windſor Caſtle.

An Original.

The Queſtion to be conſidered on, is, Whether it be leſs perilous to the Queen's Majeſty, and the Realm, to retain the Queen of Scots in England, or to return her home into Scotland?

IN which Queſtion, theſe things are to be conſidered. On the one ſide, What Dangers are like to follow if ſhe be retained here; and thereupon, if ſo avoiding of them, it ſhall be thought good to return her, then what Cautions and Proviſions are neceſſary to be had.

On the other ſide, are to be weighed the Dangers like to follow if ſhe be returned home; and thereupon, if for eſchewing of them, it ſhall be thought good to retain her here, then what Cautions and Proviſions are in that Caſe neceſſary.

Dangers in retaining the Queen of Scots.

Her unquiet and aſpiring Mind, never ceaſing to practiſe with the Queen's Subjects. Her late practice of Marriage between the Duke of Norfolk and her, without the Queen's knowledg. The Faction of the Papiſts, and other Ambitious Folks, being ready and fit Inſtruments for her to work upon. The Commiſeration that ever followeth ſuch as be in miſery, though their Deſerts be never ſo great. Her cunning and ſugred entertainment of all Men that come to her, whereby ſhe gets both Credit and Intelligence. Her practice with the French and Spaniſh Ambaſſadors, being more near to her in England, than if ſhe were in Scotland; and their continual ſollicitation of the Queen for her delivery, the denial whereof may breed War. The danger in her eſcaping out of Guard, whereof it is like enough ſhe will give the Attempt. So as remaining here, ſhe hath time and opportunity to practiſe and nouriſh Factions, by which ſhe may work Confederacy, and thereof may follow Sedition and Tumult, which may bring peril to the Queen's Majeſty and the State. Finally, it is ſaid, That the Queen's Majeſty, of her own diſpoſition, hath no mind to retain her, but is much unquieted therewith, which is a thing greatly to be weighed.

Cautions if ſhe be returned.

To deliver her into the Hands of the Regent, and the Lords now governing in Scotland, to be ſafely kept. That ſhe meddle not with the State, nor make any alteration in the Government, or in Religion. That by ſufficient Hoſtages it may be provided, that neither any Violence be uſed to her Perſon, nor that ſhe be ſuffered to govern again, but live privately, with ſuch honourable Entertainment as is meet for the King of Scots Mother. That the League Offenſive and Defenſive, between France and Scotland, be never renewed. That a new and perpetual League be made between England and Scotland, whereby the Queen's Majeſty may ſhew an open Maintenance and Allowance of the King's Authority and Eſtate, and of the preſent Government, ſo as the Scots may wholly depend on her. That the Regent, and the Lords of Scotland, do make no compoſition with the Scots Queen, neither ſuffer her to marry, without conſent of the Queen's Majeſty. That the Faults whereof ſhe hath been accuſed, and her declining and delaying to Anſwer that Accuſation, may be publiſhed to the World, the better to diſcourage her Factious Party, both here and in Scotland.

Dangers in returning Her.

The manner how to deliver her Home, with the Queen's Majeſty's Honour and Safety, is very doubtful. For if ſhe be delivered in Guard, that came hither free, and at liberty, how will that ſtand with the Queen's Honour, and with the Requeſts of the French and Spaniſh Kings, that have continually ſollicited her free delivery, either into Scotland or France; or if ſhe die in Guard, either violently or naturally, her Majeſty ſhall hardly eſcape ſlander. If, again, ſhe be delivered home at Liberty, or if being in Guard ſhe ſhould eſcape, then theſe Perils may follow.

The ſuppreſſing of the preſent Government in Scotland, now depending upon the Queen's Majeſty, and advancing of the contrary Faction depending upon the French. The alteration of Religion in Scotland. The renewing of the League, Offenſive and Defenſive, between France and Scotland, that hath ſo much troubled England. The renewing of her pretended Claim to the Crown of this Realm. The likelyhood of War to enſue between France, Scotland, and Us, and the bringing in of Strangers into that Realm to our annoyance, and great charge, as late Experience hath ſhewed. The ſupportation that ſhe is like to have of the French and Spaniſh Kings. And though Peace ſhould continue between England and Scotland, yet infinite injuries will be offered by the Scots Queen's Miniſters upon the Borders, which will turn to the great hurt of the Queen's Majeſty's Subjects, or elſe to her greater Charges to redreſs them; for the change of the Government in Scotland, will change the Juſtice which now is had, unto all Injury and Unjuſtice. The likelyhood ſhe will revoke the Earl Bothwell, now her Huſband, though unlawful, as it is ſaid, a Man of moſt moſt evil and cruel Affection to this Realm, and to his own Countrymen: Or, if ſhe ſhould marry another that were a-like Enemy, the Peril muſt needs be great on either ſide.

And albeit to theſe Dangers may be generally ſaid, That ſuch Proviſion ſhall be made, by Capitulations with her, and by Hoſtages from the Regent, and the Lords of Scotland, as all theſe Perils ſhall be prevented.

To that may be anſwered.

That no Fact which ſhe ſhall do here in England will hold, for ſhe will alleage the ſame to be done in a Foreign Country, being reſtrained of Liberty. That there is great likelyhood of eſcape, whereſoever ſhe be kept in Scotland; for her late eſcape there, ſheweth, how ſhe will leave no way unſought to atchieve it; and the Country being, as it is, greatly divided, and of nature marvellouſly Factious, ſhe is the more like to bring it to paſs. Or if the Regent, by any practice, ſhould yield to a compoſition, or finding his Party weak, ſhould give over his Regiment, Then what aſſurance have we, either of Amity or Religion. That the Regent may be induced to do this, appeareth by his late ſecret Treaty with the Duke of Norfolk, for her Marriage, without the Queen's Majeſty's knowledg. And though the Regent ſhould perſevere conſtant, yet if he ſhould be taken away directly, or indirectly, (the like whereof is ſaid, hath been attempted againſt him) then is all at large, and the Queen of Scots moſt like to be reſtored to her Eſtate, the Factions being ſo great in Scotland, as they are; ſo as the Caſe is very tickle and dangerous to hang upon ſo ſmall a Thread, as the Life of one Man, by whom it appeareth the whole at this preſent is contained.

And touching the Hoſtages, though that Aſſurance might be good to preſerve her from Violence in Scotland, yet it may be doubted how the ſame will be ſufficient to keep her from eſcaping or governing again, ſeeing, for her part, ſhe will make little Conſcience of the Hoſtages if ſhe may prevail; and the puniſhing of the Hoſtages, will be a ſmall ſatisfaction to the Queen's Majeſty for the Troubles that may enſue. And for the doubt of her eſcape, or of Rebellion within this Realm, it may be ſaid, That if ſhe ſhould not be well guarded, but ſhould be left open to practiſe, then her Eſcape, and the other Perils, might be doubted of; but if the Queen's Majeſty hold a ſtricter hand over her, and put her under the Care of a faſt and circumſpect Man, all practice ſhall be cut from her, and the Queen's Majeſty free from that Peril. And more ſafe it is for the Queen to keep the Bridle in her own Hand, to reſtrain the Scotiſh Queen, than in returning her home, to commit that truſt to others, which by Death, Compoſition, or abuſing of one Perſon, may be diſappointed.

And if ſhe ſhould by any means recover her Eſtate, the doubt of Rebellion there, is not taken away, but rather to be feared, if ſhe have ability to her Will. And if ſhe find ſtrength, by her own or Foreign Friends, ſhe is not far off to give Aid, upon a main Land, to ſuch as will ſtir for her; which, ſo long as ſhe is here, they will forbear, leſt it might bring moſt Peril to her ſelf, being in the Queen's Hands. The like reſpect, no Doubt will move Foreign Princes to become Requeſters, and no Threatners, for her delivery.

And where it is ſaid, That the Queen's Majeſty cannot be quiet ſo long as ſhe is here, but it may breed danger to her Majeſty's Health. That is a Matter greatly to be weighed, for it were better to adventure all, than her Majeſty ſhould inwardly conceive any thing to the danger of her Health. But as that is only known to ſuch as have more inward Acquaintance with her Majeſty's diſpoſition, than is fit for ſome other to have. So again, it is to be thought, that her Majeſty being wiſe, if the Perils like to follow, in returning her Home, were laid before her; and if ſhe find them greater than the other, ſhe will be induced eaſily to change her Opinion, and thereby may follow to her Majeſty's great ſatisfaction and quietneſs.

Cautions if ſhe be retained.

To remove her ſomewhat nearer the Court, at the leaſt within one days Journey of London, whereby it ſhall be the more eaſy to underſtand of her Doings.

To deliver her in cuſtody to ſuch as be thought moſt ſound in Religion, and moſt void of Practice.

To diminiſh her number, being now about forty Perſons, to the one half, to make thereby the Queen's Charges the leſs, and to give her the fewer means of Intelligence.

To cut from her all Acceſs, Letters and Meſſages, other than ſuch as he that ſhall have the Charge ſhall think fit.

To ſignify to all Princes, the occaſion of this ſtreight Guard upon her, to be her late practice with the Duke of Norfolk, which hath given the Queen cauſe to doubt: further aſſuring them, that ſhe ſhall be uſed honourably, but kept ſafely from troubling the Queen's Majeſty, or this State.

That ſhe be retained here, until the Eſtate of Scotland be more ſetled, and the Eſtate of other Countries now in garboil, be quieted, the Iſſue whereof is like to be ſeen in a Year or two.

Number 12.

A Letter written by the Earl of Leiceſter, to the Earl of Suſſex, concerning the Queen of Scots; taken from the firſt Draught of it, written with his own hand.

MY good Lord, I received your Letter in the anſwer of mine; and though I have not written ſooner again to your Lordſhip, both according to your deſire, and the neceſſity of our Caſes at this time; yet I doubt not but you are fully advertiſed of her Majeſty's Pleaſure otherwiſe. For my own part, I am glad your Lordſhip hath proſpered ſo well in your Journey, and have anſwered, in all Points, the good Opinion conceived of you. Ex M. SS. Nob. D. Evilin.

And touching her Majeſty's further Reſolution, for theſe Cauſes, my Lord, I aſſure you, I know not well what to write. Firſt, I ſee her Majeſty willing and deſirous, as Reaſon is, to work her own Security, and the quietneſs of her State, during her time, which I truſt in God ſhall be far longer than we ſhall live to ſee end of. And herein, my Lord, there be ſundry Minds, and among our ſelves, I muſt confeſs to your Lordſhip, we are not fully agreed which way is beſt to take. And to your Lordſhip, I know I may be bold, beſide the Friendſhip I owe you, the Place you hold preſently, doth require all the underſtanding that may be, to the furtherance of her Majeſty's good Eſtate; wherefore I ſhall be the bolder even to let you know as much as I do, and how we reſt among us.

Your Lordſhip doth conſider, for the State of Scotland, her Majeſty hath thoſe two Perons, being divided, to deal with, the Queen of Scotland, lately by her Subjects deprived, and the young King her Son Crown'd and ſet up in her Place. Her Majeſty, of theſe two, is to chuſe, and of neceſſity muſt chuſe which of them ſhe will allow and accept, as the Perſon ſufficient to hold the principal Place. And here groweth the Queſtion in our Council to her Majeſty, Which of theſe two are moſt fit for her to maintain and join in Amity with? To be plain with your Lordſhip, The moſt in number do altogether conceive her Majeſty's beſt and ſureſt way is, to maintain and continue the young King in this his Eſtate, and thereby to make her whole Party in Scotland, which by the ſetling of him, with the cauſe of Religion, is thought moſt eaſieſt, moſt ſafeſt, and moſt probable for the perpetual quieting and benefit to her own Eſtate, and great aſſurance made of ſuch a Party, and ſo ſmall Charges thereby, as her Majeſty may make account to have the like Authority, and aſſured Amity in Scotland, as heretofore ſhe had in the time of the late Regent.

The Reaſons againſt the other, are theſe ſhortly.

The Title that the Queen claimeth to this Crown: The overthrow of Religion in that Country: The impoſſibility of any aſſurance for the obſerving of any Pact or Agreement made between our Soveraign and and her. Theſe be Cauſes your Lordſhip ſees ſufficient to diſſuade all Men from the contrary Opinion. And yet, my Lord, it cannot be denied, upon indifferent looking into the Matter on both ſides, but the cleareſt is full enough of Difficulties. And then, my Lord, is the Matter diſputable; and yet I think verily, not for Argument-ſake, but even for Duty and Conſcience-ſake, to find out Truth, and ſafeſt means for our Soveraign's beſt doing. And thus we differ. The firſt you have heard touching the young King.

On the other ſide, this it is thought, and of theſe I muſt confeſs my ſelf to your Lordſhip to be one: And God is my Judg, whether it be for any other reſpect in this World, but that I ſuppoſe, and verily believe it may prove beſt for her Majeſty's own quietneſs during her time.

And here I muſt before open to your Lordſhip indeed her Majeſty's true State ſhe preſently ſtands in; which, though it may be granted the former Advice the better way, yet how hardly it layeth in her Power to go thorow withal, you ſhall eaſily judg. For it muſt be confeſſed, That by the taking into her protection the King and the Faction, ſhe muſt enter into a War for it: And as the leaſt War being admitted, cannot be maintained without great Charge: ſo ſuch a War may grow, France or Spain ſetting in foot, as may cauſe it to be an intollerable War. Then being a War, it muſt be Treaſure that muſt maintain it. That ſhe hath Treaſure to continue any time in War, ſurely, my Lord, I cannot ſee it: And as your Lordſhip doth ſee the preſent Relief for Mony we truſt upon, which either failing us, or it riſing no more than I ſee it like to be, not able long to laſt; Where is there further hope of help hereafter? For my own part I ſee none. If it be ſo, then, my Lord, that her Majeſty's preſent eſtate is ſuch as I tell you, which I am ſure is true; How ſhall this Counſel ſtand with ſecurity, by taking a Party to enter into a War, when we are no way able to maintain it; for if we enter into it once, and be driven, either for Lack, or any other way, to ſhrink, what is like to follow of the Matter, your Lordſhip can well conſider; the beſt is, we muſt be ſorry for that we have done, and per-chance ſeek to make a-mends, where we neither would nor ſhould. This is touching the preſent State we ſtand in. Beſides we are to remember what already we have done; how many ways, even now together, the Realm hath been univerſally burdened.

Firſt, For the keeping of new Bands, after the furniſhing of Armour; and therein how continually the Charge ſooner hath grown, than Subſidies paid.

And laſtly, the marvellous Charge in moſt Countries againſt the late Rebellion, with this Loan of Mony now on the neck of it. Whether this State doth require further cauſe of impoſition, or no, I refer to your Lordſhip? And whether entring into a further Charge than her Majeſty hath preſently wherewithal to bear, it will force ſuch a Matter or no, I refer to wiſer to judg.

And now, my Lord, I will ſhew you ſuch Reaſons as move me to think as I do. In Worldly Cauſes, Men muſt be governed by Worldly Policies; and yet ſo to frame them, as God, the Author of all, be chiefly regarded. For him we have received Laws, under which all Mens Policies and Devices ought to be ſubject; and through his Ordinance, Ordinance, the Princes on the Earth have Authority to give Laws; by which alſo, all Princes have the Obedience of the People. And though in ſome Points, I ſhall deal like a Worldly Man for my Prince, yet I hope I ſhall not forget that I am a Chriſtian, nor my Duty to God.

Our Queſtion is this; Whether it be meeter for our Soveraign to maintain the young King of Scotland, and his Authority; or upon Compoſition, reſtore the Queen of Scots into her Kingdom again? To reſtore her ſimply, we are not of Opinion, for ſo I muſt confeſs a great over-ſight, and doubt no better Succeſs, than thoſe that do Object moſt Perils thereby to enſue. But if there be any Aſſurances in this World to be given, or any Proviſion by Worldly Policy to be had, then, my Lord, I do not ſee but Ways and Means may be uſed with the Queen of Scots, whereby her Majeſty may be at quiet, and yet delivered of her preſent great Charge. It is granted and feared of all ſides, that the cauſe of any trouble or danger to her Majeſty, is the Title the Queen of Scotland pretends to the Crown of this Realm. The Danger we fear ſhould happen by her, is not for that ſhe is Queen of Scotland, but that other, the great Princes of Chriſtendom do favour her ſo much, as in reſpect of her Religion, they will in all Cauſes aſſiſt her; and ſpecially, by the colour of her Title, ſeem juſtly to aid and relieve her, and the more lawfully take her and her Cauſes into their Protection. Then is the Title granted to be the chief Cauſe of Danger to our Soveraign. If it be ſo, Whether doth the ſetting up the Son in the Mothers Place, from whence his Title muſt be claimed, take away her Title in the Opinion of thoſe Princes, or no, notwithſtanding ſhe remain Priſoner? It appeareth plainly, No; for there is continual Labour and Means made, from the greateſt Princes, our Neighbours, to the Queen's Majeſty, for reſtoring the Queen of Scotland to her Eſtate and Government, otherwiſe they proteſt open Relief and Aid for her. Then though her Majeſty do maintain the young King in his preſent Eſtate, yet it appears that other Princes will do the contrary: And having any advantage, how far they will proceed, Men may ſuſpect. And ſo we muſt conceive, that as long as this Difference ſhall continue, by the maintaining of theſe two, ſo long ſhall the ſame Cauſe remain, to the trouble and danger of the Queen's Majeſty. And now to avoid this whilſt ſhe lives, What better Mean is there to take this Cauſe away, but by her own conſent, to renounce and releaſe all ſuch Intereſt or Title as ſhe claimeth, either preſently or hereafter, during the Life of her Majeſty, and the Heirs of her Body. Albeit, here may two Queſtions be moved.

Firſt, Whether the Scots Queen will renounce her Title, or no?

Secondly, If ſhe will do ſo, What Aſſurance may ſhe give for the performance thereof?

To the firſt, It is moſt certain ſhe hath, and preſently doth offer, wholly and frankly, to releaſe and renounce all manner of Claims and Titles, whatſoever they be, to the Crown of this Realm, during her Majeſty's Life, and the Heirs of her Body.

And for the ſecond; She doth likewiſe offer all manner of Security and Aſſurances that her Majeſty can deviſe, and is in that Queen's poſſible Power to do, ſhe excepteth none.

Then

Then muſt we conſider what may be Aſſurances, for here is the difficulty. For that Objections be that Princes never hold promiſes longer than for their own Commodity; and what Security ſoever they put in, they may break if they will. All this may be granted; but yet that we muſt grant alſo, that Princes do daily Treat and deal one with another; and of neceſſity are forced to truſt to ſuch Bonds and Aſſurances as they contract by. And as there is no ſuch Surety to be had in Worldly Matters, but all are ſubject to many Caſualties; yet we ſee ſuch Devices made, even among Princes, as doth tie them to perform that, which if they might conveniently chuſe, they would not. And in this Matter of the Queen of Scotland, ſince ſhe doth offer both to leave the Cauſe of the Difference that is between the Queen's Majeſty and her; and alſo to give all Surety that may be by our ſelves deviſed to obſerve the ſame; I do not ſee but ſuch means may be deviſed to tie her ſo ſtrongly, as though ſhe would break, yet I cannot find what advantage ſhe ſhall get by it. For beſide, that I would have her own ſimple Renunciation to be made by the moſt ſubſtantial Inſtrument that could be deviſed. The aſſent of ſome others ſhould confirm the ſame alſo. Her own Parliaments at home ſhould do the like with the full Authority of the whole Eſtates. They ſhould deliver her Son, and ſuch other principal Noblemen of her Realm for Hoſtages, as the Queen's Majeſty ſhould name. She ſhould alſo put into her Majeſty's Hands, ſome one piece or two of her Realm, and for ſuch a time as ſhould be thought meet by her Majeſty, except Edinburgh. The Queen's Majeſty might alſo, by ratifying this by a Parliament here, make a Forfeiture, if the Queen of Scotland ſhould any way, directly or indirectly, go about to infringe this agreement of all ſuch Titles and Claims that did remain in the Queen of Scotland, after her Majeſty and her Iſſue, never to be capable of any Authority or Soveraignty within this Realm. Theſe I would think to be ſufficient Bonds to bind any Prince, ſpecially no mightier than ſhe is. And this much more would I have, that even as ſhe ſhall be thus bound, for the relief of her Title to the Queen's Majeſty and her Iſſue; So ſhall ſhe ſuffer the Religion received and eſtabliſhed in Scotland already, to be confirmed, and not altered. In like ſort, the Amity between theſe two Realms, to be ſuch, and ſo frankly united, as no other League with any Foreign Prince, ſhould ſtand in force to break it. For I think verily, as the firſt is chiefeſt touching her Majeſty's own Perſon, ſo do I judg the latter, I mean, the continuation of the Religion already there received, to be one of the aſſuredſt and likelieſt means to hold her Majeſty a ſtrong and continual Party in Scotland. The trial hereof hath been already ſufficient, when her Majeſty had none other Intereſt at all, but only the maintenance of the True Religion, the ſame Cauſe remaining ſtill the ſame Affection in the ſame Perſons that do profeſs it, I truſt, and it is like, will not change. And though the Scots Queen ſhould now be ſetled in her Kingdom again, yet is ſhe not like to be greater or better eſteemed now than heretofore, when both her Authority was greater, and her good will ready to alter this Religion, but could not bring it to paſs. No more is it like theſe further Proviſions being taken, ſhe ſhall do it now. And the laſt Cauſe alſo is not without great hope of ſome good Succeſs; for as the oppreſſion of Strangers heretofore had utterly wearied them of that Yoke, ſo hath this peaceable time, between them and us, made them know the Liberty of their own, and the Commodity of us their Neighbours.

This, my Lord, doth lead me to lean to this Opinion, finding thereby rather both more ſurety, and more quietneſs, for my Sovereign's preſent time, having, by the contrary, many occaſions of trouble cut off, and the intolerable Charge eſchewed, which I cannot find by any poſſible means, her Majeſty able to ſuſtain for any long time.

Thus haſtily I am driven to end my long cumberſome Letter to your Lordſhip, though very deſirous to impart my mind herein to your Lordſhip.

SANDER's Book

OF THE

Engliſh Schiſm.

AN APPENDIX.

IT has been obſerved of Theeves, that by a long practice in that ill courſe of Life, they grow ſo in love with it, that when there is no Advantage to be made by Stealing, yet they muſt keep their Hand in uſe, and continue their addreſs and dexterity in it: ſo alſo Lyars, by a frequent Cuſtom, grow to ſuch a habit, that in the commoneſt things, they cannot ſpeak Truth, even though it might conduce to their Ends more than their Lyes do. Sanders had ſo given himſelf up to vent Reproaches and Lyes, that he often does it for nothing, without any End, but to carry on a Trade, that had been ſo long driven by him, that he knew not how to lay it down. He wrote our Hiſtory, meerly upon the Reports that were brought him, without any care or information about the moſt publick and moſt indifferent Things: but not content to ſet down thoſe Tattles, he ſhews his Wit in refining about them, and makes up ſuch Politicks and Schemes of Government, as might ſuit with thoſe Reports, and agree with his own Malice. His Work is all of a piece, and as it was made out in the former Volume, how ignorantly and diſingeniouſly he writ concerning King Henry the Eighth's Reign; ſo I ſhall add a further Diſcovery of the remaining parts of his Book, which will ſufficiently convince, even the moſt partial Readers, of the impudence of that Author; who ſeems to have had no other deſign in writing, but to impoſe on the credulity and weakneſs of thoſe, who he knew were inclined to believe every thing that might caſt blemiſhes on a Work, againſt which they were ſo ſtrongly prejudiced, as the Reformation of this Church: ſince a Field which they ſo often reaped, and with whoſe Spoils their Court was ſo enriched, was no more at their Devotion. So they are ever ſince concerned in Intereſt to uſe all the ways they can think on, to diſgrace a Change that was ſo fatal to them. But as the Reformation of this Church has hitherto ſtood, notwithſtanding all their Deſigns againſt it; ſo it is to be hoped, that the Hiſtory of it will be hereafter better underſtood, notwithſtanding all the Libels and Calumnies by which they have endeavoured to repreſent it, in ſuch black and odious Colours to the World.

Sanders ſays, 'King Edward was in the 9th Year of his Age when he 'came to the Crown. Page 176.

This is of no great conſequence, but it ſhews how little this Author conſidered what he writ, when in ſo publick a thing as the King's Age, he miſreckons a Year, for he was born the 12th of October 1537; ſo in January 1547, he was in the 10th Year of his Age.

2. He ſays, 'King Edward was not only declared King of England, 'and Ireland, but made Supream Head of the Church; and upon that 'runs Ibid.

'runs out, to ſhew how uncapable a Child was of that Power.

This is ſet down in ſuch terms, as if there had been ſome ſpecial Act made for his being Supream Head of the Church, diſtinct from his being proclaimed King, whereas there was no ſuch thing; for the Supremacy being annexed to the Crown, the one went with the other: and it being but a Civil Power, might be as well exerciſed by the King's Governors, before he came to be of Age, as the other Rights of the Crown were.

Pag. 177. 3. He ſays, 'The Earl of Hartford was made by himſelf Duke of 'Somerſet.

This was done by order of the whole Council, in purſuance of King Henry's Deſign, proved by thoſe Witneſſes that were beyond exception: and that King having by his Will charged his Executors to fulfil thoſe things which he intended to do, this was found to be one of them.

Pag. 178. 4. He ſays, 'The Duke of Somerſet made himſelf the only Gover-'nor of the King, and Protector; none daring to oppoſe it openly, 'but Wriotheſley, whom King Henry, when he was dying, had made 'Lord Chancellor.

The Protector was advanced to that Dignity, by the unanimous conſent of the whole Council; to which the Lord Chancellor conſented, and ſigned the Order about it, the Original whereof is yet extant; for though he argued againſt it before it was done, yet he joined with the reſt in doing it: Nor was he made Chancellor by King Henry at his Death, but two Years before.

Ibid. 5. He ſays, 'On the 27*th* of February, two days before the King 'was crowned, the Protector perſuaded the King to create many 'new Peers; who were all Hereticks, except Dudley Earl of War-'wick.

Our Author, by this ſhew of Exactneſs, would perſuade the Reader, that he had conſidered Dates, and the ſmalleſt particulars, with the care that became an Hiſtorian: But he little thought that any would come after him, and examine what he ſaid. By this Account the King muſt have been crowned the firſt of March, but it was done Feb. 20. and the Peers were created on the 16*th* of February, four days before. They were not all Hereticks, for he forgot that Wriotheſley was at the ſame time made Earl of Southampton, which he afterwards inſinuates was done upon another account. But all thoſe Creations, were in perſuance of King Henry's Deſigns, and in obedience to his latter Will.

Ibid. 6. He ſays, 'They forced Wriotheſley to reſign his Office, and turned 'both him, and the Earl of Arundel, out of the Council, becauſe they 'were Catholicks.

Wriotheſley was turned out upon no account of Religion, but for putting the Great Seal to a Commiſſion, that was againſt Law, (according to the Opinion which the Judges declared under their hands) without any Warrant from the Council; himſelf acknowledging the juſtice of the Sentence. The Earl of Arundel was not turned out of the the Council; on the contrary, in the Patent by which the Protector held his Office, that paſſed after the Chancellor was removed, he is named to be one of the Privy-Council.

7. He ſays, 'The Protector would needs force all the Clergy to ſub- Pag. 179.
'mit in every thing to the King's Orders; and ſets down the Form in 'which the King writ to Arch-biſhop Cranmer.

In this nothing was done, but what was begun by King Henry, and to which all the Clergy, even his beloved Bonner not excepted, had formerly ſubmitted. So this was no new thing ſet up by the Protector, it being only the renewing the Biſhops Patents in the new King's Name: And this was no part of the Reformation, for it was done only to awe the Popiſh Biſhops, but was ſoon after laid aſide. What he ſets down as a Letter of King Edward's to Cranmer, is the Preamble of the Patent he took out. So little did this Writer know the things that truly make to the advantage of the Cauſe, which he deſigned to aſſert.

8. He ſays, 'The New Protector, among the firſt things he did, re- Page 180.
'ſtrained all Preaching, and ſilenced all the Biſhops and Paſtors: ſo
'that none were licenſed to preach, but the Lutherans and Zuing-
'lians.

The firſt Injunctions ſet out in the King's Name, required all Biſhops to preach at leaſt four times a Year, in their Dioceſſes; and to keep Learned Chaplains who might be able to preach, and ſhould be often much employed in it. And thus Matters ſtood the firſt Year of this Reign: In the beginning of the ſecond Year, upon complaints made of the raſhneſs of ſome Preachers, a Proclamation was put out, that none ſhould preach without a Licenſe from the King, or the Arch-biſhops, or the Biſhop of the Dioceſs; except Incumbents in their own Pariſhes. Afterwards there was, for ſome little time, a total prohibition of Preaching, but that was to laſt for a ſhort while, till the Book of Common-Prayer, which was then a preparing, ſhould be finiſhed. This was equally made on both hands; for the Prohibition was univerſal, without exception: ſo falſly has our Author ſtated this Matter; which one would think he ignorantly drew from what Queen Mary did, applying it to this Reign; for ſhe, upon her coming to the Crown, did prohibit all Preaching, excepting only ſuch as were licenſed to it by Gardiner, under the Great Seal.

9. He ſays, 'Latimer was turned out of the Biſhoprick of Worceſter, Pag. 181.
'by King Henry, upon ſuſpicion of Hereſy.

Latimer did freely reſign his Biſhoprick, upon the paſſing of the Act of the ſix Articles, with which he could not comply with a good Conſcience.

10. He ſays, 'The Protector put Cox and Cheek about the King, Pag. 182.
'that they might corrupt his Mind with Heretical Doctrines.

Theſe were put about him three Years before, by King Henry's Order; as that young King himſelf informs us in his Journal.

Pag. 184. 11. He ſays, 'The Heads of the Colleges were turned out, and the 'Catholick Doctors vvere forbid to preach.

I do not find one Head of a College in either Univerſity was turned out; for though they generally loved the Old Superſtition, yet they loved their Places much better. And indeed the whole Clergy did ſo readily conform themſelves to every Change that was made, that it was not eaſy to find Colours for turning out Bonner and Gardiner. All Preachers had the liberty of their own Pulpits, except for a very little while.

Ibid. 12. He ſays, 'They decried the School-Divinity, and the Works of 'Lombard, Aquinas, and Scotus, and ſo threw all Learning out of the 'Schools.

They could not do that more, than Sir Thomas More, Eraſmus, and other Popiſh Writers had done before them; who had expreſſed their ſcorn of that way of treating Divine Matters, ſo copiouſly, that it was no wonder it was much deſpiſed. Thoſe Writers had, by a ſet of dark and barbarous Maxims and Terms, ſo intangled all the Articles of Faith, and impoſed on the World, by an appearance of ſaying ſomewhat, when really they ſaid nothing: and pretending to explain Religion, they had ſo expoſed it, that their way of Divinity was become equally nauſeous and ridiculous.

Pag. 186. 13. He ſays, 'Bucer and Peter Martyr, being brought out of Ger-'many, did corrupt the Univerſities; and entertained the Youth with 'Diſcourſes of Predeſtination, Reprobation, and a fatal neceſſity of 'Things.

This was ſo far from being much taught, that on the contrary, in one of the Articles of Religion, the curious Enquiries into thoſe abſtruſe Points, was by Publick Authority forbid. Bucer and Martyr read for moſt part in the Chairs, upon the Maſs, and the other Corruptions of the Popiſh Worſhip. They alſo declared St. Auſtin's Doctrine about Grace, but I do not find they ever medled with Reprobation.

Pag. 190. 14. After a long Invective, which is to paſs as a piece of his Wit and Poetry, he ſays, 'Bucer was inclined to become a Jew, and was 'deſcended from Jewiſh Parents; and that the Lord Paget had heard him 'ſay, That the Corporal Preſence was ſo clear in the Scripture, that 'no Man could deny it, who believed the Goſpel; but for his part, he 'did not believe all that was ſaid in the New Teſtament concerning 'our Saviour.

This is as ſuitable to our Author's Honeſty as can be: Bucer was never accuſed of this by any of his Enemies, as long as he lived. No Man in that Age writ with a greater ſenſe of the Kingdom of Chriſt than he did. And for the Story of the Lord Paget, we have nothing for it but the Author's word; and Poets muſt make Circumſtances, as well as more ſignal Contrivances, to ſet off their Fables. But there was no occaſion for Bucer's ſaying this, ſince he never declared againſt the Coporeal Preſence; but was for taking up that Controverſy in ſome general general Expreſſions. So it was not ſuitable to his Opinion in that Matter, for him to talk ſo looſely of the Scriptures. And is it credible that a Story of this nature, ſhould not have been publiſhed in Queen Mary's Time, and been made uſe of, when he was condemned for an Heretick, and his Body raiſed and burnt. But our Author, perhaps, did not think of that.

15. He ſays, 'P. Martyr was a while in ſuſpence concerning the 'Euchariſt, and ſtayed till he ſhould ſee what the Parliament ſhould 'appoint in that Matter. Pag. 191.

P. Martyr argued and read in the Chair againſt the Corporal Preſence, four Years before the Parliament medled with it: For the ſecond Common-Prayer Book, which contained the firſt publick Declaration that the Parliament made in this Matter, was enacted in the fifth Year of King Edward; and Peter Martyr, from his firſt coming to England, had appeared againſt it.

16. He ſaid, 'The firſt Parliament under King Edward, appointed a 'new Form to be uſed in ordaining Prieſts and Biſhops; who till that 'time had been Ordained according to the Old Rites, ſave only, that 'they did not ſwear Obedience to the Pope. Pag. 193.

This is a further Evidence of our Author's care in ſearching the printed Statutes; ſince what was done in the Fifth Year of this Reign, he repreſents as done in the Firſt. His Deſign in this was clear; he had a mind to poſſeſs all his own Party with an Opinion, that the Orders given in this Church were of no force, and therefore he thought it a decent piece of his Poem, to ſet down this Change as done ſo early: ſince if he had mentioned it in its proper place, he knew not how to deny the validity of the Orders that were given the firſt four Years of this Reign, which continued to be conferred according to the old Forms.

17. He ſaid, 'The Parliament did alſo at the ſame time, confirm a 'new Book of Common-Prayer, and of the Adminiſtration of the Sa- 'craments. Ibid.

This is of a piece with the former; for the Act confirming the Common-Prayer Book, which is alſo among the Printed Statutes, paſſed not in this Seſſion of Parliament, but in a ſecond Seſſion, a Year after this. Theſe are Indications ſufficient to ſhew what an Hiſtorian Sanders was, that did not ſo much as read the Publick Acts of the Time concerning which he writ.

18. He ſays, 'They ordered all Images to be removed, and ſent 'ſome lewd Men over England for that effect; who either brake or 'burnt the Images of our Saviour, the Bleſſed Virgin, and the Saints; 'therein declaring againſt whom they made War; and they ordered 'the King's Arms, three Leopards, and three Lillies, with the Suppor- 'ters, a Dog and a Serpent, to be ſet in the place where the Croſs of 'Chriſt ſtood: thereby owing that they were no longer to worſhip 'Jeſus Chriſt, whoſe Images they broke, but the King, whoſe Arms 'they ſet up in the room of thoſe Images. Ibid.

In this Period there is an equal mixture of Falſhood and Malice. 1. The Parliament did not order the removal of Images; it was done by the King's Viſitors, before the Parliament ſat. 2. The total removal of Images was not done the firſt Year, only thoſe Images that were abuſed to Superſtition, were taken down, and a Year after the total removal followed. 3. They took care that this ſhould be done regularly, not by the Viſitors, who only carried the King's Injunctions about it, but by the Curats themſelves. 4. They did not order the King's Arms to be put in the place where the Croſs had ſtood. It grew indeed to be a cuſtom to ſet them up in all Churches, thereby expreſſing, that they acknowledged the King's Authority reached even to their Churches; but there was no Order made about it. 5. I leave him to the correction of the Heraulds, for ſaying, the King's Arms are Three Leopards, when every Body knows they are three Lions, and a Lion, not a Dog, is one Supporter, and the other is a Dragon, not a Serpent. 6. By their ſetting up the King's Arms, and not his Picture, it is plain they had no thought of worſhipping their King, but did only acknowledg his Authority. 7. It was no leſs clear, that they had no deſign againſt the Worſhip due to Jeſus Chriſt, nor that inferior reſpect due to the Bleſſed Virgin and Saints; but intended only to wean the People from that, which at beſt was but Pageantry: but as it was practiſed, was manifeſt Idolatry. And the painting on the Walls of the Churches the Ten Commandments, the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, with many other paſſages of Scripture that were of moſt general uſe, ſhewed, they intended only to cleanſe their Churches from thoſe mixtures of Heatheniſm, that had been brought into the Chriſtian Religion.

Pag. 193. 19. He ſays, 'They took away the Sacrifice of the Body and Blood 'of Chriſt, that they might thereby give ſome colour to the convert-'ing of the Sacred Veſſels to the King's uſe.

They took away no part of the Inſtitution of Chriſt, for they ſet it down in the Act paſt about it; and recited all the words of the firſt Inſtitution of the Sacrament; they only condemned private Maſſes, as contrary to Chriſt's Inſtitution. They did not convert the Holy Veſſels to the King's uſe, nor were they taken out of the Churches till five Years after this; that the Neceſſities of the Government, either real or pretended, were alleged to excuſe the taking away the ſuperfluous Plate that was in Churches: But this was not done by Act of Parliament, but by Commiſſioners empowred by the King, who were ordered to leave in every Church, ſuch Veſſels as were neceſſary for the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments.

Ibid. 20. He ſays, 'The Parliament ordered the Prayers to be in the 'Vulgar Tongue'; and upon that he infers, that the Iriſh, the Welch, 'and the Corniſh-men, were now in a much worſe condition than be-'fore; ſince they underſtood no Engliſh, ſo that the Worſhip was to 'them in a Tongue more unknown than it had formerly been.

The Parliament made no ſuch Order at this Time: the Book of Common-Prayer was ſet out firſt by the King's Authority, and ratified by the ſubſequent Seſſion of Parliament. There was alſo a Deſign, which which though it was then accompliſhed, yet it was done afterwards, of tranſlating the Liturgy into theſe Tongues: but ſtill the Engliſh was much more underſtood by all ſorts of Men among them, than the Latin had been.

21. He ſays, 'The Office of the Communion, appointed by this 'Parliament, differed very little from the Maſs, ſave that it was in 'Engliſh. Pag. 194.

The Error of the Parliaments appointing the new Offices, runs through all he ſays on this Subject. But in the new Office of the Communion, the Idolatry of worſhipping, carrying about, or expoſing the Sacrament, was laid aſide. The trade of particular Maſſes for private Occaſions, the Prayers to the Saints, the denying the People the Chalice, with a great many of the Rites and Geſticulations formerly uſed, were all laid aſide; ſo that there were great Changes made. Every thing was not done at once, but they began with the Abuſes that did moſt require a Reformation, and went on afterwards to the changing of leſſer things.

22. He ſays, 'Sir Ralph Sadler took the Wife of one Matthew Bar- Ibid. 'low; ſo upon pretence of his being dead, his Wife married Sadler: 'but her firſt Huſband coming home, he ſought to have his Wife again. 'It was brought into the Parliament in King Henry's Time, and now it 'was enacted, that ſhe ſhould be Sadler's Wife; he being the richer 'and greater Man. So againſt the Laws of the Goſpel, a Wife while 'her Huſband was yet alive, was adjudged to a ſecond Huſband.

This is, as far as I can learn, a Forgery from the beginning to the end: and it ſeems Sadler, that was a Privy Counſellor in Queen Elizabeth's Time, did ſomewhat that ſo provoked Sanders, that he reſolved to be revenged of him and his Family, by caſting ſuch an aſperſion on him. I find no Foot-ſteps of any ſuch Story; ſure I am, there is nothing concerning it in the Records of this Parliament. And for the Buſineſs of the Diſſolution of Marriages for Adultery, Abſence, or any other Cauſe, there was ſo great, and ſo ſtrict an enquiry made into it, after the Parliament was ended, in the Caſe of the Marqueſs of Northampton, that it is clear it was the firſt of that ſort that was examined; and might perhaps, after it was confirmed in Parliament, in the 5*th* Year of this Reign, have been made a Precedent for other Caſes; but this of Sadler, in the firſt Parliament, is a Contrivance of our Authors. It is not improbable, that when afterwards it was judged, that the Marriage-Bond was diſſolved by Adultery, they might likewiſe declare it diſſolved, upon voluntary and long abſence, ſince St. Paul had ſaid, That a Brother or a Siſter were not under Bondage in ſuch Caſes.

23. He ſays, 'Gardiner, Bonner, Tonſtal, Heath, and Day, were Pag. 196. 'much grieved at the Changes that were made: yet they complied in 'many things, till being required to deliver ſome Blaſphemous Do- 'ctrines in their Sermons, they refuſing to give Obedience in that, 'were deprived; but were afterwards condemned to perpetual Impri- 'ſonment under Queen Elizabeth; all which were the Effects of God's 'Diſpleaſure on them, for complying with K. Henry in his Schiſm.

I

I ſhall grow tedious, if I inſiſt on all the Falſities that do occur in this Period. Firſt, Only Gardiner and Bonner were queſtioned and deprived for their Sermons: Tonſtall was deprived for Miſpriſion of Treaſon; Heath and Day were judged by Lay-Delegates; ſo it is like, their Offences were alſo againſt the State. 2. There was nothing enjoined Bonner or Gardiner to preach, upon which they were cenſured, but that the King's Authority was the ſame when he was under Age, that it was afterwards; which is a Point that belongs only to the Laws and Conſtitutions of this Government: and ſo there was juſt reaſon to impute their Silence in that particular, when they were commanded to touch upon it in their Sermons, to an ill Deſign againſt the State. 3. Three of theſe Biſhops did concur in all the Changes that were made the firſt four Years of this King's Reign, and both preached and wrote for them; and even Bonner and Gardiner did not only give Obedience to every Law or Injunction that came out, but recommended them much in their Sermons. 4. Theſe did not ſuffer perpetual Impriſonment under Queen Elizabeth; Gardiner and Day died before ſhe reigned, and ſo were not impriſoned by her. Heath was never put in Priſon by her, but lived at his own Country Houſe; and Tonſtal lived at Lambeth in as much eaſe, and was treated with as much reſpect, as if it had been his own Houſe: ſo that Bonner was the only Man that was kept in Priſon; but that was believed to be done in kindneſs to him, to preſerve him from the Affronts which otherwiſe he might have met with, from the Friends of thoſe he had butchered.

Pag. 197. 24. He ſays, 'The Lady Mary never departed from her Mothers 'Faith and Conſtancy.

It appears, by many of her Letters, that ſhe complyed with every thing that had been done by her Father; ſo it ſeems ſhe was diſpenſed with from Rome, to diſſemble in his time; for otherwiſe her conſtancy had very likely been fatal to her, but ſhe preſumed on the mildneſs of her Brother's Government, to be more refractory afterwards.

Pag. 198. 25. He ſays, 'The King was ſorry, when he underſtood how hardly 'his Siſter had been uſed by the Council.

It was ſo far otherwiſe, that when the Council being much preſſed by the Emperor to connive at her having Maſs, were reſolved to give way to it; the King himſelf was ſo averſe to it, thinking it a ſin in him to conſent to the practice of Idolatry, that the Council employed the Biſhops to work on him, and they could hardly induce him to tolerate it.

Pag. 200. 26. He ſays, 'The Viſitors carried with them over England, Bibles 'of a moſt corrupt Tranſlation, which they ordered to be ſet up in all 'the Churches of England.

In King Henry's Time, it had been ordered, that there ſhould be a Bible in every Church; ſo this was not done by the Viſitors in this Reign, as may appear by the Injunctions that were given them, which have been often printed.

27. He

27. He ſays, 'The Viſitors did every-where enquire, Whether all 'the Images were broken down; and if the Altars were taken away, 'and Communion Tables were put in their rooms; and if all the old 'Offices were deſtroyed. Ibid.

Here he confounds in one Period, what was done in ſeveral Years. In the firſt Year, the Images that had been abuſed by Pilgrimages, were ordered to be removed. In the ſecond Year, all Images were taken down without exception. In the third Year, the old Books of the former Offices were ordered to be deſtroyed. And in the fourth Year, the Altars were turned to Communion-Tables; ſo ignorantly did this Author write of our Affairs.

28. He ſays, 'The Viſitors did every where encourage the Prieſts to 'Marry, and looked on ſuch as did no Marry, as inclined to Popery. Pag. 201.

The Marriage of the Clergy was not ſo much as permitted till near the beginning of the third Year of this Reign; and then it was declared, that an unmarried State was more honourable and decent; ſo that it was recommended, and the other was only tolerated; and ſo far were they from ſuſpecting Men to be firm to the Reformation that were married, that Ridley and Latimer, the moſt eſteemed next to Cranmer, were never married: nor was any ever vexed for his not being married, as he falſly inſinuates.

28. He ſays, 'The Protector bore great hatred to Gardiner and 'Tonſtal, both becauſe they oppoſed the Hereticks, and becauſe they 'had been made equals to him, if not preferred before him by King 'Henry's Will, in the Government during the King's being under Age. Pag. 202.

This is another of our Author's Figures. Gardiner was not mentioned in King Henry's Will, neither as an Executor, nor ſo much as a Counſellor; and by it none were preferred to another, all being made equal. And for Tonſtal, he continued ſtill in a firm friendſhip with the Protector, and was ſo well ſatisfied with the firſt Changes that were made, that he was complained of as well as Cranmer, by Gardiner, in the Letters which he writ to the Protector.

29. He ſays, 'The Protector made a Speech about Religion before 'the King; and therefore he put, firſt Gardiner, then Tonſtall, and at 'another time, the Biſhops of London, Chicheſter, and Worceſter, in 'Priſon. Ibid.

Gardiner and Bonner were indeed impriſoned ſome time, during the Protector's Government; the latter was alſo deprived while he was Protector. But Tonſtal was not put in Priſon till two Years after, and it was at the time of the Duke of Somerſet's total fall, and by the ſame Perſons means that wrought his Ruin: From which it appears, he was always a firm Friend to the Duke of Somerſet. The Biſhops of Worceſter and Chicheſter were alſo brought in trouble, long after the Government was taken out of the Protector's Hands.

30. He ſays, 'They were all depoſed from their Degree. Ibid.

They were not depoſed from their Degree, but deprived of their Biſhopricks;

Biſhopricks; for they having accepted Commiſſions, by which they held their Sees, only during the King's Pleaſure, they might well be deprived by a Sentence of the Delegates. But had they been to be depoſed, and thruſt from their Order, it muſt have been done by a Synod of Biſhops. They were deprived, as many Biſhops were under the Chriſtian Emperors, by ſelected Synods that ſat in the Court, and judged of all Complaints that were brought before the Emperors.

Pag. 204. 31. 'He reckons up the Judgments of God upon the Hereticks; and 'ſays, the Protector made kill his Brother, and Dudley took him away.

This is a way of writing familiar enough to our Author, to repreſent things in ſuch a manner, as might fill the Reader with horror; as if theſe Perſons had been ſecretly murdered, whereas the one was condemned in Parliament, the other by a Judgment of his Peers.

Ibid. 32. He ſays, 'King Edward died not without ſuſpition of being poi-'ſoned by Dudley, and the Duke of Suffolk, who aſpired to the Crown.

It was never ſuſpected that the Duke of Suffolk had any hand in poiſoning the King, nor could I ever ſee any reaſon to conclude that he was poiſoned: but neither of theſe Dukes aſpired to the Crown; the one reſigned any Pretenſion he could ever have, to his Daughter; and the other intended only that his fourth Son ſhould reign.

Pag. 205. 34. He ſaid, 'The Protector's Lady claimed the precedence of the 'Queen Dowager; and upon the denial of it, conſpired the ruin of 'the Admiral.

All this is a contrivance of the Enemies of that Family; for as it had been abſurd for the Dutcheſs of Somerſet to have diſputed Precedence with the Queen Dowager; ſo in that whole Matter it is plain the Admiral began with his Brother, and conſpired his ruin: and the Protector was often reconciled to him, and forgave him many Faults, till it appeared that his Ambition was incurable.

Ibid. 34. He ſays, 'There being no ground of any Accuſation againſt 'him, the Dutcheſs of Somerſet got Latimer to accuſe him of Treaſon 'in a Sermon.

The Articles upon which he was condemned, ſhew what Matter there was againſt him. Latimer did never accuſe him of Treaſon, but being a Man of great plainneſs of Speech, he reflected on him as Ambitious, and not ſincere in the Profeſſion of Religion: And when it was ſuſpected that the Dutcheſs of Somerſet had ſet him on to make theſe Reflections, he did vindicate her in a moſt ſolemn manner. Nor is there any reaſon to think, that how indiſcreet ſoever he might be in preaching in ſuch a ſort, that he did it to flatter or to aſpire by ſuch means, for he refuſed to accept of any Preferment, though the Houſe of Commons interpoſed to have him repoſſeſſed of the See of Worceſter.

Ibid. 35. He ſays, 'At the ſame time that he was Beheaded, the Queen 'Dowager died.

She died in Septemb. 1548, and he was beheaded in March following: and one of the Articles againſt him was, That after her Death, he intended tended to have married the King's Siſter Elizabeth; and it was ſuſpected, that to make for that, he had poiſoned her.

36. He ſays, 'The Men of Devonſhire and Cornwal did, with one 'conſent, take up Arms for the Faith. Pag. 206.

In one thing he ſays true, that this Rebellion was ſet on by the Prieſts, and made on the account of Religion; but the brutal Cruelty of thoſe Rebels, ſhewed it was not for the Faith, but in compliance to their Prieſts and Leaders, that they roſe.

37. He ſays, 'The Clergy finding that their being Married was gene- Pag. 209.
'rally an ingrateful thing, procured an Act of Parliament, declaring that 'there was no humane Law againſt their Marriages; and this was all 'they were concerned in, for they cared little for the Law of God.

This is a genuine piece of our Author's Wit. If the Parliament meddles in declaring what is the Law of God, he accuſes them for medling in things without their Sphere: And if they only declare what is the Law of the Land, he ſays, they have no regard to the Law of God: So he is reſolved, do what they will, they ſhall not eſcape his Cenſure. But in this he ſhews his Ignorance, as well as his Malice. The lawfulneſs of the Marriage of the Clergy was enquired into with ſuch exactneſs, that ſcarce any thing can be added ſince, to what was then written on that Argument. It was made out, that there was no Law of God againſt it: It was alſo proved, that there was no general Law made by the Primitive Church about it; but that it was a part of the Yoke that the Popes laid on the Clergy, to engage them more zealouſly in their Concerns. It was at firſt carried in the Convocation, that they might lawfully Marry; then an Act of Parliament paſſed permitting it; of all which our Author takes no notice. Then three Years after, ſome that were ill affected to them, taking advantage from the words of the Statute, as if the Permiſſion had only been ſuch a conniving at it, as had been formerly to the Stews, a ſecond Act paſſed confirming thoſe Marriages, and the Iſſue by them.

38. He ſays, 'The Catholick Doctors in the Univerſities, grew more Pag. 210.
'couragious in the Defence of the Faith; and ſo deſired a publick Di-'ſpute concerning the Corporal Preſence.

They were ſo couragious, that as ſoon as any Change was made, they all complied moſt obſequiouſly to it; as will appear both by Oglethorp and Smith's Submiſſions. But while the Changes were under conſultation, they ſeeing it could bring them into no trouble, were very ſtout; but as ſoon as they were to loſe or ſuffer any thing for their Conſciences, then they grew as tractable as could be. In ſuch a Zeal, let him glory as much as he will.

39. He ſays, 'Smith did often challenge Peter Martyr to a publick Ibid.
'Diſpute at Oxford; but he declined it, till Dr. Cox, a Man of a lewd 'Life, was ſent to moderate in the Diſpute; and till Dr. Smith was 'baniſhed the Univerſity.

Smith did once challenge Peter Martyr to a Diſpute, to which he preſently conſented: upon two Conditions; the one was, that a Licenſe ſhould firſt be obtained of the King and Council, and Delegates be appointed by them to make a juſt Report of the Diſpute: the other was, That it ſhould be managed in the Terms of Scripture, and not in the School Terms: They were both more proper for Matters of Divinity, and more eaſily underſtood by all People. Upon this, the Council ſent down Delegates: and then Smith, who intended only to raiſe a tumult in the Schools, withdrew himſelf, and fled beyond Sea; but was never baniſhed. His calling Dr. Cox a Man of a lewd Life, is one of the Flowers he ſtuck in to adorn the reſt. All the Writers of that Age make honourable mention of him; He was firſt ſet about this King by his Father, and continued with him in all the turns of Affairs, and did ſo faithfully diſcharge that high Truſt, that it appears he muſt have been a very extraordinary Man. This was ſo well known to the whole Nation, that in the beginning of Queen Mary's Reign, he met with more than ordinary Favour. This, conſidering the hatred which the Popiſh Party bore him, is a clear evidence of his great Worth; and that they were afraid to be ſevere to a Man ſo univerſally eſteemed.

Ibid. 40. He ſays, 'Cox ſaw he was ſo much preſſed by the Doctors that 'diſputed with him, and the Hearers did ſo hiſs him down, that he 'broke off the Diſpute, giving Peter Martyr a high commendation for 'his Learning, and exhorting the reſt to live peaceably. Peter Martyr 'afterwards printed the Diſputation falſly; but by the Judgment of 'the Univerſity he was doubly baffled; both that he refuſed to diſpute 'with Smith, and that he did acquit himſelf ſo ill with thoſe Doctors 'that diſputed with him.

It is probable the Hearers might have been ſet on to hiſs, but the printed Diſputation will decide this Matter, and ſhew who argued both more nervouſly, and more ingenuouſly. We have no reaſon to believe it was falſly printed, unleſs we will take it on this Author's word: for I do not find the Popiſh Doctors did, either at this Time, or afterwards in Queen Mary's Reign, when the Preſſes were all in their hands, publiſh any thing to the contrary of what P. Martyr printed; ſo that he neither refuſed to diſpute with Smith, nor was he baffled by thoſe that undertook it. Smith fled, and the reſt were clearly worſted. And for the Univerſity, there was no Judgment paſſed by them, unleſs he means the Rudeneſs and Clamours of ſome that might be ſet on to it.

Pag. 211. 41. He ſays, 'The Diſpute with Bucer at Cambridg, had the ſame 'effect.

It had ſo indeed, the printed Relation ſhews the weakneſs and diſingenuity of the Popiſh Diſputants, and that was never contradicted.

Ibid. 42. 'He gives account of many other Diſputes, and of Gardiner's 'Book, under the name of Marcus Conſtantius; which he ſays was a 'full confutation of all the Books then written for the contrary Opi-'nion. He alſo mentions the Sermons and Impriſonment of Criſpine, 'Moreman, Cole, Seaton, and Watſon.

Theſe other Diſputes could be no more than private Conferences; but I can give no account of theſe, having met with them in none of the the Writters of that Time. As for Gardiner's Book, ſuch as will compare it with Cranmer's Book, which it pretends to anſwer, will ſoon ſee in it the difference between plain ſimple Reaſoning on the one ſide, and ſophiſtical Cavilling on the other. But for the Sufferings of that Party, there is no great reaſon to boaſt of them; for they univerſally complied with every thing that was commanded: even the Lady Mary's Chaplains did it, in the Churches where they were benefied. Nor do I find any one Man turned out of his Cure for refuſing to Conform; but it was found, ſome of theſe did privately ſay Maſs, either in the Lady Mary's Chappel, or in private Houſes; and did ſecretly act againſt what they openly profeſſed: and it was no wonder if ſuch Diſſemblers were more ſeverely handled. But there was no Blood ſhed in the Quarrel; ſo that if the Popiſh Party made ſuch reſiſtance, as our Author pretends they did, it very much commends the gentleneſs of the Government at that Time, ſince they were ſo mercifully handled. It was far otherwiſe in Queen Mary's Time.

43. 'He runs out in a Diſcourſe of the Sufferings of his Party, of 'their Zeal and Conſtancy: and particularly mentions Story, who, he 'ſays, ſuffered Martyrdom under Queen Elizabeth. He had ſaid in 'the Parliament, Wo to thee, O Land, whoſe King is a Child; and this 'drew ſo much hatred on him, that he was forced to fly out of Eng-'land. Pag. 212.

What the Zeal and Conſtancy of the Party was, may be gathered from what has been already ſaid. This Story did ſay theſe words in the Houſe of Commons, and was, by Order of the Houſe, ſent to the Tower: for though it was a Text of Scripture that he cited, yet the Application carried with it ſo high a reflection on the Government, that it well deſerved ſuch a cenſure: but upon his Submiſſion, the Houſe of Commons ſent an Addreſs to the Protector, that he and the Council would forgive him, which was done, aud he was again admitted to the Houſe: ſo that he was not forced on this Account to fly out of England. And for his Martyrdom under Queen Elizabeth, the Record of his Trial ſhews the ground of that Sentence: He had endeavoured all he could, to ſet on many in Queen Mary's Time to adviſe the cutting off Queen Elizabeth: His ordinary Phraſe was, It was a fooliſh thing to cut off the Branches of Hereſy, and not to pluck it up by the Root. He knowing how faulty he had been, fled over to Flanders in the beginning of her Reign: and when the Duke of Alva was Governor there, he preſſed him much to invade England; and gave him a Map of ſome of the Roads and Harbours, with a Scheme of the way of conquering the Nation. He had alſo conſulted with Magicians concerning the Queen's Life; and uſed always to curſe the Queen when he ſaid Grace after Meat. Theſe things being known in England, ſome got him to go a-board a Ship in Flanders, on another pretence, and preſently ſet ſail for England; where yet the Government was ſo gentle, that two Years paſt before he was brought to his Tryal: and then the Defence he made, was, That he was not accountable for what he had done in Flanders, it not being in the Queen's Dominsons; and that he was not her Subject, having ſworn Allegiance to the King of Spain. But this being contrary to his natural Allegiance, which he could never ſhake off, he was found guilty of Treaſon, and was there executed. Theſe are our Author's Martyrs, and are of a piece with his Faith.

Pag. 216. 44. 'In the room of the Biſhops that were turned out, he ſays, 'there were put ſome Apoſtate and Luſtful (that is, as he explains it, 'married) Monks, Scory, Bird, Holgate, Barlow, Harley, Coverdale, 'and Ridley; on whom he beſtows many ſuch Epithetes, as may be ex-'pected from him.

This is ſuch a piece of Hiſtory, as one can hardly meet with any thing like it. 1. Bird was made Biſhop of Cheſter by King Henry, and was the firſt that ſat in that See, it being of that King's Foundation. 2. Holgate was put in the See of York by King Henry, when it was void by Lee's Death. 3. Barlow was alſo put in Bath and Wells, by the ſame King, it being likewiſe void by the Death of Knight. 4. Coverdale was put in the See of Exeter, upon Veyſey's free Reſignation, he being then extream old. 5. Harley was alſo put in Hereford, upon the former Biſhop's Death. 6. Ridley and Harley were never married, nor Coverdale, for ought I can find; ſo exact is our Author in delivering the Hiſtory of that Time.

Ibid. 45. He ſays, 'Poinet, that was made Biſhop of Wincheſter in Gar-'diner's Room, beſides one Wife to whom he was married, took a 'Butchers Wife from him; but the Butcher ſued for his Wife, and reco-'vered her out of his hands: and to make this paſs the better, he adds 'a Jeſt of Gardiner's about it, that he had ſaid, Why might not he hope 'to be reſtored to his Biſhoprick, as well as the Butcher was to his 'Wife?

The falſeneſs of this Story, is clearly evinced, by the Anſwer that Dr. Martin ſet out in the beginning of Queen Mary's Reign, to a Book that Poinet had writ in the defence of the married Clergy. Martin's Anſwer is writ with ſo much ſpite, and ſo many indecent Reflections, that though it is not reaſonable to believe all he ſays, yet it is almoſt a certain Argument, that this Story concerning Poinet is a Forgery; ſince if it was a thing ſo publick, as our Author makes it, Martin muſt have heard of it, eſpecially living in Gardiner's Houſe: and it is not to be imagined, that if he did know it, he would have concealed it: So this, and the Jeſt that hangs upon it, muſt paſs as one of the flouriſhes of our Author's Pen.

Pag. 217. 46. He ſays, 'Hooper, that uſed formerly to rail at the Luxury of 'the Catholick Biſhops, being made a Superintendent himſelf, for ſo 'the Zuinglians called their Biſhops, enjoyed at once two Biſhopricks, 'Worceſter and Gloceſter.

The Zuinglians had no Superintendents, for ought I can find; nor was Hooper ever called Superintendent, but Biſhop. He was made Biſhop of Gloceſter, which had been before King Henry the Eighth's Time, a part of the Biſhoprick of Worceſter. And now theſe Sees came to be united; ſo that Hooper had not two Biſhopricks, but one that had been for ſome Years divided into two: He only enjoyed the Revenue of Gloceſter, for Worceſter was entirely ſuppreſſed.

47. He

47. He ſays, 'On the 9th of July, the Mony was cried down one 'fourth part; and forty days after another fourth part: ſo that the 'whole Nation was thereby robbed of the half of their Stock. Pag. 219.

This King's Counſellors found the Coin embaſed; and they were either to let it continue in that State, to the great prejudice of the ſtate of the Nation, or to reduce it to a juſt Standard: ſo our Author condemns them for correcting what they found amiſs. But no wonder, he that quarrels with them ſo much for reforming of Religion, ſhould be likewiſe offended with them for reforming the Coin.

48. He ſays, 'The Duke of Somerſet was condemned, becauſe he 'had come into the Duke of Northumberland's Chamber, with intention 'to have killed him, and was thereupon beheaded. Pag. 222.

This was indeed ſaid to be the cauſe of his Death; but it is not mentioned in the Record, in which it is only ſaid, that he intended to have ſeized on the Duke of Northumberland, without adding, that he deſigned to have killed him.

49. He ſays, 'The two younger Siſters of Lady Jane Gray, were 'married to the eldeſt Sons of the Earls of Pembrook and Hungting- 'ton. Pag. 223.

This Error is of no great conſequence, but it ſhews how much our Author was a ſtranger, even to the moſt publick Actions: for the youngeſt Siſter to the Lady Jane, was married to one Keys that was Groom-Porter. The Earl of Huntington's Son married the Duke of Northumberland's Daughter.

50. He ſays, 'Soon after the Marriages, the King began to ſicken, 'and to fall in decay. Ibid.

The King had been ill four months before theſe Marriages were made: and it is probable, his ſickneſs made them be the more haſtned.

51. He ſays, 'Dudley was very deſirous to have the Lady Mary in 'his power, not being much concerned about the Lady Elizabeth, for 'ſhe being deſcended of Ann Boleyn, he did not much conſider 'her. Ibid.

It was natural for Dudley to deſire rather to have the elder Siſter in his power, than the younger; who could not claim to the Crown, but after the other: but it appeared, by the ſubmiſſion of the whole Nation to Queen Elizabeth, though ſtill profeſſing Popery, that ſhe was every whit as much conſidered, as her Siſter had been formerly.

52. He ſays, 'Lady Mary having been ſent for by Dudley's Order, 'underſtood, when ſhe was not far from London, that the King was 'expiring; and that ſhe would be in great danger, if ſhe came in 'Court; upon which ſhe turned back. Pag. 224.

Queen Mary had not been ſent for by Dudley's Order, the Council had writ to her, that the King being ill, deſired her Company: The News ſent her from Court was, That the King was dead; ſo ſhe was was desired to stir no further: and upon that, retired to her House in the Country.

Ibid. 53. He says, 'Twenty days after that, she heard the King was dead; 'whereupon she made proclaim her self Queen.

The discovery of the former Error clears this; for she immediately gathered the People of Suffolk about her, and gave them her Royal Word, that they should enjoy their Religion, as it had been established in King Edward's Time: But though they were the first that proclaimed her Queen, and came about her to defend her Right, they were among the first that felt the Severities of her Reign.

Pag. 225. 54. He says, 'Mary Queen of Scots, was married to the Dolphin of 'France.

She was then but a little past ten Years old, and was not married to the Dolphin, till five Years after this.

Pag. 229. 55. He says, 'Queen Mary, as soon as she came to the Crown, with-'out staying for an Act of Parliament concerning it, laid aside the pro-'phane Title of being Head of the Church.

We may expect as true a History of this Reign, as we had of the former; when in the first Period of it, there is so notorious a Falsehood. She held two Parliaments before she laid aside that Title; for in the Writ of Summons for both, she was stiled Supream Head of the Church; and all the Reformed Bishops were turned out by virtue of Commissions which she issued out as Supream Head. There was also a Visitation made over England by her Authority; and none were suffered to preach, but upon Licenses obtained under her great Seal; so that she both retained the Title and Power of Supream Head, a Year after she came to the Crown.

Ibid. 56. He says, 'She discharged the Prisoners she found in the Tower; 'recalled the Sentence against Cardinal Pool, and discharged a Tax due 'to her by the Subjects.

The Queen did free the Prisoners of the Tower at her coming to the Crown, and discharged the Tax at her Coronation: but for recalling the Sentence against Cardinal Pool, that being an Act of Parliament, she could not recal it; nor was it done, till almost a Year and an half after her coming to the Crown.

Ibid. 57. He says, 'She took care of the Coin, that her Subjects might 'suffer no more by the embasing it; so that they all saw the difference 'between a Catholick and Heretical Prince.

I do not find any care was taken of the Coin all her Reign; and the bringing that to a just Standard, is universally ascribed to Queen Elizabeth. If there was a publick joy upon her coming to the Crown, it did not last long; and there was a far greater when she died. This Observation is much more proper to the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, who began and continued to Reign with so great and so uninterrupted a Felicity, that none but a Writer like our Author, would have made such a Remarque on the beginnings of this Reign.

58. He

58. He ſays, 'She overcame Wiat's Rebellion, rather by her own 'Faith, than by any Force ſhe had about her. Pag. 230.

This is to make the Reader think, ſhe defeated Wiat, as Gideon did the Amalekites; but Wiat brought up not above 3000 Men, and ſhe had thrice that number about her. It was a deſperate Attempt, and that which was rather the effect of a precipitated Deſign, than of prudent Counſel.

59. He ſays, 'She put her Siſter in the Tower, when it had appeared 'to the Senate (which in his ſtyle is the Parliament) that ſhe had been 'engaged in Wiat's Conſpiracy. Ibid.

This is ſaid, to cover her barbarous Cruelty towards her Siſter; the Matter never came before the Parliament, and there was no ground ever given to juſtify the Suſpicion. It is true, Wiat hoping to have ſaved his Life, by ſo foul a Calumny, accuſed her: but when he ſaw he muſt die, he vindicated her openly on the Scaffold. It is certain, if they could have found any Colours to have excuſed ſevere proceedings againſt her, both the Queen and the Clergy who governed her, were much enclined to have made uſe of them.

60. He ſays, 'The Queen was more ready to pardon Crimes againſt 'her ſelf, than Offences againſt Chriſt and Religion. Pag. 231.

The more ſhame for thoſe who governed her Conſcience, that made her ſo implacable to all whom ſhe eſteemed Hereticks; ſince the Chriſtian Religion came not into the World, as the Author of it ſays of himſelf, to deſtroy Mens Lives, but to ſave them: Yet ſhe was not ſo merciful as he would repreſent her, witneſs her Severities againſt her Siſter, and againſt Cranmer, even after he had ſigned the Recantation of his former Opinions.

61. He ſays, 'Though ſome of the Biſhops were guilty of Treaſon, 'yet ſhe would not have them to be tried by the Temporal Laws, and 'referred, even Cranmer himſelf, to the Spiritual Juriſdiction. Ibid.

Cranmer was tried for Treaſon, by virtue of a Commiſſion iſſued out by the Queen; and all the other Reformed Biſhops were turned out by Delegates, empowred for that end by the Queen's Commiſſions.

62. He ſays, 'Cranmer was condemned of Treaſon in the Parlia- 'ment. Ibid.

He was found Guilty of Treaſon by a Jury of Commiſſioners, and thereupon condemned by a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer; and not by the Parliament. It is true, the Parliament did afterwards confirm the Sentence.

63. He ſays, 'Before he was Condemned, he feigned himſelf a Ca- 'tholick, and ſigned his Retractation ſeventeen times with his own 'hand: But the Biſhops diſcovering his Hypocriſy, degraded him 'and delivered him to the Secular Arm, upon which he was burnt at 'Oxford. Ibid.

The

The Popiſh Party have but too great Advantages againſt Cranmer, in this laſt part of his Life; ſo it was needleſs for our Author to have mixed ſo much falſhood with this Account: but he muſt go on in his ordinary method, even though it is not neceſſary for any of the Ends he had ſet before himſelf. Cranmer ſtood out above two Years and an half, in all which time he expreſſed great conſtancy of mind, and a readineſs to die for that Faith, which he had before taught: nor would he fly beyond Sea, though he had many opportunities to do it, and had reaſon enough to apprehend he could not eſcape at home. Upon his conſtant adhering to his former Doctrines, he was Condemned, Degraded, and appointed to be burnt; and then the fears of Death wrought that effect on him, that he did recant, which he ſigned thrice: but the Queen being ſet on Revenge, would needs have him burnt after all that: ſo there was no diſcovery made of his Hypocriſy, nor was there a Sentence paſt upon it; but he, for all his Recantation, was led out to be burnt: and then he returned back to his former Doctrines, and expreſſed his Repentance for his Apoſtacy, with all the ſerioufneſs and horror that was poſſible.

Ibid. 64. He ſays, 'The Laws for burning Hereticks were again revived, 'and by them not only Cranmer, but ſome hundreds of the falſe Teachers 'were burnt.

A Man's Inclinations do generally appear in the Lyes he makes: ſo it ſeems our Author wiſhed it had been, as he relates it was; but ſo far it was from this number, that there was not above a quarter of an hundred of the Miniſters burnt, (there were ſome hundreds of others burnt) ſo ignorant was he of our Affairs.

Pag. 232. 65. He ſays, 'The Queen did at firſt command all the Strangers that 'were Hereticks, to leave the Kingdom; upon which above 30000, as 'was reckoned, went out of England.

The greateſt number of the Strangers, were the Germans, and of theſe not above 200 went away, as themſelves publiſhed it; but our Author was generous and free-hearted, ſo that he would make the Exiles to bear ſome proportion to the Miniſters that were burnt; and as he made ſome hundreds of the one, ſo 30000 was but a moderate number to be exiled, 200 would have ſounded pitifully in ſuch an Heroical Work.

Ibid. 66. He ſays, 'It was brought under debate, whether Peter Martyr 'ſhould be burnt; but becauſe he came into England upon the Publick 'Faith, he was let go; yet his Wives Body was raiſed out of the 'Church-yard, and caſt into a Dunghil; and Bucer and Fagius's Bo-'dies were burnt.

It could not be debated whether Peter Martyr ſhould be burnt; for the Laws of Burning were not made till a Year after he went out of England: and the raiſing his Wives Body, and the burning the other Bodies, was done almoſt four Years after this; though our Author relates it as done at the ſame time.

67. He

67. He ſays, 'The Queen at firſt could not repeal the Laws then in 'force for Hereſy; but ſhe ſuſpended them all, and exhorted her Sub- 'jects to return to the Catholick Rites, upon which the People did 'univerſally return to them. Ibid.

The Queen could neither repeal nor ſuſpend the Laws then in force; and ſhe did neither. When ſhe was in Suffolk, ſhe promiſed the Religion eſtabliſhed by Law ſhould not be changed: When ſhe came to London, ſhe declared ſhe would force no Conſciences; but ſoon after ſhe added a Limitation to this, Till the Parliament ſhould order it. After that, all People were encouraged to ſet up the Maſs every-where, and it did ſpread into moſt parts of the Kingdom: but this was done both againſt Law, and the Queen's Royal Word.

68. He ſays, 'All Pulpits were opened to Catholick Preachers, and 'the Hereticks were not ſuffered to preach. Ibid.

This he relates, as if it had been the effect of the Peoples Zeal; but it flowed from a Proclamation of the Queen's, that none ſhould preach unleſs he obtained a Licenſe under the Great Seal, which was as high an Act of Supremacy as ever her Father did.

69. He ſays, 'She made firſt of all Funeral Rites to be performed 'for her Brother, after the form of the Catholicks, though he had died 'in Hereſy: and intended to have had ſuch Rites from her Father, but 'being better inſtructed, ſhe found it could not be done, for him that 'had been the chief Author of the Schiſm, and of all the Evil that fol- 'lowed it. Ibid.

King Edward was buried according to the Rites of the Engliſh Liturgy; ſo that the Funeral Rites were not according to the old Forms. It is true, the Queen had in her own Chappel ſuch Rites for him. As for her Father, ſome of the Writers of that Time ſay, it was much preſſed, to have his Body at leaſt raiſed and carried out of the Conſecrated Ground, if not burnt: and in this ſhe is ſaid to have ſtood upon the Dignity of a Crowned Head, and the decency of a Daughters Duty to her Fathers Aſhes; ſo that ſhe would not conſent to ſo barbarous a thing.

70. 'He condemns thoſe, who having been defiled with Hereſy, and 'thereby under Cenſures, did, notwithſtanding that, adminiſter the 'Sacraments, and do the other Offices of Prieſthood, before they were 'reconciled to the See of Rome. This, he ſays, was ſuch a Sin, that 'it may be reckoned one of the Cauſes of that Queen's dying ſo ſoon, 'and he ſets down as a Caution for the future, that if we ſhould come 'to be again reconciled to that See, we might not relapſe into the like 'Error. Pag. 233.

This was indeed Cardinal Pool's Advice, that the whole Kingdom ought to have been put under an Interdict, and that all Holy Offices were to ceaſe, till they were reconciled to the See of Rome: but the whole Clergy, not only many, as he ſays, being involved in thoſe Cenſures, if they had ſtaied for officiating, till they had been reconciled to the See of Rome, perhaps it had not been done at all.

Ibid. 71. He ſays, 'The Queen, partly by her Authority, partly by the 'concurrence of the Parliament, got the ancient way of the Service to 'be again reſtored, the Hereticks not daring to oppoſe it much.

All that was done in the firſt Parliament, was the reſtoring things to the ſame ſtate they had been in when King Henry died; which was indeed the ſetting up that they called Schiſm by Law. It was no wonder thoſe he calls Hereticks could not oppoſe it much; when ſo many of their Biſhops had been turned out and impriſoned; others were violently thruſt out of the Houſe of Lords, and the Elections of the Members of Parliament had been ſo managed, that in many places Force was uſed, aud falſe Returns were made in other Places.

Pag. 234. 72. He ſays, 'Only one that was bolder than the reſt, threw a Dag-'ger at him who preached the firſt Catholick Sermon at St. Pauls: 'and another diſcharged a Piſtol at another, preaching in the ſame 'place.

This, one would think by his Relation, was done after the Parliament had ſet up the Maſs again; whereas it was ſoon after the Queen came to the Crown, long before the Parliament; and that of the Piſtol was ſome months after the Parliament. But if he had deſigned to deliver a true Hiſtory to the World, he ſhould have added, that upon the Tumult that was raiſed againſt the Preacher, he prayed Mr. Bradford and Mr. Rogers (two afterwards burnt for the Reformed Religion) to ſpeak to the People, and perſwade them to be quiet; upon which they both exhorted the People to behave themſelves more peaceably and reverently; and Bradford went into the Pulpit, that he might be the better heard; and ſo near was he to the Danger, that the Dagger pierced his Sleeve; yet theſe two were had in ſuch eſteem, that the Tumult was quieted; and they carried the Preacher ſafe home. One of them being to preach in the Afternoon, exhorted the People to be peaceable and quiet, and ſeverely condemned the Tumult that had been in the morning. But ſuch was the gratitude and juſtice of the Popiſh Party, that it was pretended, becauſe they had appeaſed the Tumult, that therefore they had alſo raiſed it: ſo they were upon that pretence put in Priſon, where they lay a Year and a half, till the Laws for burning were revived, and were then burnt for Hereſy.

Pag. 235. 73. He ſays, 'Commendone was ſent by Order from the Pope into 'England, who obtained a Writing from the Queen, wherein ſhe pro-'miſed Obedience to the See of Rome; upon which Pool was appoin-'ted Legat.

It is no wonder our Author underſtood not the Affairs of the Reformation aright, when he was ſo ill informed about the Tranſactions of his own Party. Commendone was not ſent by the Pope to England. The Legat at Bruſſels ſent him over from thence, without ſtaying for Orders from Rome.

Pag. 239. 74. He ſays, 'William Thomas, Clerk of the Council, had conſpired 'to kill the Queen; for which he juſtly ſuffered.

Of

Of this I find nothing on Record; ſo it muſt depend on our Author's Credit, which is not infallible.

75. He ſays, 'The Impoſture of Elizabeth Croſts, was ſet up by the 'Perſwaſion of many of the Hereticks: and when it was diſcovered, ſhe 'confeſſed ſhe had been ſet on to it by other, and by one Drake in 'particular; but they all fled. Ibid.

In the Account that was then publiſhed of that Impoſture, Drake only is accuſed for it: what he was, does not appear to me, for I have never found him mentioned but on this Occaſion; ſo there was no reaſon to transfer the private Guilt of this Conſpiracy on a whole Party, as our Author does; though upon his Credit, one of our Writers has alſo done it.

76. He ſays, 'Thoſe in whoſe hands the Church-Lands were, had 'great apprehenſions of their being forced to reſtore them, becauſe the 'Queen had reſtored all the Land that were in her hands, and had 'again converted the Collegiat Church of Weſtminſter into an Abbey; 'But to prevent the ill Effects that might have followed on this, the 'Cardinal did, in the Pope's Name, abſolve them from all Cenſures, 'for poſſeſſing thoſe Lands, and that was confirmed by Letters ſent over 'from the Pope. Pag. 243.

He obſerves the order of Time very exactly, when he ſets the Queen's reſtoring the Church-Lands, and founding the Abbey of Weſtminſter, as the occaſions of the Fears the Laity were in, of being forced to reſtore the reſt of the Church-Lands; and of the Cardinal's abſolving them from all Cenſures, for keeping them ſtill in their hands. The Order in which this was done, was thus; In Novemb. 1554. in the Act of Reconciliation with the See of Rome, there was a ſpecial Proviſo made for the Church-Lands, which the Cardinal confirmed in the Pope's Name. In the Year after that, the Queen gave up into the Cardinal's Hands, all the Church-Lands that belonged to the Crown; and two Years after, ſhe founded the Abbey of Weſtminſter; ſo little influence had theſe things on the other that were done before. But he was groſly miſtaken, when he ſaid the Pope approved All: for he, in plain terms, refuſed to ratify what the Cardinal had done; and ſoon after ſet out a ſevere Bull, Curſing and Condemning all that held any Church-Lands.

77. He ſays, 'All the Biſhops being ſenſible of their Schiſmatical 'way of entring into their Sees, did deſire and obtain a Confirmation 'from the Pope. Kitchin, Biſhop of Landaff, only excepted, who 'afterward relapſed into Hereſy under Queen Elizabeth; and ſays, it is 'likely the want of this Confirmation, made him be more eaſily over-'come. Pag. 244.

This our Author wrote, being a thing very probable; and ſeldom do his Authorities for what he aſſerts, riſe higher. It was alſo a pretty ſtrain of his Wit, to make the omitting of it, fall ſingly on the only Biſhop that conformed under Queen Elizabeth. But it is certain, there was no ſuch thing done at all; for if any had done it, Bonner was as likely as any other; ſince as none had been more faulty in King

Henry's Time; ſo none ſtudied to redeem that with more ſervile compliances than he did; yet there is nothing of this recorded in his Regiſter, which continues entire to this day.

Pag. 246. 78. He ſaid, 'The State of the Univerſities was reſtored to what it 'had been, and Oxford in particular; by Petrus a Soto's means, who 'was in the Opinion of all, much preferred to P. Martyr.

He that gathered the Antiquities of Oxford, though no partial Writer on this occaſion, repreſents the ſtate of that Univerſity very differently; that there were almoſt no Divines in it, and ſcarce any publick Lectures. But when Sanders writ his Poem, the Spaniſh Councils were ſo much depended on, by him and his Party, that it was fit to put that Complement on the Nation, concerning Petrus a Soto. Whether it was true or falſe, was a Circumſtance which he generouſly overlook'd, for moſt part.

Pag. 248. 79. He ſays, 'Queen Elizabeth had done many things in Queen Ma-'ry's Time, both againſt her Perſon and Government.

He knew this was ſo falſe, that there was never a Circumſtance, or a Preſumption brought againſt her; but the Information which Wiat gave, hoping thereby to ſave himſelf; and yet he denied that on the Scaffold. If there had been any colour to have juſtified the taking away her Life, both the Queen and her Counſellors were as much enclined to it, as our Author himſelf was.

Ibid. 80. He ſays, 'King Henry ſaid in Parliament, ſhe was not, and could 'not be his Daughter, for a ſecret Reaſon which he had revealed to the 'Arch-biſhop of Canterbury.

This was aptly enough ſaid by a Writer, that had emancipated himſelf from the Laws of Truth and Veracity, to appeal to ſuch a Story; yet to have made it paſs the better, he ſhould have named other Circumſtances; for ſuch a thing cannot be eaſily believed, ſince after Ann Boleyn's Death, the King continued to treat Elizabeth ſtill as his Daughter; ſo that when ſhe writ to his next Queen, ſhe ſubſcribed Daughter: ſhe was in all things educated with the Care and State that became a King's Child; and was, both by Act of Parliament, and by his Will, declared to be ſo. Now to think that ſuch a King would have done all this, after he had in Parliament declared that ſhe could not be his Child, is a little too coarſe to be believed, and ſo ſhould have been ſupported with more than ordinary Proofs.

Ibid. 81. He ſays, 'She came to the Crown, meerly by virtue of the Act 'of Parliament, without being Legitimated.

In this, ſhe and her Siſter were upon the ſame Level; for neither of them were declared Legitimate; ſo this was not to be objected to the one, more than to the other Siſter.

Pag. 249. 82. He ſays, 'Queen Mary being declared, by Act of Parliament, 'in the beginning of her Reign, Legitimate; and her Mothers Mar-'riage being declared good, Elizabeth was thereby of new Illegitima-'ted; yet ſhe never repealed the Laws againſt her Title: but kept 'the

'the Crown meerly upon the Authority of an Act of Parliament, with-'out having any regard to her Birth.

Queen Mary came to the Crown, being in the ſame Condition; and was either a lawful Queen before that Act was made, or elſe that Act was of no force, if it had not the Royal Aſſent given by a lawful Queen. So Queen Elizabeth was as much Queen before any ſuch Act could have paſſed, as afterwards: and therefore ſince it was not neceſſary for the ſecuring her Tittle, it was a ſign of her tenderneſs of her Father's Memory, to which Queen Mary had no regard, not to revive the remembrance of things that muſt have turned ſo much to his diſhonour, as that would have done.

83. He ſays, 'Queen Mary not being able to prevent her Siſters Pag. 250.
'Succeſſion, ſent a Meſſage to her on her Death-bed, deſiring her to 'pay her Debts, and to preſerve the Catholick Religion; both which 'ſhe promiſed, but performed neither.

This is ſaid without any Proof, and is not at all probable; but is an Ornament added to ſet off the one, and blemiſh the other. Queen Mary's Sickneſs was concealed as much as was poſſible. A week before her Death, they were burning Hereticks as buſily as ever; and by the managing Affairs in the Parliament, it appears there was great care taken to conceal the deſperate Condition ſhe was in: ſo it is not likely that any ſuch Meſſage was ſent by her to her Siſter.

And thus far have I traced our Author in the Hiſtory he gives of the Reigns of King Henry the Eighth, Edward the Sixth, and Queen Mary, and have diſcovered an equal meaſure of Ignorance and Malice in him: but he was the fitter to ſerve their Ends who employed him, and were reſolved to believe him, how falſe or improbable ſoever his Relation might be. We ſee what uſe they have made of him ever ſince that Time. His Friends were ſo ſenſible of the Advantage their Cauſe received from ſuch a way of Writing, that they reſolved to continue down the Hiſtory through Queen Elizabeth's Reign, in which, we are told, Sanders himſelf made ſome Progreſs; but that not being done to ſuch a perfection as Riſhton and others intended to bring it, they undertook it; and have written ſo skilfully after the Copy Sanders had given them, that if it is poſſible, they have out-done him in theſe two particular Excellencies of writing Hiſtories, in which he was ſo great a Maſter, Impudence, and Falſhood as to Matter of Fact. In one thing they had manifeſtly the better of him, that they writing of what fell out in their own Time, could not be ignorant of the truth of Things; whereas he writing of what was done before he was born, or when he was but a Child, might have ſaid many things more innocently, delivering them as he had them by report. But this Excuſe cannot fit them, who did knowingly, and on Deſign, prevaricate ſo groſly in Matters of Fact: A little taſte of theſe I ſhall give, only ſo far as I have carried down the Hiſtory of this Queen; for to examine all the Faults they have committed, would require a new Volume; but from the taſte I ſhall give the Reader, he will eaſily know what judgment to paſs on the whole work.

As for the Decency of the Style, the first Period gives an Essay of it, in which the Author promises such a Description of the Queen's Reign, that this Lioness shall be known by her Claws: And for his sincerity in writing, the whole Preface is one indication of it, in which he accuses the Queen for acting against the Laws of Nature and Religion, in assuming the Supremacy; and represents it so, that the Reader must needs think she was the High Priest of England, that ordained Bishops and Ministers, and performed all other Holy Offices: whereas she was so scrupulous in this Point, that as she would not be called the Supream Head of the Church, so she made it be declared, both in one of the Articles of Religion, set forth in the beginning of her Reign, and afterwards in an Act of Parliament, what was the nature of that Supremacy which she assumed; making it both a part of the Religion, and the Law of the Land. By these it was declared, that they gave her not the Ministry of God's Word, or of the Sacraments; but only that Prerogative which was given by God himself in the Scriptures, to Godly Princes; that they should rule all committed to their charge by God, whether they be Ecclesiastical or Temporal, and restrain with the Civil Sword, the stubborn and evil Doers. If Men were not past shame, they could not, after such an express and publick Declaration, put on the confidence of writing as this Author does. I shall follow him in some more steps, and doubt not but I shall convince the Reader, that he was the fittest Man that could be found, to have writ a Continuation of Sanders's History.

Pag. 255. 1. He says, 'Henry the Second of France, in a solemn Assembly, did, 'after Queen Mary's Death, declare the Queen of Scotland his Daughter-in-Law, Queen of England and Ireland.

This was neither done in a Solemn Assembly, nor presently after Queen Mary's Death; nor was it done by Henry the Second. The Queen of Scotland did, by her Uncle's Advice, assume that Title, without any publick Act: and it was not done till they understood that Philip was moving for a Dispensation in the Court of Rome, for marrying Queen Elizabeth; King Henry did only connive at it, but neither ordered it, nor justified it, when the Queen's Ambassador complained of it. An Author that is so happy in his first Period, as to make three such Mistakes, is likely to give us an excellent History.

Ibid. 2. He says, 'The Arch-bishop of York, and all the other Bishops, 'one only excepted, refused to anoint her.

This was one of the most extraordinary things that ever was in any Government; that the Bishops refusing to crown the Queen, were not only not punished for it, but continued to hold their Bishopricks still: and the Arch-bishop of York was continued a Privy Counsellor many months after this. This is none of the Claws of the Lioness, but rather a slackness and easiness of Clemency, that deserves censure, if it had not been that the Queen resolved to begin her Reign, with the most signal Acts of Mercy that were possible.

Pag. 256. 3. He says, 'Cecil and his Friend Bacon, raised vast Estates to them-'selves, and involved the Government into vast Difficulties, and 'brought the Queen's Revenue into great, or rather inextricable 'Confuſion.

This may paſs among Foreigners, and perhaps be believed; but we at home, that when we wiſh for happy Times, and excellent Counſellors, do naturally reflect on the Days of that glorious Queen, and her wiſe Councils, will not be much wrought on by it. The Revenue was never better managed, the Undertakings of the Government were never greater, and the Charge was never leſs. This gives a Character of thoſe Miniſters beyond all exception. Sir Nicholas Bacon never raiſed himſelf above that Quality which he brought with him into the Court. And Cecil was not advanced above the loweſt Rank of Nobility, tho he was in the chief Miniſtry above thirty Years; and tho they both left good Eſtates behind them, yet far ſhort of what might have been expected after ſo long a courſe in ſuch great and high Employments.

4. He ſays, 'There was an Oath enacted in the Parliament for the 'Queen's Supremacy; and thoſe who refuſed to ſwear it, for the firſt 'Offence were to forfeit their Benefices, and all their Goods, and to be 'Priſoners for Life; the ſecond Offence was made Treaſon. Pag. 257.

Such a falſe recital of a printed Act, deſerves a ſeverer Animadverſion than I ſhall beſtow on it. The refuſing that Oath, did infer no other puniſhment, but the forfeiture of Benefices and Offices; and the Parties ſo refuſing, were ſubjected to no other Danger, nor was the Oath to be put to them a ſecond Time. It is true, if any did aſſert the Authority of any Foreign Potentate, that was more penal: Yet that was not as our Author repreſents it; for the firſt Offence there, was a forfeiture of ones Goods; or in caſe of Poverty, one Years Impriſonment: the ſecond Offence brought the Offender within a Premunire: and the third was Treaſon.

5. He ſays, 'The Change that was made, of the Title of Supream 'Head, into that of Supream Governor, deceived many; yet others 'thought that the Queen might have thereby aſſumed an Authority for 'Adminiſtring the Sacraments; but to clear all Scruples, ſhe in the firſt 'Viſitation ordered it to be thus explained, that ſhe thereby pretended 'to no more Power than what her Father and Brother had exerciſed. Pag. 258.

In the firſt Viſitation ordered by the Queen, there was an Injunction given Explanatory to the Oath of Supremacy; declaring that ſhe did not pretend to any Authority for the Miniſtry of Divine Service in the Church, and challenged nothing, but what had at all times belonged to the Crown of England; which was a Soveraignty over all manner of Perſons under God: ſo that no Foreign Power had any Rule over them; and ſo was willing to acquit ſuch as took it in that ſenſe, of all the Penalties in the Act. So that it is plain ſhe aſſumed nothing but the Royal Authority, and was ready to accept of ſuch Explications as might clear all Ambiguities.

6. 'He reckons, among the Laws that were made, this for one, that 'Biſhops ſhould hold their Sees only during the Queen's Pleaſure, and 'exerciſe no other Authority, but only as they derived it from her. Pag. 259.

The

The Laws he reckons, were those made by King Henry now revived; but this Law is falsly recited in both the parts of it: for the Bishops were to hold their Sees, as all others do their Free-holds, without any dependence on the Queen's Pleasure; and were to exercise their Jurisdiction in their own Names, and according to the Ecclesiastical Laws, and were not forced to take Commissions to hold their Bishopricks during the Queen's Pleasure, as had been done both in King Henry and King Edward's Time.

Pag. 263. 7. 'After a long discourse against the Queen's Supremacy, he says, 'The Laws concerning it, and other Points of Religion, did pass with 'great difficulty in the House of Lords, all the Bishops opposing them, 'and those Noblemen in particular, who had gone to Rome upon the 'Embassy Queen Mary sent thither, did very earnestly dissuade it.

It is true, all the Bishops did oppose them, tho both Tonstal, Heath, Thirleby, and some others had consented to, and written for King Henry's Supremacy; which was (at least as to the manner of expressing it) of a higher strain than that to which the Queen did now pretend. They had also submitted to all the Changes that had been made in King Edward's Time. For the Temporal Lords, none dissented from the Act of Supremacy, but the Earl of Shrewsbury, and the Viscount Montacute, so the opposition was small, where so few entred their Dissents; and of these, only the Viscount Montacute had been at Rome, sent thither by Queen Mary. It is true, the Marques of Winchester, and the Lords, Morley, Stafford, Dudley, Wharton, Rich, and North, dissented from the Bill for the Book of Common-Prayer, and some other Acts that related to the Reformation; but these being but few in number, were far short of those that were for them: and it is clear, the Queen left the Peers wholly to their freedom, since the Marques of Winchester, notwithstanding his Dissent, continued to hold that great Office of Lord Treasurer, in which he had been put in King Edward's Time, and which he had kept all Queen Mary's Reign, till his Death, fourteen Years after this; this may perhaps be justly censured, as looking too like a remissness in the Matters of Religion, when he that dissented to the Reformation, was yet so long employed in the greatest Trust in the Kingdom; but certainly this is none of the Claws to know the Lioness by.

Ibid. 8. He says, 'The Queen gave the Earl of Arundel some hopes that 'she would marry him, and so perswaded him to consent to the Laws 'now made; but afterwards slighted him, and declared, she would live 'and die a Virgin.

The Journals of Parliament shew how false this is; for the Address was made to the Queen, persuading her to marry; to which she made the Answer set down by our Author, on the 6th of February, and the Act of Supremacy, with the other Acts concerning Religion, passed in April thereafter: so that the Queen, after so publick a Declaration of her unwillingness to marry, could not have deluded the Earl of Arundel with the hopes of it.

Ibid. 9. He says, 'She wrought on the D. of Norfolk, by promising him 'a Dispensation in the Business of his Marriage, which he could not ob-'tain of the Pope.

It

It is not like the Duke of Norfolk was denied any ſuch Diſpenſation from Rome, nor are there any Diſpenſations granted in England for marrying in the forbidden Degrees: Couſin Germans are the neareſt that may marry. The obtaining a Licenſe for that at Rome, is a matter of courſe, ſo the Fees are but paid; and the Law allows that to all in England. Nor are there any Diſpenſations in Matrimonial Matters, except concerning the Time, the Place, or the asking of Banes; and it is not likely theſe were ever denied to any at Rome. As for his long Excurſion concerning that Duke's Death, it not falling within the compaſs of my Hiſtory, I ſhall not follow him in it.

10. He ſays, 'The Proteſtants deſired a publick Diſputation: ſo the 'Queen commanded the Biſhops to make ready for it; they refuſed it a 'great while, ſince that ſeemed to make the Faith of the Church ſubject 'to the judgment of the ignorant Laity; but at laſt they were forced 'to yield to it; and the Points were, Communion in both kinds, 'Prayer in a known Tongue, and the like. Pag. 266.

The Act of Council has it otherwiſe: By it we ſee that the Arch-Biſhop of York, being then a Privy Councellor, did heartily agree to it, and undertook that the reſt of his Brethren ſhould follow the Orders that were made by the Council concerning it; tho it is not to be denied, but ſome of the Biſhops were ſecretly diſſatisfied with it: as they had good reaſon; ſince a publick Diſputation was like to lay open the weakneſs of their Cauſe, which was never ſo ſafe, as when it was received in groſs, without deſcending to troubleſome Enquiries concerning it. The Communion in both kinds was not one of the Articles.

11. He ſays, 'Bacon a Lay-man was Judg, the Arch-biſhop of York 'ſitting next to him, only for forms-ſake. Ibid.

Bacon was not Judg; the whole Privy-Council were preſent to order the Forms of the Debate; and he, as the firſt of that Board, did only give directions, according to the order that had been formerly agreed on.

12. He ſays, 'On the 3*d* of April they diſputed, but there was no- 'thing done with Order or Juſtice, the time was ſpent in Declamations, 'while the profane Judg directed all things at his pleaſure, ſo that it 'came to nothing. Ibid.

It is true, the Order was broken: But it had been unkindly done of our Author to tell by whom. The Papiſts refuſed the firſt day to give their Reaſons in writing, as had been agreed on before; and as was accordingly done by the Reformed; and upon the ſecond day they refuſed to proceed, unleſs, contrary to what had been concluded, the Reformed ſhould read their Papers firſt: So the Diſputation broke up, it appearing evidently, that the one ſide were not afraid of a publick Hearing, but that the other were.

The CONCLUSION.

I Purſue theſe Calumnies no further, becauſe I cannot offer a Confutation of them, without a larger digreſſion: ſince I break off my Hiſtory in the ſecond Year of this Reign; ſo that I cannot refer the Reader to thoſe more copious Accounts given by me, as I have done in the former Remarques; where a ſhort hint was ſufficient. And I do not judg it worth the while, to enter into ſuch a full ſearch of theſe Matters, as a Confutation would require, only to expoſe Riſhton. Theſe Evidences which I have given of his Ignorance and Injuſtice, will ſatisfy impartial Readers; and I am out of hopes of convincing thoſe that are ſo wedded to an Intereſt, that they are reſolved to believe all that is ſaid of their ſide, how improbable ſoever it may appear, or how ſlenderly ſoever it may be proved.

And now I hope, the Reformation of this Church appears in its true Colours, and the Calumnies by which its Adverſaries have endeavoured ſo long to diſgrace it, are ſo evidently confuted, that they will be no more ſupported by their own ſide, nor ſo tamely aſſented to, by any that in their Hearts may perhaps love the Reformation, and yet are too eaſily prevailed on to drink in the Prejudices that are raiſed by the confidence with which thoſe Slanders have been vented. Now the Matter is better underſtood, and tho at this diſtance, and after the raſure of Records made in Queen Mary's Reign, it muſt be acknowledged that there are many things, either quite paſt over, or ſo defectively related by me, that this Work wants that perfection which were to be deſired. Yet notwithſtanding all theſe diſadvantages, beſides the faults of Style, Method, or way of Expreſſion, which may be more juſtly put to my account, tho having done it in the beſt manner I could, I have little to anſwer for, but the preſumption of undertaking a Deſign too high for me to perform with that Life and Perfection that ſuch a Subject required; and even in that, I rather ſubmitted to the Authority of others, who engaged me in it, than vainly fancied my ſelf able to accompliſh it; but after all thoſe Allowances that are neceſſary, of which there can none be more ſenſible than my ſelf, I am not out of hope but this Work may have ſome good effect, on ſuch as ſhall read it impartially and with candor; and that thoſe who are already of our Church, ſhall be induced to like it the better, when they ſee what the beginnings of our Reformation were: and thoſe who are not of our Communion, may the more eaſily be brought into it, when they ſee by what Steps, and upon what Reaſons the Changes were made: and if this Succeſs follows my poor Endeavours, I ſhall think my Time and Pains have been well employed.

I am apprehenſive enough of the Faults I may be guilty of, but I ſhall now give the Reader ſuch an aſſurance of my readineſs to correct them, as ſoon as I am convinced of them, that I hope, if any thing occurs to any that deſerves cenſure, they will communicate it firſt to my ſelf; and if I do not, upon better information, retract what I have written, then I ſhall allow them to make it publick in what manner they pleaſe. And it may be preſumed I will not be for the future unwilling to do this, by the following account of the Miſtakes which I made in the former Part, communicated to me by Mr. Fulman, of whom I made mention in the Preface. With theſe I conclude this Work.

Some

Some Miſtakes in the firſt Part of this Hiſtory, communicated to me by Mr William Fulman, Rector of Hampton Meyſey in Gloceſterſhire.

LOrd Almoner] It is queſtionable whether the Almoner was then called Lord, and more queſtionable whether Wolſey were then Almoner, when he was thus recommended to the King's Favour; for Polidore Virgil who lived in England at that time, or very near it, ſays he was Chaplain to King Henry the 7th, and now made Almoner to King Henry the 8th, being before that time Dean of Lincoln, made ſo 2 Feb. 1508. inſtalled by Proxy, 25 March 1509. and perſonally 21 Auguſt 1511. and ſo only he is ſtiled in the Univerſity Regiſter, 12 April 1510. when he was made Batchelor of Divinity. P.7. l.10. from bottom.

Theſe Numbers ſeem queſtionable, the Temporalities of Lincoln are ſaid to be reſtored, 4 March, 5 Regni, i.e. 151$\frac{3}{4}$; but then it was done before his Conſecration, which Godwin ſays, was the 26th of March that Year. But this might be to give him a right to the mean Profits, by reſtoring the Temporalities before Lady-day, though he was not conſecrated till the 26th. Before November, there ſhould be (6) added, for on that day was he tranſlated to York. And whereas it is ſaid he had the Biſhoprick of Wincheſter, May 4. 20 Regni, i.e. 1528. this muſt be a miſtake, for Fox's Regiſter reaches to the 9th of Septemb. that Year; ſo perhaps it was 4 March, 20 Regni, i.e. in March 152$\frac{8}{9}$. 'But I took all theſe Dates 'from the Rolls; and I muſt add one thing, that I have often ſeen cauſe 'to queſtion the exactneſs of the Clerks in the enroling of Dates, though 'it ſeems a preſumption to queſtion the Authority of a Record. P.8. Marg.

Here, and in ſeveral other places, as pag. 35, 36, 134, 208, 321, it is ſuppoſed, That the next Heir apparent of the Crown was Prince of Wales. The Heir apparent of the Crown is indeed Prince, but is not Prince of Wales, ſtrictly ſpeaking, unleſs he has it given him by a Creation. And it is ſaid, That there is nothing on Record to prove that any of King Henry's Children were ever created Prince of Wales. There are indeed ſome hints of the Lady Mary's being ſtiled Princeſs of Wales; for when a Family was appointed for her, 1525. Veyſey Biſhop of Exeter, her Tutor, was made Preſident of Wales. She alſo is ſaid to have kept her Houſe at Ludlow; and Leland ſays, That Teken-hill, an Houſe in thoſe Parts built for Prince Author, was repaired for her. And Tho. Linacre dedicates his Rudiments of Grammar to her, by the Title of Princeſs of Cornwal and Wales. P.10. l.16. from bottom.

Beſides the Letter of Pope Leo's declaring K. Henry Defender of the Faith, there was a more pompous one ſent over by P. Clement the 7th, March 5. 152$\frac{3}{4}$, which, as is ſuppoſed, granted that Title to his Succeſſors, whereas the firſt Grant ſeems to have been only Perſonal. P.19. l.26.

P. 22. l. 2. No wonder there was no Seal to that Grant of King Edgars, for Seals were little uſed in England before the Conqueſt.

Ibid. l. 10. The Monks were not then ſetled in half the Cathedrals in England, their chief Seats were in the Rich Abbeys, that were ſcarce ſubject to the Biſhops.

Ibid. Marg. April 1524, was not the 14*th* Year of the King's Reign, as it is put on the Margent, but the 15*th*.

P. 44. l. 5. from bottom. The Lord Piercy was in the Cardinal's Family, rather in a way of Education (not unuſual in thoſe Times) than of Service.

P. 47. l. 12. from bottom. The General of the Obſervants in Spain, ſeems an improper expreſſion; for the Generals have the government of the whole Order everywhere; yet I find him ſo called in ſome Originals, ſee Coll. pag. 22, 23. 'whether it was doue improperly, or whether that Order was then on-'ly in Spain, I cannot determine.

P. 56. l. 19. How far the Cardinal had carried the Foundation at Ipſwich, it is not known; but it is certain he did never finiſh what he had deſigned at Oxford. 'But in this I went according to the Letters Patents, by which 'it appears he had then done his part, and had ſet off both Lands and 'Mony for theſe Foundations.

P. 69. l. 16. from bottom. Campegio's Son is by Hall, none of his Flatterers, ſaid to have been born in Wedlock, i. e. before he took Orders. This is alſo confirmed by Gauricus Genitur. 24. who ſays, he had by his Wife three Sons and two Daughters.

P. 77. l. 18. Campegio might take upon him to direct the Proceſs, as being ſent Expreſs from Rome, or to avoid the imputation that might have been caſt on the Proceedings, if Wolſey had done it, but he was not the ancienter Cardinal, for Wolſey was made alone, Sept. 7. 1515. and Campegio, with many more, was advanced, July 1. 1517.

P. 81. l. 32. The Lord Herbert ſays, the King gave him only the uſe of Richmond, which is more probable.

P. 82. l. 6. The Cardinal died Novemb. 29. as moſt Writers agree; ſo it is wrong ſet in the Hiſtory the 28, and in the Picture 26 for 29.

P. 85. l. 21. This Book is in the end of it, ſaid to be printed 1530, in April; but it ſeems an Error, for 1531: for the Cenſures of the Univerſities, which are printed in, and mentioned in ſeveral places of it, do all bear date after that April, except thoſe made by theſe of Oxford and Orleans.

from bottom, p. 86. What is ſaid concerning the Author of the Antiquities of Oxford, has been much complained of by him. 'I find he has Authorities for what 'he ſaid, but they are from Authors whoſe Manuſcripts he peruſed, who 'are of no better Credit than Sanders himſelf, ſuch as Harpsfield, and 'others of the like Credit. And I am ſatisfied, that he had no other De'sign in what he writ, but to set down things as he found them in the 'Authors whom he made use of.

'ſign

Calvin's Epistle seems not to belong to this Case, for besides that, he was then but 21, and tho he was a Doctor of the Law, and had often preached before he was 24, for then he set out Seneca de Clementia, with Notes on it; Yet this was too soon to think he could have been consulted in so great a Case. That Epistle seems to relate to a Prince who was desirous of such a Marriage, and not of dissolving it; though it is indeed strange, that in treating of that Question, he should make no mention of so famous a Case as that of King Henry, which had made so much noise in the World. p. 92.

The Letter dated the 8*th* of Decemb. should have been mentioned immediately after that of the 5*th*, being but three days after it, and the Appeal that followed should have been set down after it. It were also fit to publish the Appeal it self, for the power of Appealing was a Point much controverted. Pope Pius the 2*d* condemned it 1549; yet it was used by the Venetians 1509, and by the University of Paris, March 27. 1517. P. 110. l. 22.

Pool, as Dean of Exeter, is said to have been one of the Lower House of Convocation; which doth not agree with the Conjecture, p. 129. that the Deans at that time sat in the Upper House of Convocation. P. 113. l. 4.

These sent by the King to Rome, came thither in February, not in March; and the Articles they put in were 27, not 28, as it is there said. These, with other small Circumstances, appear from a Book then printed of these Disputes. P. 120. l. 8.

If Cranmer was present at Ann Boleyn's Marriage, which was certainly in Novemb. Warham having died in August before, he could not have delayed his coming to England six months. Antiq. Brit. says, he followed the Emperor to Spain; but Selden says, that the Emperor went no further than Mantua this Year, and sailed to Spain in March following; and Cranmer could not go then with him, for he was consecrated not on the 13*th* of March, (which is an Error) but on the 30*th* of March. P. 126. l. 11.

The order in which these Books were published, is not observed, they were thus printed. P. 137. l. 10.

1. De vera differentia Regiæ Potestatis & Ecclesiasticæ, (written by Edw. Fox Bishop of Hereford) 1534.

2. De vera Obedientia, (by Stephen Gardiner) 1535. set out with Bonner's Preface before it, in Jan. 1536.

3. The Institution of a Christian Man, 1537. which was afterwards reduced into another Form, under another Title, viz. A Necessary Doctrine, and Erudition for any Christian Man, 1540. But there was another written before all these.

De potestate Christianorum Regum in suis Ecclesiis contra Pontificis Tyrannidem; and the distinction there made between the Bishop's Book, and and the King's Book ſeems not well applied. It is more probable that the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Man, ſet out by the Biſhops, was called their Book; and that being afterwards put in another Method, and ſet out by the King's Authority, it was called his Book.

P.150. l.19. Bocking is called a Canon of Chriſts-Church in Canterbury. But there were then no Canons in that Church, they were all Monks.

P.158. l.6. The Biſhops Suffragans were before common in England, ſome Abbots, or rich Clergy-Men, procuring under Forreign, or perhaps feigned Titles, that Dignity; and ſo performing ſome parts of the Epiſcopal Function, in large or neglected Dioceſſes; ſo the Abbot or Prior of Tame was one, Gol. p. 148. Such was Robert King Abbot of Oſeney, after Biſhop of Oxford; and Thom. Corniſh a Reſidentiary of Wells, who by the name of Thomas Epiſcopus Tinenſis, did confer Orders, and performed other Epiſcopal Functions for Fox while he was Biſhop of Exeter, from 1487, to 1492. and afterwards, when he was Biſhop of Wells, as appears by both thoſe Regiſters: He died in the Year 1513. Of this I could give more Inſtances if it were neceſſary.

P.202.l.5,6. It is ſaid, ſome were judged to be Hanged, and others to be Beheaded. But this being a Caſe of Treaſon, the Judgments muſt have been the ſame, tho executed in different ways, by order from the King. 'This 'I copied from Judg Spelman's Common-Place Book.

P.203. l.21. The Original Declaration ſhould have been ſet down, 'but I thought 'that not neceſſary, for the L. Herbert has publiſhed it, only he forgot 'to add the Subſcription to it, which I ought to have mentioned in its 'proper place, but it eſcaped me, and therefore I do it here.

P.206. l.24. Andre' Thevet, a French Franciſcan, who writ ſome Years after this an Univerſal Coſmography, ſays, Lib. 16. cap. 5. That he was aſſured, by divers Engliſh Gentlemen, that King Henry at his Death, among his other Sins, repented in particular of the wrong he had done the Queen, in deſtroying her by a falſe Accuſation. And tho Thuanus makes him an Author of no Credit, yet there is no reaſon to ſuſpect him in this Particular, for Writers ſeldom lye againſt their Intereſt; and the Franciſcan Order had ſuffered ſo much for their adhering to Queen Katherine's Intereſts, in oppoſition to Ann Boleyn, that it is not likely one of that Order would have ſtrained a Point to tell an honourable Story of her. This was made uſe of in Queen Elizabeth's Time, to vindicate her Memory; ſee Saravia Tract. cont. Bezam. cap. 2. verſus finem.

P.220.l.4,5. The King's Proteſtation was not publiſhed till about eight or nine months after that was obtained, which you there mention, which was the 20*th* of July, 1536. And in the Proteſtation, mention is made of the putting off the Council from May to Novemb. 1537. which came out in April or May that Year. And in April 1538. the King ſet out another Proteſtation againſt a Bull for the Council at Vincenza, which is not mentioned in the Hiſtory.

Pool

Pool lived at Padua long before this time, and not after it, (as Antiq. Brit. from whom it is vouched has it) but that Society of Learned Men was now removed to Rome, whither Pool ſeems to have gone to them. P.221. l.10.

No wonder Cheſter was not here mentioned, ſince it was erected before. And ſo it might well be, tho the Charter for the preſent Foundation bears date after; for the former might be ſurrendred and cancelled, probably becauſe of ſome mention made in it of the Pope's Bull, of which you ſpeak p. 121. P.263. l.7.

Fox adds another Paſſage of that Diſcourſe between Cromwel and the Duke of Norfolk, which perhaps offended him much; that he was never ſo far in love with Wolſey, as to have waited on him to Rome, as he underſtood the Duke of Norfolk would have done. P.265. l.17. from bottom.

Coventry and Litchfield were never two different Biſhopricks, but two different Seats of the ſame See, which had ſometimes a third at Cheſter. P.228. l.23.

This was no deſigned interview; but Charles hearing of the Tumult at Ghent, went from Spain to Flanders, through France, as his neareſt way, and was met by Francis at Loches in Berry, and not at Paris. P. 272. l.1.

Cromwel was then Dean of Wells, and that was the reaſon of the Proviſo. P.279. l.20.

Hall and L. Herbert ſay, This was on the 25*th*, which you put on the 24*th* of June. P.280. l.5.

He in that place belongs to the King named before; ſo it ſhould have been expreſſed, that it is Bonner that is here meant. P. 297. from bottom.

It was not neceſſary to reſtore the Lord Cromwel in Blood, for he was made a Baron, when his Father was made an Earl, ſo that his Blood was not corrupted by his Fathers Attaindor. P.312. l.12.

Interludes were not then brought in firſt to Churches, but had been uſed in the Times of Popery, the greateſt part of their Religion being placed in outward Shews, ſo that theſe did well enough agree with it; and ſuch Repreſentations are yet in uſe ſometimes in the Roman Church, ſo that, by which they had formerly entertained the People, was now turned on themſelves. P.318. l.8.

Fox ſets down a Confeſſion of Anne Askews, (perhaps Aſcough was her right Name, for ſo is the Name of the Family in Lincolnſhire written) in which ſhe her ſelf relates this Paſſage of the Lord Chancellors racking her with his own hands; ſo there is no reaſon to queſtion the truth of it; and Parſons, who detracts as much from Fox's Credit as he can, does not queſtion this particular. P.342. l.1.

The

P.344. l.10. The Story concerning Cranmer, muſt belong to the former Year, for Butts that bore a ſhare in it, died on the 17*th* of Novemb. 1545. as appears by the Inſcription on his Tomb-ſtone in Fulham-Church: So this Paſſage being after the Duke of Suffolk's Death, which was in Auguſt that Year; this muſt be placed between Auguſt and Novemb. 1545.

P. 346. l. 6. The Earl of Surrey had not lived long a Widower, for his youngeſt Son, afterwards Earl of Northampton, is ſaid to have been at nurſe at his Father's Death.

P.355. l. 17. from bottom. The Year of Sir Tho. More's Birth is not certain; by Eraſmus his Reckoning, it was in the Year 1479, if not higher; others ſay it was 1480; and other 1484.

P.359. l.30. William Peyto: Thuanus calls him William, and ſays, he was Loci Ignobilis; but his true Name, by which he was made Cardinal, was Peter; whether he was ſo Chriſtened, or aſſumed it only when he became a Friar, is not certain. He was deſcended from an Ancient and Eminent Family in Warwick-ſhire, yet remaining.

P.204. l.14. from bottom. And not many of theſe. Here ſeems to be a word or more wanting; 'It is wanting in the Original, but it ſhould have been ſupplied by a 'conjecture on the Margent; Armed ſeems to be the word that agrees 'beſt to the ſenſe.
